

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

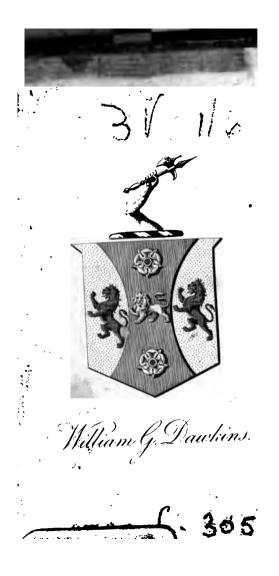

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at http://books.google.com/

These those wohimes nor ated to the Boblesin Cats by Edward J. Dodgeon, M a Monday, December 7, 1; ×^

PARADISE LOST.

1

۸

POEM.

WITH THE

LIFE OF THE AUTHOR AND NOTES

BY

BISHOP NEWTON AND OTHERS.

· .

VOL. I.

, ,

Parales Annesley 114. PARADISE LOST.

PARADISE LOST. Henry Fan Rain Molonal

POEM, IN TWELVE BOOKS

THE AUTHOR

JOHN MILTON.

PRINTED FROM THE TEXT OF TONSON'S CORRECT EDITION OF 1711.

A NEW EDITION,

WITH

NOTES AND THE LIFE OF THE AUTHOR,

IN THREE VOLUMES,

BY THOMAS NEWTON, D. D.

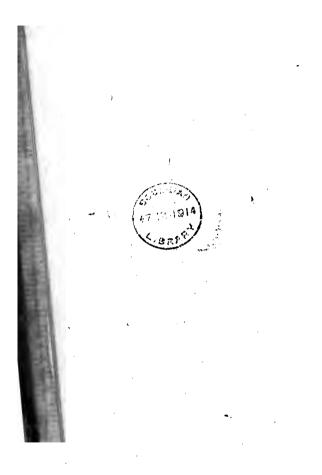

LATE LORD BISHOP OF BRISTOL, AND OTHERS.

VOL. I.

LONDON:

PRINTED FOR THE PROPRIETORS.

1795-

TO THE

POCKET EDITION,

WITH THE NOTES OF VARIOUS AUTHORS.

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST is an honour not only to his country but to human nature. Were it possible for this divine Poem to be brought under the contemplation of Angels, they would recognize the powers of some kindred being. The design of this poem, and the various subjects treated, or touched on, in its execution, are the grandest and most interesting that it is possible for man, even with the aid of divine revelation, to / imagine or conceive. Time and Eternity,

FREFACE.

Heaven and Hell, Chaos and Creation, Wa between the Omnipotent and the most ex alted Orders of his Creatures, the Fall o Angels and of Man, the wonderful maze o a wise and beneficent Providence educin Good out of Evil, and restoring the triump and the reign of Order, Virtue, and Hap piness, over Confusion, Vice, and Miserythese are the themes of our great Epic Poet —these, that fill and expand the soul, tran quilize it into a contemplative mood, an prepare, as it were, the soil of thought fc receiving, in the strains of sublime poetry the sacred influence of Heaven.

It is not our design to show the interest of his fable, the justness of his characters, the sublimity and pathos of his sentiments, the vigour and the variety of his language, be a critical discussion. Where excellence is a conspicuous as that of MILTON, every e beholds it, every heart feels it, without instruction of the Critic : the Poet himself is our best Guide. With him, rather than with the best of his Commentators, we delight to ascend to the gates of Heaven, and the very Throne of God, and there to learn the destiny of Man. Led by him, we explore with terror and amazement the depths of Hell, or repose in the gardens of Paradise, listening to the conversation of two persons the most adapted, in the whole range of poetic fancy, to soothe, to interest, to charm and transport the soul.

:.

A

" Adam the goodliest of men since born

"His sons; the fairest of her daughters Eve"the progenitors of the whole human race.

While the elegant mediocrity of modern poetry is passing daily into the shades of oblivion, MILTON, who has not only harmony to please the ear, but power to alarm, and grace to soften the heart, keeps his groun and even rises in reputation, Were it possible to add any thing on this subject, we might observe that the transcendent excellence of MILTON'S PARADISE LOST has lately been conspicuously displayed in the light of contrast with the CALVARY of CUMBER-LAND.

But, though it were superfluous to expatiate on the judgment and the powers of MILTON as a Poet, it is by no means unnecessary, in very many instances, to explain to common, and even to some who cannot be accounted unlearned Readers, the recondite ideas of the Philosopher, and the allusions of the most learned of his age.

In the present Edition, as to what regards the Poem, the aim of the Editor has been to observe a proper medium between the reagreness of some Annotators and the exsive profusion of NEWTON, who has certainly overloaded his Publication with a number of remarks unnecessary, trite, and frivolous.

viii

PREFRCE.

For the external part, elegance and uniformity have been consulted in the mode of disposing the notes, and the convenience of the Reader, who may wish to take a walk amidst the fit haunts of the Muses, with MILTON in his pocket, in the size of these volumes.

С. М.

July 30th, 1795.

| ·

PREFACÉ.

TO publish new and correct editions of the works of approved authors has ever been esteemed a service to learning, and an employment worthy of men of learn-It is not material whether the author is ancient ing. or modern. Good criticism is the same in all languages. Nay I know not whether there is not greater merit in cultivating our own language than any other. And certainly next to a good writer, a good critic holds the second rank in the republic of letters. And if the pious and learned Bishop of Thessalonica has gained immortal honour by his notes upon Homer, it can be no discredit to a graver Divine than myself to comment upon such a divine poem as the Paradise Lost, especialiy after some great men, who have gone before me in this exercise, and whose example is sanction sufficient.

My design in the present edition is to publish the Paradise Lost, as the work of a classic author cum notis variorum. In order to this end, the first care has been to print the text correctly according to Milton's own editions. And herein the editors of Milton have a conuderable advantage over the editors of Shakespear. For the first editions of Shakespear's works being printed from the incorrect copies of the players, there is mo-VOL. I.

room left for conjectures and, emendations; and as according to the old proverb,

Bene qui conjiciet vatem hunc perhibebo optimum, the best guesser was the best diviner, so he may be said in some measure too to be the best editor of Shakespear. as Mr. Warburton hath proved himself by variety of conjectures, and many of them very happy ones, upon the most difficult passages. But we who undertake to publish Milton's Paradise Lost are not reduced to that uncertainty; we are not left floating in the wide ocean of conjecture, but have a chart and compass to steer by; we have an authentic copy to follow in the two editions printed in his own life-time, and have only to correct what may be supposed to be the errors of the press, or mistakes occasioned by the author's blindness. These two editions then, the first in ten books printed in a small quarto, and the second in twelve books printed in a small octavo, are proposed as our standard: the variations in each are noted; and we never deviate from them both without assigning, as we think, a substantial reason for it. Some alterations indeed are necessary to be made in consequence of the late improvements in printing, with regard to the use of capital letters, Italic characters, and the spelling of some words : but to Milton's own spelling (for we must distinguish between his and that of his times) we pay all proper regard, and commonly note where it is right, and where it is wrong; and follow it or not accordingly. His pointing too we generally observe, because it is generally right; such was the care that Milton himself took in having the proof-sheets read to him, or his friends took for him : and changes of consequence we make none without signifying the reasons. In lesser instances there is no occation to be particular. In a word, we approve of the two first editions in the main, though we cannot think that they ought to be followed (as some have advised) letter for letter, and point for point. We desire to transcribe all their excellences, but have no notion of perpetuating their faults and errors.

.

When the text was settled, the notes came next under consideration. P. H or Patrick Hume, as he was the first, so he is the most copious annotator. He laid the foundation, but he laid it among infinite heaps of rubbish. The greater part of his work is a dull dictionary of the most common words, a tedious fardel of the most trivial observations, explaining what requires no explanation: but take away what is superfluous, and there will still remain a great deal that is useful; there is gold among his dross, and I have been careful to separate the one from the other.

It was recommended to me indeed to print entire Mr. Addison's Spectators upon the Paradise Lost, as ingenious essays which had contributed greatly to the reputation of the poem, and having been added to several editions they could not well be omitted in this edition : and accordingly those papers, which treat of the poem in general, are prefixed in the nature of a preliminary bicourse; and those, which are written upon each book eparately, are inserted under each book, and interwoven in their proper places.

ΛΩ

Dr. Bentley's is a great name in criticism, but he has not acquired any additional honour by his new edition of the Paradise Lost. Nay some have been so far prejudiced as to think, that he could not be a good critic in any language, who had shown himself so injudicious an one in his own mother-tongue But prejudice apart, he was a very great man, of parts inferior to few, of learning superior to most men; and he has made some very judicious and useful remarks upon the Paradise Lost, though in the general they may rather be called the dotages of Dr. Bentley. He was more sagacious in finding faults, than happy in mending them; and if he ha confined himself only to the former, he might have he better success; for when he attempted the latter, a substituted verses of his own in the room of Miltor he commonly made most miserable bungling work, be no poet himself, and having little or no taste of poe

Dr. Pearce, Lord Bishop of Rochester, has dis guished his tasse and judgment in choosing always best authors for the subjects of his criticism, as C and Longinus among the Ancients, and Milton a the Moderns. His Review of the Text of the P Lost is not only a most complete answer to Dr. B but may serve as a pattern to all future critics, o learning and just reasoning, joined with the candour and gentleness of manners. The whol well worthy of the perusal of every lovet and of Milton; but such parts only are ingrafu work as are more immediately proper for our design, and explain some difficulty, or illustrate some beauty of our author. His Lordship, together with my Lord Bath, first engaged me in this undertaking, and he has kindly assisted me in it from the beginning to the end; and I cannot but entertain the better hopes of the public approbation, as these sheets, long before they went to the press, were perused and corrected by his Lordship.

Of Mr. Richardson's notes it must be said that there are strange inequalities in them, some extravagances, and many excellences; there is often better sense than grammar or English; and he sometimes hits the true meaning of the author surprisingly, and explains it properly. He had good natural parts but without erudition or learning, in which he was assisted by his son, who is a man of taste and literature, as well as of the greatest benevolence and good nature.

Mr. Warburton likewise has published some remarks upon the Paradise Lost, occasioned chiefly by Dr. Bentley's edition. They were printed some years ago in the History of the Works of the Learned, and he allowed me the free use of them : but upon looking into that work, to my regret I found that his remarks were continued no farther than the three first books, and what is become of his other papers, and how they were mislaid and lost, neither he nor I can apprehend; but the excellence of those which remain sufficiently evinces the great loss that we have sustained in the others, which Genot now be recovered. He has done me the honou-

too of recommending this edition to the public preface to his Shakespear, but nothing could he commended it more effectually than if it hac adorned by some more of his notes and observation

ŗ,

There is a pamphlet intitled An Essay upon N Imitations of the Ancients, said to be written by tleman of North Britain: and there is another : Lettters concerning Poetical Translations, and ' and Milton's Arts of Verse, commonly ascribed Auditor Penson: and of both these I have maduse, as I have likewise of the learned Mr. I Critical Observations on Shakespear, wherein occasionally in terspersed some remarks upon N and in short, like the bee, I have been studious thering sweets wherever I could find them growi

But besides the flower of those which have be ready published, here are several new observati fered to the world, both of others and my owr Heylin lent me the use of his manuscript remarmuch the greater part of them had been rifled be Dr. Bentley. It seems Dr. Heylin had once an tion of publishing a new edition of the Paradis and mentioned his design to Dr. Bentley: I Bentley declaring at the same time his resolution ( it, Dr. Heylin modestly desisted, and freely cocated what observations he had made to Dr. I And what does Dr. Bentley do? Why, he borrbest and most plausible of his notes from Dr. publishes them as his own, and never has the g to make any acknowledgment, or so much as any mention of his benefactor.

I am obliged too to Mr. Jortin for some remarks which he conveyed to me by the hands of Dr. Pearce. They are chiefly upon Milton's Imitations of the Ancients; but every thing that proceeds from him is of value, whether in poetry, criticism, or divinity, as appears from his Lusus Poetici, his Miscellaneous Obtervations upon Authors, and his Discourses concerning the Truth of the Christian Religion.

Besides those aleady mentioned, Mr. Warburton has favoured me with a few other notes in manuscript; I wish there had been more of them for the sake of the eader, for the loose hints of such writers, like the slight sketches of great masters in painting, are worth more than the laboured pieces of others. And he very kindly lent me Mr. Pope's Milton of Bentley's edition, in which Mr. Pope had all along with his own hand set some mark of approbation, reftè, benè, pulchrè, &c. in the margin over against such emendations of the Doftor's, as seemed to him just and reasonable. It was a satisfaction to see what so great a genius thought, particularly of that edition, and he appears throughout the whole to have been a very candid reader, and to have approved of more than really merits approbation.

Mr. Richardson the father has said in his preface, that his son had a very copious collection of fine passages out of ancient and modern authors, by which Milton had profited; and this collection, which is written in the margin and between the lines of Mr. Hume's annous tions, Mr. Richardson the son has put into my hands. Some liule use I have made of it; and it might have been of greater service, and have saved me some trouble, if I had not then almost completed this work.

FREFACE.

Mr. Thyer, the Librarian at Manchester, I have not the pleasure of knowing personal'y, but by his writings I am convinced that he must be a man of great learning and as great humanity. It was late before I was informed that he had written any remarks upon the Paradise Lost, but he was very ready to communicate them, and for the greater dispatch sent me his interleaved Milton. wherein his remarks were written : but unluckily for him, for me, and for the public, the book, through the negligence of the carrier, was dropt upon the road, and cannot since be found. Mr. Thyer however hath had the goodness to endeavour to repair the loss to me and to the public, by writing what he could recollect; and sending me a sheet or two full of remarks almost every post for several weeks together : and though several of them came too late to be inserted into the body of the work, yct they will be found in the Appendix, * which is made for the sake of them principally. It is unnecessary to say any thing in their commendation: they will sufficiently recommend themselves.

Some other assistance too I have received from persons, whose names are unknown, and others, whose names I am not at liberty to mention: but I hope the Speaker of the House of Commons will pardon my ambition to have it known, that he has been pleased to suggest some useful hints and observations, when I have been admitted to the honour of his conversation.

8

In this edition they are inserted in their proper places.

As the notes are of various authors, so they are of various kinds, critical and explanatory ; some to correct the errors of former editions, to discuss the various readings, and to establish the true genuine text of Milton; some to illustrate the sense and meaning, to point out the beauties and defects of sentiment and character. and to commend or censure the conduct of the poem; some to remark the peculiarities of style and language, to clear the syntax, and to explain the uncommon words, or common words used in an uncommon signification : some to consider and examine the numbers, and to display our author's great arts of versification, the variety of the pauses, and the adaptness of the sound to the sense ; some to shew his imitations and allusions to other authors, whether sacred or profane, ancient or modern. We might have been much larger and more copious under each of these heads, and especially under the last: but I would not produce every thing that hath any similitude and resemblance, but only such passages as we may suppose the author really alluded to, and had in mind at the time of writing.

It was once my intention to prefix some essays to this work, one upon Milton's style, another upon his versification, a third upon his imitations, &c. but upon more mature deliberation I concluded that the same things would have a better effect in the form of short notes, when the pagticular passages referred to came immer-diately under consideration, and the context lay before the reader. There would have been more of the pomp and ostentation of criticism in the former, but I conceive there is more real use and advantage in the latter. It is the great fault of commentators, that they are apt to be silent or at most very concise where there is any difficulty. and to be very prolix and tedious where there is none : but it is hoped that the contrary method has been taken here; and though more may be said than is requisite for critics and scholars, yet it may be no more than is necessary or proper for other readers of Milton. For these notes are intended for general use, and if they are rereived with general approbation, that will be sufficient, I can hardly expect that any body should approve them all, and I may be certain that no body can condemn them all.

The life of the author it is almost become a custom to prefix to a new edition of his works; for when we admire the writer, we are curious also to know something of the man: and the life of Milton is not barely a history of his works, but is so much the more interesting, as he was more engaged in public affairs than poets usually are. And it has happened, that more accounts have been written of his life, than of almost any author's, particularly by Antony Wood in his Fasti Oxonienses, by our author's aephew Mr. Edward Philips before the English translation of Milton's State-letters printed in 1694, by Mr. Toland before the edition of our author's prose works in three volumes folio printed in 1698, by Monsieur Bayle in his Historical and Critical Dictionary, by Mr. Fenton before the edition of our author's poetical works printed in 1725, by Mr. Richardson in the Preface to his Explanatory Notes and Remarks upon Milton's Paradise Lost, and by the reverend and ingenious Mr. Thomas Birch in the General Dictionary, and more largely before the edition of our author's prose works in two volumes folio printed in 1738. And I have not only read and compared these accounts together, and made the best extracts out of them which I possibly could; but have also collected some other particulars from Milton's own works as well as from other authors, and from credible tradition as well as from written testimonies; and all these, like so many different threds, I have woven into one piece, and formed into a continued narration, of which, whether it affords more or less satisfaction and entertainment than former accounts, the reader must judge and determine : but it has been my study and endeavour, as in the notce to comprise the flower of all other notes, so in the life to include the substance of all former lives, and with improvements and additions.

10

In the conclusion are added copious indexes, one of the principal matters, and another of the words. The man, who is at the pains of making indexes, is really to be pitied; but of their great utility there is no need to say any thing, when several persons, who pass in the world for profound scholars, know little more of books than title pages and indexes, but never catch the spirit of an author, which is sure always to evaporate or die in such hands. The former of these indexes, if not drawn up by Mr. Tickell, was I think first inserted in his quarto edition of Milton's poetical works printed in 1720; and for the latter, which was much more laborious, it was composed at the desire and encouragement of Mr. Anditor Benson by Mr. Cruden, who hath also published a very useful Concordance to the Bible.

12

THE LIFE

0F

JOHN MILTON.

IT is agreed among all writers, that the family of MILTON came originally from Milton in Oxfordshire; but from which of the Miltons is not altogether so certain. Some say, and particularly Mr. Philips, that the family was of Milton near Abington in Oxfordshire, where it had been a long time seated, as appears by the monuments still to be seen in Milton church. But that Milton is not in Oxfordshire, but in Berkshire; and upon enquiry I find, that there are no such monuments in that church, nor any remains of them. It is more probable therefore that the family came, as Mr. Wood says, from Milton riear Halton and Thame in Oxfordshire: where it flourished several years, till at last the estate was sequestered, one of the family having taken the unfortunate side in the civil wars between the houses of York and Lancaster. John Milton, the poet's grandfather, was, according to Mr. Wood, an underranger or keeper of the forest of Shotover near Halton in Oxfordshire; he was of the religion of VOL. I-

Rome, and such a bigot that he disinherited his s only for being a protestant. Upon this the son, 1 poet's father, named likewise John Milton, settl in London, and became a scrivener by the advice a friend eminent in that profession; but he was r so devoted to gain and to business, as to lose all ta of the politer arts, and was particularly skilled music, in which he was not only a fine perform but is also celebrated for several pieces of his compc tion: and yet on the other hand he was not so fo of his music and amusements, as in the least to ne lect his business, but by his diligence and æconor acquired a competent estate, which enabled him terwards to retire and live in the country. He v by all accounts a very worthy man; and married excellent woman, Sarah, of the ancient family of Bradshaws, says Mr. Wood; but Mr. Philips, ( author's nephew, who was more likely to know, sa of the family of the Castons derived originally fr Wales. Whoever she was, she is said to have b a woman of incomparable virtue and goodness ; ; by her husband had two sons and a daughter.

The elder of the sons was our famous poet, v was born in the year of our Lord 1608, on the ni of December, in the morning, between six and se o'clock, in Bread-Street, London, where his fat lived at the sign of the Spread Eagle, which was a the coat of arms of the family. He was named Jo as his father and grand father had been before h and trom the beginning discovering the marks of uncommon genius, he was designed for a scholar, and had his education partly under private tutors, and partly at a public school. It has been often controverted whether a public or private education is best, but young Milton was so happy as to share the advantages of both. It appears from the fourth of his Latin elegies, and from the first and fourth of his familiar epistles, that Mr. Thomas Young, who was afterwards pastor of the company of English merchants residing at Hamburg, was one of his private preceptors: and when he had made good progress in his studies at home, he was sent to St. Paul's school, to be fitted for the university under the care of Mr. Gill, who was the master at that time, and to whose son are addressed some of his familiar epistles. In this early time of his life such was his love of learning, and so great was his ambition to surpass his equals, that from his twelfth year he commonly continued his studies till midnight, which, (as he says himself in his second Defence) was the first ruin of his eyes, to whose natural debility too were added frequent head-akes : but all could not extinguish or abate his laudable passion for letters. It is very seldom seen, that such application and such a genius meet in the same person. The force of either is great, but both together must perform wonders.

He was now in the seventeenth year of his age, and was a very good classical scholar and master of strenal languages, when he was sent to the university of Cambridge, and admitted at Christ's College (as appears from the register) on the 12th of February 1624-5, under the tuition of Mr. William Chappel, afterwards Bishop of Cork and Ross in Ireland. He continued above seven years at the university, and took two degres, that of Bachelor of Arts in 1628-9. and that of Master in 1612. It is somewhat remarkable, that though the merits of both our universities are perhaps equally great, and though poetical exercises are rather more encouraged at Oxford, yet most of our greatest poets have been bred at Cambridge, as Spenser, Cowley, Waller, Dryden, Prior, not to mention any of the lesser ones, when there is a greater than all, Milton. He had given early proofs of his poetic genius before he went to the university, and there he excelled more and more, and distinguished himself by several copies of verses upon occasional subjects, as well as by all his academical exercises, many of which are printed among his other works, and show him to have had a capacity above his years; and by his obliging behaviour, added to his great learning and ingenuity, he deservedly gained the . affection of many, and admiration of all. We do not find however that he obtained any preferment in the university, or a fellowship in his own college: which seemeth the more extraordinary, as that society has always encouraged learning and learned men, had the most excellent Mr. Mede at that time a fellow, and afterwards boasteth the great names of Cudworth, and Burnet, author of the Theory of the Earth, and several others. And this, together with some Latin verses of his to a friend, reflecting upon the university seemingly on this account, might provably have given occasion to the reproach which was fterwards cast upon him by his adversaries, that he vas expelled from the university for irregularities committed there, and forced to fly to Italy: but he sufficiently refutes this calumny in more places than one of his works; and indeed it is no wonder, that a person so engaged in religious and political controversies as he was, should be calumniated and abused by the contrary party.

He was designed by his parents for holy orders : and among the manuscripts of Trinity College in Cambridge there are two draughts in Milton's own hand of a letter to a friend, who had importuned him to take orders, when he had attained the age of twenty-three: but the truth is, he had conceived early prejudices against the doctrine and discipline of the Church, and subscribing to the Articles was in his opinion subscribing slave. This no doubt was a disappointment to his friends, who though in comfortable were yet by no means in great circumstances : and neither doth he seem to have had any inclination to any other profession; he had too free a spirit to he limited and confined; and was for comprehending all sciences, but professing none. And therefore, after he had left the university in 1632, he retired to his father's house in the country; for his father had by this time quitted business, and lived at an estate which he had purchased at Horton near Colebrooke in Buckinghamshire. Here he resided with his parents for the space of five years, and, as he himself has informed us, (in his second Defence, and the seventh of his familiar epistles) read over all the Greek and Latin authors, particularly the historians; but now and then made an excursion to London, sometimes to buy books or to meet his friends from Cambridge, and at other times to learn something new in the mathematics or music, with which he was extremely delighted.

His retirement therefore was a learned retirement. and it was not long before the world reaped the fruits of it. It was in the year 1634 that his Mask was presented at Ludlow-castle. There was formerly a president of Wales, and a sort of a court kept at Ludlow, which has since been abolished; and the president at that time was the Earl of Bridgwater. before whom Milton's Mask was presented on Michaelmas night, and the principal parts, those of the two brothers, were performed by his Lordship's sons. the Lord Brackly and Mr. Thomas Egerton, and that of the lady by his Lordship's daughter, the Lady Alice Egerton. The occasion of this poem seemeth to have been merely an accident of the two brothers and the lady having lost one another in their way to the castle : and it is written very much in imitation of Shakespear's Tempest, and the Faithful Shepherdess of Beaumont and Fletcher; and though one of the first, is yet one of the most beautiful of Milton's It was for some time handed about compositions. only in manuscript, but afterwards, to satisfy the importunity of friends and to save the trouble of transcribing, it was printed at London, though without the author's name, in 1637, with a decication to the Lord Brackly by Mr. H. Lawes, who composed the music, and played the part of the attendant Spirit. It was printed likewise at Oxford at the end of Mr. R.'s poems, as we learn from a letter of Sir Henry Wotton to our author; but who that Mr. R. was, whether Randolph the poet, or who else, is uncertain. It has lately, though with additions and alterations, been exhibited on the stage several times; and we hope the fine poetry and morality have recommended it to the audience, and not barely the authority of Milton's name. We wish, for the honour of the nation, that the like good taste prevailed in every thing.

JOHN MILTON.

In 1637 he wrote another excellent piece, his Lycidas, wherein he laments the untimely fate of a friend, who was unfortunately drowned that same year, in the month of August, on the Irish seas, in his passage from Chester. This friend was Mr. Edward King, son of Sir John King, Secretary of Ireland under Queen Elizabeth, King James I. and King Charles I. and was a fellow of Christ's College, and was so well beloved and esteemed at Cambridge, that some of the greatest names in the university have united in celebrating his obsequies, and published collection of poems, Greek and Latin and Englishe sacred to his memory. The Greek by H. More, &cc. Latin by T. Farnaby, I. Pearson, &c. the English by II. King, J. Beaumont, J. Cleaveland, with several others; and judiciously the last of all as the best of all, is Milton's Lycidas. " On such sacrifices the Gods themselves strow incense;" and one would almost wish so to have died, for the sake of having been so lamented. But this poem is not all made up of sorrow and tenderness: there is a mixture of satire and indignation; for in part of it the poet taketh occasion to inveigh againt the corruptions of the clergy, and seemeth to have first discovered his acrimony against Archbishop Laud, and to have threatened him with the loss of his head, which afterwards happened to him through the fury of his enemies .--At least I can think of no sense so proper to be given to the following verses in Lycidas.

Besides what the grim wolf with privy paw Daily devours apace, and nothing said; But that two-handed engine at the door Stands ready to smite once, and smite no more.

About this time, as we learn from one of his familiar epistles, he had some thoughts of taking chambers at one of the Inus of Court, for he was not very well pleased with living so obscurely in the country: but his mother dying, he prevaled with his father to let him indulge a desire, which he had long entertained, of seeing foreign countries, and JOHN MILTON.

particularly Italy: and having communicated his design to Sir Henry Wotton, who had formerly been Ambassador at Venice, and was then Provest of Eton College, and having also sent him his Mask. of which he had not yet publicly acknowledged himself the author, he received from him the following friendly letter, dated from the College the roth of April 1638.

SIR,

" It was a special favour, when you lately bestowed upon me here the first taste of your acquaintance, though no longer than to make me know, that I wanted more time to value it, and to enjoy it rightly. And in truth, if I could then have imagined your farther stay in these parts, which I understood afterwards by Mr. H, I would have been bold, in our vulgar phrase, to mend my draught, for you left me with an extreme thirst, and to have begged your conversation again jointly with your said learned friend, at a poor meal or two, that we might have banded together some good authors of the ancient time, among which I observed you to have been familiar.

"Since your going, you have charged me with new obligations, both for a very kind letter from you dated the sixth of this month, and for a dainty piece of entertainment, that came therewith; wherein I should much commend the tragical part, if the witcal did not ravish with a certain doric delicacy in your Soly the an whether I must pickly confess to make the off-thermaly thermal in our language, ipsation is the limit of some to their you, that I there is a weather the tract artificer. For the backs to the there is the tract artificer. For the backs to the theory weather the tract artificer. For the backs to the theory weather artificer with backs to the theory weather artificer with backs to the theory weather art of the late R's backs to the the tract art of stationers, and back the theory of an an opera dolor.

"N. S. S. Concerning your travels, wherein I "Not changing a little milite privilege of discourse with Volas I scorpose you will not blanch Paris in Your Volas I scorpose you will not blanch Paris in Your Volas I scorpose you will not blanch Paris in Your Volas I scorpose you will not blanch Paris in Your Volas I scorpose you will not blanch Paris in Your Volas I scorpose your will not blanch Paris Statistics of the lines to Mr. M. B. when you shall they find attenuing the young Lord S. as his go-Verbur and you may survey receive from him good Concerns for shaping of your farther journey into Verby, where he did reside by my choice some time for the king, after mine own recess from Venice.

<sup>14</sup> I should think, that your best line will be thro' the whole length of France to Marseilles, and thence by sen to Genoa, whence the passage into Tuscany is a diarnal as a Graveseni barre. I hasten, as  $y'_{12}$  do, to Florence or Sienna, the rather to tell  $y'_{12}$  a short story, from the interest you have given have a your safety.

" .1t Sienna I was tabled in the house of one A' cipione, an old Roman courtier in dangerous having been steward to the Duca di Pagliano, th all his family were strangled, save this only hat escaped by foresight of the tempest. With and often much chat of those affairs; into took pleasure to look back from his native ; and at my departure toward Rome, which n the center of his experience, I had won ice enough to beg his advice, how I might yself securely there, without offence of others. 'own conscience : "Signor, Arrigo meo," says pensieri stretti, & il viso sciolto ;" that is, your ts close, and your countenance loose, will go ver the whole world. Of which Delphian (for so I have found it) your judgment doth commentary: and therefore, Sir, I will comwith it to the best of all securities, God's re, remaining your friend, as much at coms any of longer date.

H. WOTTON."

. "Sir, I have expressly sent this by my y to prevent your departure, without some ledgment from me of the receipt of your ; letter, having myself, through some busiknow not how, neglected the ordinary con-. In any part where I shall understand you shall be glad and diligent to entertain you ne novelties, even for some fomentation of Iship, too soon interrupted in the cradle."

Soon after this he set out upon his travels, be of an age to make the proper improvements, and barely to see sights and to learn the languages, most of our modern travellers, who go out boys, return such as we see, but such as I do not choos name. He was attended by only one servant, accompanied him through all his travels; and went first to France, where he had recommendat to the Lord Scudamore, the English Ambass; there at that time. As soon as he came to Paris. waited upon his Lordship, and was received y wonderful civility; and having an earnest desire visit the learned Hugo Grotius, he was by his Le ship's means introduced to that great man, who then Ambassador at the French court from the mous Christiana Queen of Sweden; and the was to their mutual satisfaction ; they were ear them pleased to see a person, of whom the heard such commendations. But at Paris he not long; his thoughts and his wishes hasten Italy; and so after a few days he took leave Lord Scudamore, who very kindly gave him to the English merchants in the several places which he was to travel, requesting them t all the good offices which lay in their power

From Paris he went directly to Nice, took shipping for Genoa, from whence I Leghorn, and thence to Pisa, and so to F which city he found sufficient induceme z stay of two months. For besides t

24

JOHN MILTON.

)

e

5

ł

e

à

a

ŝ

ł

f

d

and other beauties of the place, he took great delight in the company and conversation there, and frequented their academies as they are called, the meetings of the most polite and ingenious persons, which they have in this as well as in the other principal cities of Italy, for the exercise and improvement of wit and learning among them. And in these conversations he bore so good a part, and produced so many excellent compositions, that he was soon taken notice of, and was very much courted and caressed by several of the nobility and prime wits of Florence. For the manner is, as he says himself in the Preface to his second book of the Reason of Church Government, that every one must give some proof of his wit and reading there, and his productions were received with written encomiums which the Italian is not forward to bestow on men of this. side the Alps. Jacomo Gaddi, Antonio Francini, Carlo Dati, Beneditto Bonmatthei, Cultellino, Frescobaldi, Clementelli, are reckoned among his particular friends. At Gaddi's house the academies were held, which he constantly frequented. Antonio Francini composed an Italian ode in his commendation. Carlo Dati wrote a Latin culogium of him, and corresponded with him after his return to England. Bonmatthei was at that time about publishing an Italian Grammar; and the eighth of our author's familiar epistles, dated at Florence, Sept. 10, 1638, is addressed to him upon that occasion, commending his design, and advising him to add some observations concerning the true pronunciation that language for the use of foreigners.

So much good acquaintance would probably detained him longer at Florence, if he had not going to Rome, which to a curious traveller is tainly the place the most worth seeing of any i And so he took leave of his friend world. Florence, and went from thence to Sienna, and Sienna to Rome, where he staved much about same time that he had continued at Florence, i ing both his eves and his mind, and delighted wit fine paintings and sculptures, and other rarities antiquities of the city, as well as with the con sation of several learned and ingenious men, particularly of Lucas Holstenius, keeper of the tican library, who received him with the gre humanity, and showed him all the Greek aut whether in print or in manuscript, which had p through his correction; and also presented hi Cardinal Barberini, who at an entertainment of sic, performed at his own expence, waited fc at the door, and taking him by the hand b him into the assembly. The next morning he upon the Cardinal to return him thanks for 1 lities, and by the means of Holstenius was a troduced to his Eminence, and spent some conversation with him. It seems that F had studied three years at Oxford, and t' dispose him to be more friendly to the E he took a particular liking and affection ilton, to thank him for all his favours, wrote afterwards from Florence the ninth of his faepistles. At Rome too Selvaggi made a Latin in honour of Milton, and Salsilli a Latin tetracelebrating him for his Greek and Latin and poetry; and he in return presented to Salhis sickness, those fine Scazons, or Iambic having a spondee in the last foot, which are d among his juvenile poems.

The second s

n Rome he went to Naples, in company with in hermit; and by his means was introduced acquaintance of Giovanni Baptista Manso, is of Villa, a Neapolitan nobleman, of singurit and virtue, to whom Tasso addresses his ue of friendship, and whom he mentions like-1 his Gierusalemme Liberata with great honour. tobleman was particularly civil to Milton, frey visited him at his lodgings, and went with show him the Viceroy's palace, and whatever rious or worth notice in the city; and moree honoured him so far as to make a Latin dishis praise, which is printed before our au-Latin poems, as is likewise the other of Seland the Latin tetrastich of Salsilli, together ie Italian ode and the Latin eulogium before oned. We may suppose that Milton was not pleased with the honours conferred upon him nany persons of distinction, and especially by such quality and eminence as the Marquis of and as a testimony of his gratitude he presented to the Marquis at his departure from Na his eclogue intitled Mansus, which is well w reading among his Latin poems. So that it ma reckoned a peculiar felicity of the Marquis of V life, to have been celebrated both by Tasso Milton, the one the greatest modern poet of his c and the other the greatest of any forcign nation.

Having seen the finest parts of Italy, Milton now thinking of passing over into Sicily and Gru when he was diverted from his purpose by the from England, that things were tending to a war between the King and Parliament; for he tho it unworthy of himself to be taking his plea abroad, while his countrymen were contending liberty at home. He resolved therefore to retur the way of Rome, though he was advised to contrary by the merchants, who had received in gence from their correspondents, that the En Jesuits there were forming plots against him, in he should return thither, by reason of the great dom which he had used in all his discourses of For he had by no means observed the gion. recommended to him by Sir Henry Wotton, of k ing his thoughts close and his countenance o he had visited Galileo, a prisoner to the Inquisi for asserting the motion of the earth, and thin otherwise in astronomy than the Dominicans Franciscans, thought: and though the Marqu Villa had shown him such distinguishing mar. favour at Naples, yet he told him at his depa that he would have shown him much greater, if he had been more reserved in matters of religion. But he had a soul above dissimulation and disguise : he was neither afraid nor ashamed to vindicate the truth; and if any man had, he had in him the spirit of an old martyr. He was so prudent indeed, that he would not of his own accord begin any discourse of religion ; but at the same time he was so honest, that if he was questioned at all about his faith, he would not dissemble his sentiments, whatever was the consequence. And with this resolution he went to Rome the second time, and stayed there two moths more, neither concealing his name, nor declining openly to defend the truth, if any thought proper to attack him : and yet, God's good providence protecting him, he came safe to his kind friends at Florence, where he was received with as much joy and affection, as if he had returned into his own country.

JOHN MILTON.

Here likewise he stayed two months, as he had done before, excepting only an excursion of a few days to Lucca: and then crossing the Apennine, and passing through Bologna and Ferrara, he came to Venice, in which city he spent a month; and having shipped off the books, which he had collected in his travels, and particularly a chest or two of choice music books of the best masters flourishing about that time in Italy, he took his course through Nerona, Milan, and along the lake Leman to Geneva. In this city he tarried some time, meeting here with eople of his own principles, and contracted an in imate friendship with Giovanni Deodati, the molearned professor of divinity, whose annotations up the bible are published in English. And from then rcturning through France the same way that he his gone before, he arrived safe in England, after a per grination of one year and about three months, ha ing seen more, and learned more, and conversed wi more famous men, and made more real improvement than most others în double the time.

THE LIFE OF

۰

His first business after his return was to pay l duty to his father, and to visit his other friend but this pleasure was much diminished by the loss his dear friend and school-fellow. Charles Deodati. his absence. While he was abroad, he heard it ported that he was dead; and upon his coming he he found it but too true, and lamented his d in an excellent Latin eclogue intitled Epitapl Damonis. This Deodati had a father origina Lucca, but his mother was English, and he was and bred in England, and studied physic, ar an admirable scholar, and no less remarkable sobriety and other virtues than for his great le and ingenuity. One or two of Milton's epistles are addressed to him; and Mr. Tola that he had in his hands two Greek letters of to Milton, very handsomely written. It may for scholars now and then to exercise then Greek and Latin; but we have much mor Casion to write letters in our own nativ and in that therefore we should principally endeavour to excel.

Milton, soon after his return, had taken a lodging at one Russel's, a taylor in St. Bride's Church-yard ; but he continued not long there, having not sufficient room for his library and furniture; and therefore determined to take a house, and accordingly took a handsome garden-house in Aldersgate-street, situated at the end of an entry, which was the more agreeable to a studious man for its privacy and freedom from noise and disturbance. And in this house he continued several years, and his sister's two sons were put to board with him, first the younger and afterwards the elder : and some other of his intimate friends requested of him the same favour for their sons, especially since there was little more trouble in instructing half a dozen than two or three: and he. who could not easily deny any thing to his friends. and who knew that the greatest men in all ages had delighted in teaching others the principles of knowledge and virtue, undertook the office, not out of any sordid and mercenary views, but merely from a benevolent disposition, and a desire to do good.----And his method of education was as much above the pedantry and jargon of the common schools, as his genius was superior to that of a common schoolmaster. One of his nephews has given us an account of the many authors both Latin and Greek, which (besides those usually read in the schools) through his excellent judgment and way of teaching were run over within no greater compass of time. than from ten to fifteen or sixteen years of age. Of the Latin, the four authors concerning husbandry, Cato, Varro, Columella, and Palladius; Cornelius Celsus the physician, a great part of Pliny's Natural History, the Architecture of Vitruvius. the Stratagents of Frontinus, and the philosophical poets Lucretius and Manilius. Of the Greek, Hesiod. Aratus's Phænomena and Diosemeia. Dionisius Afer de Situ Orbis, Oppian's Cynegetics and Halieutics, Quintus Calaber's poem of the Trojan war continued from Homer, Apollonius Rhodius's Argonautics; and in prose Plutarch's Placita Philosophorum, and of the Education of Children, Xenophon's Cyropædia and Anabasis, Elian's Tactics, and the Stratagems of Polyænus. Nor did this application to the Greek and Latin tongues hinder the attaining to the chief oriental languages, the Hebrew, Chaldee and Syriac. so far as to go through the Pentateuch or five books of Moses in Hebrew, to make a good entrance into the Targum or Chaldee paraphrase, and to understand several chapters of St. Matthew in the Syriac Testament; besides the modern languages, Italian and French, and a competent knowledge of the mathematics and astronomy. The Sunday's exercise for his pupils was for the most part to read a chapter of the Greek Testament, and to hear his learned ex-The next work after this was to position of it. write from his dictation some part of a system of divinity, which he had collected from the ablest di-

i

ines, who had written upon that subject. Such were his academic institutions ; and thus by teaching others he in some manner enlarged his own knowledge; and having the reading of so many authors as it were by proxy, he might possibly have preserved his sight, if he had not moreover been perpetually busied in reading or writing something himself. It was certainly a very recluse and studious life that both he and his pupils led; but the young men of that age were of a different turn from those of the present; and he himself gave an example to those under him of hard study and spare diet; only now and then, once in three weeks or a month, he made a gaudy day with some young gentlemen of his acquaintance, the chief of whom, says Mr. Philips, were Mr. Alphry and Mr. Miller, both of Gray's Inn, and two of the greatest beaus of those times.

But he was not so fond of this academical life, as to be an indifferent spectator of what was acted upon the public stage of the world. The nation was now in a great ferment, in 1641, and the clamour ran high against the bishops, when he joined loudly in the cry, to help the puritan ministers, (as he says himself in his second Defense) they being inferior to the bishops in learning and eloquence; and published his two books of Reformation in England, written to a friend. About the same time certain ministers having published a treatise against episcopacy, in answer to the Humble Remonstrance of Dr. Joseph Hall, Bithey of Norwich, under the title of Smectynnuus, 2 word consisting of the initial letters of their names. Stephen Marshall, Edmund Calamy, Thomas Young, Matthew Newcomen, and William Spurstow; and Archbishop Usher having published at Oxford a refutation of Smectymnuus, in a tract concerning the original of bishops and metropolitans, Milton wrote his little piece Of Prelatical Episcopacy, in opposition chiefly to Usher, for he was for contending with the most powerful adversary; there would be either less disgrace in the defeat, or more glory in the victory. He handled the subject more at large in his next performance, which was the Reason of Church Government urged against Prelaty, in two books. And Bishop Hall having published a Defence of the Humble Remonstrance, he wrote Animadversions upon it. All these treaties he published within the course of one year, 1641, which show how very diligent he was in the cause he had undertaken. And the next year he set forth his Apology for Smectymnuus, in answer to the Confutation of his Animadversions, written as he thought himself by Bishop Hall or his son. And here he very luckily ended a controversy, which detained him from greater and better writings which he was meditating, more useful to the public, as well as more suitable to his own genius and inclination; but he thought all this while that he was vindicating ecclesiastical liberty.

In the year 1643, and the 35th of his age, he married; and indeed his family was now growing so humerous, that it wanted a mistress at the head of

34

JOHN MILTON.

it. His father, who had lived with his younger son at Reading, was, upon the taking of that place by the forces under the Earl of Essex, necessitated to come and live in London with this his elder son, with whom he continued in tranquility and devotion to his dying day. Some addition too was to be made to the number of his pupils. But before his father or his new pupils were come, he took a journey in the Whitsuntide vacation, and after a month's absence returned with a wife. Mary the eldest daughter of Mr. Richard Powell, of Foresthill near Shotover in Oxfordshire, a justice of the peace, and a gentleman of good repute and figure in that county. But she had not cohabited with her husband above a month, before she was earnestly solicited by her relations to come and spend the remaining part of the summer with them in the country. If it was not at her instigation that her friends made this request, yet at least it was agreeable to her inclination; and she obtained her husband's consent upon a promise of returning at Michaelmas. In the mean while his studies went on very vigorously; and his chief diversion, after the business of the day, was now and then in an evening to visit the Lady Margaret Lee. daughter of the Earl of Marlborough, Lord High Treasurer of England, and President of the Privy Council to King James I. This lady, being a woman of excellent wit and understanding, had a particular honour for our author, and took great delight in his conversation; as likewise did her husband Captain Hobson, a very accomplished gentleman. And what a regard Milton again had for her, he has left upon record in a sonnet to her praise, extant among his other poems.

1111

i

Michaeimas was now come, but he heard nothing of his wife's return. He wrote to her, but received no answer. He wrote again letter after letter, but received no answer to any of them. He then dispatched a messenger with a letter, desiring her to return; but she positively refused, and dismissed the messenger with contempt. Whether it was, that she had conceived any dislike to her husband's person or humour; or whether she could not conform to his retired and philosophical manner of life, having been accustomed to a house of much gaiety and company; or whether being of a family strongly attached to the royal cause, she could not bear her husband's republican principles; or whether she was over-persuaded by her relations, who possibly might repent of having matched the eldest daughter of the family to a man so distinguished for taking the contrary party. the King's head-quarters being in their neighbourhood at Oxford, and his Majesty having now some fairer prospect of success; whether any or all of these were the reasons of this extraordinary behaviour: however it was, it so highly incensed her husband. that he thought it would be dishonourable ever to receive her again after such a repulse, and he determined to repudiate her as she had in effect repudiated him, and to consider her no longer as his wife.

36

o fortify this his resolution, and at the same o justify it to the world, he wrote the Do and Discipline of Divorce, wherein he ender to prove, that indisposition, unfitness, or riety of mind, proceeding from any unchanges. ause in nature, hindering and ever likely to r the main benefits of conjugal society, which lace and peace, are greater reasons of divorce idultery or natural frigidity, especially if there children, and there be mutual consent for se-He published it at first without his name. on. ie stile easily betraved the author; and aftera second edition, much augmented with his ; and he dedicated it to the Parliament of Engwith the Assembly of Divines, that as they then consulting about the general reformation kingdom, they might also take this particular of domestic liberty into their consideration. hen, as it was objected that his doctrine was I notion, and a paradox that nobody had ever d before, he endeavoured to confirm his own n by the authority of others, and published in he Judgment of Martin Bucer, &c : and as it ill objected, that his doctrine could not be reed to Scripture, he published in 1645 his Terdon, or Expositions upon the four chief places pture, which treat of marriage, or nullities in ge., At the first appearing of the Doctrine and ine of Divorce, the clergy raised a heavy outust it, and daily solicited the Parliament to pass some censure upon it; and at last one of t in a sermon preached before the Lords and Com on a day of humiliation in August 1664, rou told them, that there was a book abroad which served to be burnt, and that among their other they ought to repent, that they had not yet bra it with some mark of their displeasure. And Wood informs us, that upon Milton's publishin three books of Divorce, the Assembly of Div that was then sitting at Westminster, took st notice of them; and notwithstanding his fo services in writing against the Bishops, caused to be summoned before the House of Lords: that House, whether approving his doctrine, or favouring his accusers, soon dismissed him. was attacked too from the press as well as fro pulpit, in a pamphlet intitled Divorce at Ple and in another intitled an Answer to the D and Discipline of Divorce, which was licens recommended by Mr. Joseph Caryl, a famou byterian Divine, and author of a volumino mentary on the Book of Job: and Milton in lasterion or reply published in 1645 exr smartly with the licencer, as well as har roughly the nameless author. These pro I suppose, contributed not a little to such an enemy to the Presbyterians, to had before distinguished himself a friend posed likewise two of his sonnets on t his book of Divorce met with, but the ter of the two. To this account it may be adm Anthony Wood, that after the King's Reon, when the subject of divorce was under conion with the Lords upon the account of John los or Roos his separation from his wife Anne int, eldest daughter to Henry Marquis of Dor-, he was consulted by an eminent member of suse, and about the same time by a chief officer , as being the prime person who was knowing affair.

8

while he was engaged in this controversy of , he was not so totally engaged in it, but he ed to other things; and about this time pubhis Letter of Education to Mr. Samuel Hartlibe rote some things about husbandry, and was a considerable learning, as appears from the lethich passed between him and the famous Mr. and from Sir William Petty's and Pell the matician's writing to him, the former his treatise Advancement of some particular parts of Learnid the latter his Idea of the Mathematics, as well n this letter of our author. This letter of our · has usually been printed at the end of his , and is, as I may say, the Theory of his own ce; and by the rules which he has laid down ucation, we see, in some measure, the method e pursued in educating his own pupils. And 4 he published his Areopagitica, or Speech for erty of unlicensed printing to the Parliament and. It was written at the desire of several learned men, and is perhaps the best vindic: that has been published at any time or in any guage, of that liberty which is the basis and sur of all other liberties, the liberty of the press: alas! it had not the desired effect; for the Prest rians were as fond of exercising the licensing po when they got it into their own hands, as they been clamorous before in inveighing against while it was in the hands of the Prelates. Mr. Toland is mistaken in saving. " that such " the effect of this piece, that the following " Mabol a licencer offered reasons against licens ** and at his own request was discharged that offi For neither was the leicencer's name Mabol, but bert Mabbot; neither was he discharged from office 🗰 May 1649, about five years afterwa though probably he might be swayed by Milton' guments, as every ingenuous person must, who per and considers them. And in 1645 was publish collection of his poems, Latin and English, the r cipal of which are, On the Morning of Christ's N vity, L'Allegro, Il Penseroso, Lycidas, the Mask, &c.: and if he had left no other monuments of poetical genius behind him, these would have I sufficient to have rendered his name immortal.

But without doubt, his Doctrine of Divorce, and maintenance of it, principally engaged his thou at this period; and whether others were convin or not by his arguments, he was certainly convin himself that he was in the right; and as a pro-

JOHN MILTOS.

it he determined to marry again, and made his addresses to a young lady of great wit and beauty, one of the daughters of Dr. Davis. But intelligence of this coming to his wife, and the then declining state of the King's cause, and consequently of the circumstances of Justice Powell's family, caused them to set all engines on work to restore the wife again to her husband. His friends, too, for different reasons, seem to have been as desirous of bringing about a reconciliation as her's, and this method of effecting it was concerted between them. He had a relation. one Blackborough, living in the lane of St. Martin's Le Grand, whom he often visited; and one day, when he was visiting there, it was contrived that the wife should be ready in another room; and as he was thinking of something else, he was surprised to see her them he had expected never to have seen any more, falling down upon her knees at his feet, and imploring his forgiveness with tears. At first he showed some signs of aversion, but he continued not long inexorable; his wife's intreaties, and the inter. cession of friends on both sides. soon wrought upon his generous nature, and procured a happy reconciliation, with an act of oblivion of all that was past. But he did not 'take his wife home immediately; it was agreed that she should remain at a friend's, till the house, that he had newly taken, was fitted for their reception; for some other gentlemen of his acquaintance, having observed the great success of his method of education, had recommended their so to his care; and his house in Aldersgate-street not being large enough, he had taken a larger in Barbican. Till this could be got ready, the place pitched upon for his wife's abode, was the widow Webber's house in St. Clement's Church-yard, whose second daughter had been married to the other brother many years before. The part that Milton acted in this whole affair, showed plainly that he had a spirit capable of the strongest resentment, but yet more inclinable to pity and forgiveness: and neither in this was any injury done to the other lady, whom he was courting, for she is said to have been always averse from the motion, not daring, I suppose, to venture in marriage with a man who was known to have a wife still living. He might not think himself too at liberty as before, while his wife continued obstinate ; for his most plausible argument for divorce proceeds upon a supposition, that the thing be done with mutual consent.

After his wife's return, his family was increased not only with children, but also with his wife's rela-'tions, her father and mother, her brothers and sisters, coming to live with him in the general distress and ruin of the royal party : and he was so far from resenting their former ill treatment of him, that he generously protected them and entertained them very hospitably, till their affairs were accommodated through his interest with the prevailing faction. And then upon their removal, and the death of his own father, his house looked again like the house of the uses ; but his studies had like to have been interpted by a call to public business; for about this at there was a design of constituting him Adjutant eneral in the Army under Sir William Waller; but ie new modelling of the army soon following, that esign was laid aside. Not long after, his great ouse in Barbican being now too large for his family, se quitted it for a smaller in High Holborn, which opened backward into Lincoln's Inn-Fields, where he prosecuted his studies till the King's trial and death, when the Presbyterians declaiming tragically against the King's execution, and asserting that his person was sacred and inviolable, provoked him to write the Tenure of Kings and Magistrates, proving that it is lawful to call a tyrant to account, and to depose and put him to death, and that they who of late so much blame deposing, are the men who did it themselves : and he published it at the beginning of the year 1640, to satisfy and compose the minds of the people. Not long after this, he wrote his Observations on the Articles of Peace, between the Earl of Ormond and the Irish Rebels. In these and all his writings, whatever others of different parties may think, he thought himself an advocate for true liberty; for ecclesiastical liberty, in his treatises against the Bishops; for domestic liberty, in his books of divorce, and for civil liberty in his writings against the King, in defence of the Parliament and People of England.

After this he retired again to his private studies and thinking that he had leisure enough for s a work, he applied himself to the writing of a Hist of England, which he intended to deduce from earliest accounts down to his own times: he finished four books of it, when neither courting expecting any such preferment, he was invited the Council of State to be their Latin Secretary Foreign Affairs. He served in the same capa under Oliver, and Richard, and the Rump, till Restoration; and without doubt a better Latin could not have been found in the kingdom. the Republic and Cromwell scorned to pay that bute to any foreign prince, which is usually pair the Republic and Croinwein seconded to pay that bute to any foreign prince, which is usually paic the French King, of managing their affairs in language; they thought it an indignity and me ness, to which this or any free nation ought no submit; and took a noble resolution neither to w any letters to any foreign states, nor to receive answers from them, but in the Latin tongue, wl was common to them all. It would have t well, if succeeding princes had followed their ample; for in the opinion of very wise men, universality of the French language will make for the universality of the French monarchy.

But it was not only in foreign dispatches that government made use of his pen. He had dischar the business of his office a very little time, befor was called to a work of another kind. For s after the King's death was published a book unde mame intitled Europ Bagiaure, or the Royal Iw and this book, like Cæsar's Last Will, making a deeper impression, and exciting greater commiseration in the minds of the people, than the King '.mself did while alive. Milton was ordered to prepare an answer to it, which was published by authority, and intitled Einemakarne, or the Image Breaker, the famous surname of many Greek Emperors, who in their zeal against idolatry, broke all superstitious images to pieces. This piece was translated into French, and two replies to it were published. one in 1651, and the other in 1692, upon the reprinting of Milton's book at Amsterdam. In this controversy a heavy charge hath been alledged against Milton. Some editions of the King's book have certain prayers added at the end, and among them a prayer in time of captivity, which is taken from that of Pamela in Sir Philip Sidney's Arcadia : and it is said, that this prayer was added by the contrivance and artifice of Milton, who, together with Bradshaw, prevailed upon the printer to insert it, that from thence he might take occasion to bring a scandal upon the King, and to blast the reputation of his book, as he hath attempted to do in the first section of his answer. This fact is related chiefly upon the authority of Henry Hills the printer, who had frequently affirmed it to Dr. Gill and Dr. Bernard his physicians, as they themselves have testified. But Hills was not himself the printer who was dealt with in this manner, and consequently he could have the story only from nearsay: and though he was Cromwell's printer, yet after wards he turned Papist in the reign of Jame order to be that King's printer. It was time that he used to relate this story : so think, little credit is due to his testimony. deed I cannot but hope and believe, that had a soul above being guilty of so mean a to serve so mean a purpose; and there is as li son for fixing it upon him, as he had to trac King for profaning the duty of prayer "w " polluted trash of romances." For there many finer prayers in the best books of de and the King might as lawfully borrow and to his own occasions as the Apostle migh quotations from Heathen poems and plays : became Milton, the least of all men, to brir an accusation against the King, as he was particularly fond of reading romances, a made use of them in some of the best and 1 his writings.

But his most celebrated work in prose is his of the People of England against Salmasius, I pro Populo Anglicano contra Claudii Anonyr Salmasii, Defensionem Regiam. Salmasius, b Frenchman, succeeded the famous Scaliger as norary Professor of the Univervity of Leyden, gained great reputation by his Plinian Exerc on Solinus, and by his critical remarks on Latin and Greek authors, and was generally es one of the greatest and most consummate sch hat age, and is commended by Millton b his Reason of Church Government, and called the learned Salmasius. Besides his great learning, he had extraordinary talents in railing. " This prince " of scholars, as somebody said of him, seemed to " have erected his throne upon a heap of stones, " that he might have them at hand to throw at every "one's head who passed by." He was therefore courted by Charles II, as the most able man to write a defence of the late king his father, and to traduce his adversaries, and a hundred Jacobuses were given him for that purpose, and the book was published in 1649, with this title, Defensio Regia pro Carolo I. ad Carolum II. No sooner did this book appear in England, but the Council of State unanimously appointed Milton, who was then present, to answer it : and he performed the task with amazing spirit and vigour, though his health at that time was such, that he could hardly indure the fatigue of writing, and being weak in body he was forced to write by piece-meal, and to break off almost every hour, as he says himself in the Introduction. This necessarily occasioned some delay, so that his Defence of the People of England was not made public till the beginning of the year 1651 : and they who cannot read the original, may yet have the pleasure of reading the English translation by Mr. Washington of the Temple, which was printed in 1692, and is inserted among Milton's Works in the two last editions. It was somewhat extraordinary, that Salmasius, a pensioner baRepublic, should pretend to write a defence d

¢

JOHN MILTON.

Monarchy; but the States showed their disapprobation by publicly condemning his book, and ordering it to be suppressed. On the other hand, Milton's book was burnt at Paris, and at Toulouse, by the hands of the common hangman; but this served only to procure it the more readers ; it was read and talked of every where, and even they who were of different principles, yet could not but acknowledge that he was a good defender of a bad cause; and Salmasius's book underwent only one impression. while this of Milton passed through several editions. On the first appearance of it, he was visited or invited by all the Foreign Ministers at London, not excepting even those of crowned heads; and was particularly honoured and esteemed by Adrian Paaw, Ambassador from the States of Holland. He was likewise highly complimented by letters from the most learned and ingenious persons in France and Germany; and Leonard Philaras, an Athenian born, and Ambassador from the Duke of Parma to the French King, wrote a fine encomium of his Defence, and sent him his picture, as appears from Milton's letter to Philaris, dated at London in June 1652. And what gave him the greatest satisfaction, the work was highly applauded by those who had desired him to undertake it; and they made him a present of a thousand pounds, which, in those days of. frugality, was reckoned no inconsiderable reward for his performance. But the case was far otherwise with Salmasius. He was then in high favour at the

48

JOHN MILTON.

Court of Christina Queen of Sweden, who had invited thither several of the most learned men of all ountries ; but when Milton's Defence of the People of England was brought to Sweden, and was read to the Queen, at her own desire, he sunk immedistely in her esteem and the opinion of every body ; and though he talked big at first, and vowed the destruction of Milton and the Parliament, yet finding that he was looked upon with coldness, he thought proper to take leave of the Court; and he who came in honour, was dismissed with contempt. He died some time afterwards at Spa in Germany, and it is said more of a broken heart than of any distemper, leaving a posthumous reply to Milton, which was not published till after the Restoration, and was dedicated to Charles II. by his son Claudius; but it has done no great honour to his memory, abounding with abuse much more than argument.

Isaac Vossius was at Stockholm, when Milton's book was brought thither, and in some of his letters to Nicolas Heinsius, published by Professor Burman in the third tome of his Sylloge Epistolarum, he says, that he had the only copy of Milton's book, that the Queen borrowed it of him, and was very much pleased with it, and commended Milton's wit and manner of writing in the presence of several persons, and that Salmasius was very angry, and very busy in preparing his answer, wherein he abused Milton as if he had been one of the vilest catamite's in Italy, and also criticised his Latin poems. Heinsilw POL: 1.

writes again to Vossius from Holland, that he won? dered that only one copy of Milton's book was brought to Stockholm, when three were sent thither, one to the Queen, another to Vossius which he had received, and the third to Salmasius.; that the book was in every body's hands, and there had been four editions in a few months, besides the English one; that a Dutch translation was handed about. and a French one was expected. And afterwards he writes from Venice, that Holstenius had lent him Milton's Latin poems; that they were nothing, compared with the elegance of his Apology ; that he had offended frequently against prosody, and here was a great opening for Salmasius's criticism; but as to Milton's having been a catamite in Italy, he says, that it was a mere calumny; on the contrary he was disliked by the Italians, for the severity of his manners, and for the freedom of his discourses against Popery. And in others of his letters to Vossius and to J. Fr. Gronovius from Holland, Heinsius mentions how angry Salmasius was with him for commending Milton's book, and says that Graswinkelius had written something against Milton, which was to . have been printed by Elzevir, but it was suppressed by public authority.

The first reply that appeared was published in 1651, and intitled, An Apology for the King and People, &c. Apologia pro Rege & Populo Anglicano contra Johannis Polypragmatici (alias Miltoni Angli) Defensionem destructivam Regis & Populi Anglicani. JOHN MILTON.

Lis not known who was the author of this piece. Some attributed it to one Janus, a lawyer, of Gray's-Inn, and others to Dr John Bramhall, who was then Bishop of Derry, and was made Primate of Ireland after the Restoration : but it is utterly improbable, that so mean a performance, written in such barbarous Latin, and so full of solecisms, should come from the hands of a Prelate of such distinguished abilities and learning. But whoever was the author of it. Milton did not think it worth his while to animadvert upon it himself, but employed the younger of his nephews to answer it; but he supervised and corrected the answer so much before it went to the press, that it may in a manner be called his own. It came forth in 1652, under this title, Johannis Philippi Angli Responsio ad Apologiam Anonymi cujusdam Tenebrionis pro Rege & Populo Anglicano infantisimam; and it is printed with Milton's works; and throughout the whole Mr. Philips treats Bishop Bramhall with great severity as the author of the Apology, thinking probably that so considerable an adversary .Would make the answer more considerable.

Sir Robert Filmer likewise published some animadversions upon Milton's Defence of the People, in <sup>a</sup> piece printed in 1652, and intitled Observations concerning the Original of Government, upon Mr. Hobbes's Leviathan, Mr. Milton against Salmasius, and Hugo Grotius de Jure Belli; but I do not find that Milton, or any of his friends, took any notice of i; but Milton's quarrel was afterwards sufficiently avenged by Mr. Locke, who wrote against Sir Rebert Filmer's principles of government, more, I suppose in condescension to the prejudices of the age, than out of any regard to the weight or importance of Filmer's arguments.

It is probable that Milton, when he was first made Latin Secretary, removed from his house in High Holborn, to be nearer Whitehall: and for some time he had lodgings at one Thomson's, next door to the Bull-head Tavern, at Charing-Cross, opening into Spring-Garden, till the apartment appointed for him in Scotland-Yard could be got ready for his reception. He then removed thither : and there his third child, a son, was born, and named John. who, through the ill usage or bad constitution of the nurse, died an infant. His own health too was greatly impaired; and for the benefit of the air, he removed from his apartment in Scotland-Yard to a house in Petty-France, Westminster, which was next door to Lord Scudamore's, and opened into St. James's Park ; and there he remained eight years, from the year 1652 till within a few weeks of the King's Restoration. In this house he had not been settled long, before his first wife died in childbed : and his condition requiring some care and attendance, he was easily induced, after a proper interval of time, to marry a second, who was Catharine, daughter of Captain Woodcock, of Hackney; and she too died in childbed within a year after their marriage, and her child, who was a daughter, died in a month after her; and her husband has done honour to her memory in one of his Sonnets.

Two or three years before this second marriage he had totally lost his sight. And his enemies triumphed in his blindness, and imputed it as a judgment upon him for writing against the King ; but his sight had been decaying several years before, through his close application to study, and the frequent headakes to which he had been subject from his childhood, and his continual tampering with physic. which perhaps was more pernicious than all the rest : and he himself has informed us, in his second Defence, that when he was appointed by authority to write his Defence of the People against Salmasius, he had almost lost the sight of one eye, and the physicians declared to him that if he undertook that work, he would also lose the sight of the other : but he was no ways discouraged, and chose rather to lose both his eyes than desert what he thought his duty. It was the sight of his left eye that he lost first : and at the desire of his friend, Leonard Philaras, the Duke of Parma's Minister at Paris, he sent him a particular account of his case, and of the manner of his growing blind, for him to consult Theyenot the physician. who was reckoned famous in cases of the eyes. The letter is the fifteenth of his familiar epistles, is dated September 28, 1654: and is thus translated by Mr. Richardson.

" SINCE you advise me not to fling away all hopes of recovering my sight, for that you have a friend?

THE LIFE OF

Paris, Thevenot the physician, particularly far for the eyes, whom you offer to consult in my be if you receive from me an account by which he judge of the causes and symptoms of my diseas will do what you advise me to, that I may not s to refuse any assistance that is offered, perhaps f God.

" " I think 'tis about ten years, more or less, s I began to perceive that my eye-sight grew weak dim, and at the same time my spleen and bowels t opprest and troubled with Flatus; and in the me ing when I began to read, according to custom, eyes grew painful immediately, and to refuse re ing, but were refreshed after a moderate exercisi the body. A certain Iris began to surround the l of the candle if I looked at it : soon after which. the left part of the left eye (for that was some y sooner clouded) a mist arose which hid every tl on that side; and looking forward if I shut my r eye, objects appeared smaller. My other eye : for these last three years, failing by degrees, s months before all sight was abolished, things w I looked upon seemed to swim to the right left; certain inveterate vapours seem to possess forehead and temples, which, after meat especi: quite to evening, generally, urge and depress eyes with a sleepy heaviness. Nor would I o that whilst there was as yet some remainder of si I no sooner lay down in my bed, and turned on side, but a copious light dazzled out of my shut and as my sight diminished every day, colours gradually more obscure flashed out with vehemence; but now that the lucid is in a manner wholly extinct, a direct blackness, or else spotted, and, as it were, woven with ash-colour, is used to pour itself in. Nevertheless the constant and settled darkness that is before me, as well by night as by day, seems nearer to the whitish than the blackish; and the eye-rolling itself a little, seems to admit I know not what little smallness of light as through a chink."

JOHN MILTON.

But it does not appear what answer he received; we may presume none that administered any relief. His blindness, however, did not disable him entirely from Performing the business of his office. An assistant was allowed him, and his salary as Secretary still continued to him.

And there was farther occasion for his service, besides dictating of letters. For the controversy with Salmasius did not die with him, and there was published at the Hague, in 1652, a book intitled the Cry of the King's Blood, &c. Regii Sanguinis Clamor ad Colum adversus Parricidas Anglicanos. The true withor of this book was Peter du Moulin the younger, who was afterwards Prebendary of Canterbury; and he transmitted his papers to Salmasius; and Salmasius intrusted them to the care of Alexander Morus, a French Minister; and Morus published them with a dedication to King Charles II. in the mane of Adrian Ulac the printer, from whence has

came to be reputed the author of the whole. This Morus was the son of a learned Scotchman, who was President of the College, which the Protestants had formerly at Castres in Languedoc; and he is said to have been a man of a most haughty disposition, and immoderately addicted to women, hasty, ambitious. full of himself and his own performances, and satirical upon all others. He was, however, esteemed. one of the most eminent preachers of that age among the Protestants; but as Monsieur Bayle observes, his chief talent must have consisted in the gracefulness of his delivery, or in those sallies of imagination and quaint turns and allusions, whereof his sermons are full; for they retain not those charme in reading, which they were said to have formerly in the pulpit. Against this man, therefore, as the reputed author of Regii Sanguinis Clamor, &c. Milton published by authority his Second Defence of the People of England, Defensio Secunda pro Popular Anglicano, in 1654, and treats Morus with such severity as nothing could have excused, if he had not been provoked to it by so much abuse poured upor himself. There is one piece of his wit, which had been published before in the news-papers at Londona distich upon Morus, for getting Pontia, the maid servant of his friend Salmasius, with child.

> Galli ex concubitu gravidam te, Pontia, Mori Quis bene moratam morigeramque neget ?

From this Morus published his Fides Publica in answer to Milton, in which he inserted several testimonies of his orthodoxy and morals signed by the consistories, academies, synods, and magistrates of the places where he had lived; and disowned his being the author of the book imputed to him, and appealed to two gentlemen of great credit with the Parliament party, who knew the real author. This brought Du Moulin, who was then in England, into great danger; but the government suffered him to escape with impunity, rather than they would publicly contradict the great patron of their cause. For he still persisted in his accusation, and endeavoured to make it good in his defence of himself. Autoris pro se Defensio. which was published in 1655, wherein he opposed to the testimonies in favour of Morus other testimonies "Rainst him ; and Morus replied no more.

After this controversy was ended, he was at leisure again to pursue his own private studies, which were the History of England, before mentioned, and a new Thesaurus of the Latin tongue, intended as an improvement upon that by Robert Stephens; a work, which he had been long collecting from the best and purest Latin authors, and continued at times almost to his dying day: but his papers were left so confused and imperfect, that they could not be fitted for the press, though great use was made of them by the compilers of the Cambridge Dictionary printed in 1693. These papers are said to have consisted of three large volumes in folio; and it is a great pity that they are lost, and no account is given what it become of the manuscript. It is commonly said too that at this time he began his famous poem of Paradise Lost; and it is certain, that he was glad to be released from those controversies, which detained him so long from following things more agreeable to his natural genius and inclination, though he was far from ever repenting of his writings in defence of liberty, but gloried in them to the last.

The only interruption now of his private studies was the the business of his office. In 1655 there was published in Latin a writing in the name of the Lord Protector, setting forth the reasons of the war with Spain : and this piece is rightly adjudged to our author, both on account of the peculiar elegance of the stile, and because it was his province to write such things as Latin Secretary; and it is printed among his other prose-works in the last edition. And for the same reasons I am inclined to think. that the famous Latin verses to Christina Queen of Sweden in the name of Cromwell were made by our author rather than Andrew Marvel. In those days they had admirable intelligence in the Secretary's office; and Mr. Philips relates a memorable instance or two upon his own knowledge. The Dutch were sending a plenipotentiary to England to treat of peace; but the emissaries of the government had the art to procure a copy of his instructions in Holland, which were delivered by Milton to his kinsman which was then with him, to translate them for the use of the Council, before the said plenipotentiary had taken shipping for England : and an answer to all that he had in charge was prepared, and lay ready for him before he made his public entry into London. Another time a person came to London with a very sump. tuous train, pretending himself an agent from the Prince of Condé, who was then in arms against Cardinal Mazarine : but the government suspecting him, set their instruments to work so successfully. that in a few days they received intelligence from Paris, that he was a spy employed by Charles II : whereupon the very next morning Milton's kinsman was sent to him with an order of Council, commanding him to depart the kingdom within three days, or apect the punishment of a spy. This kinsman was in all probability Mr. Philips or his brother, who were Milton's nephews, and lived very much with him, and one or both of them were assistant to him in his office. His blindness no doubt was a great hindrance and inconvenience to him in his business, though sometimes a political use might be made of it; as mer's natural infirmities are often pleaded in excuse for not doing what they have no great inclination to do. Thus when Cromwell, as we may colbed from Whitlock, for some reasons delayed artfully to sign the treaty concluded with Sweden, and the Swedish Ambassador made frequent complaints of it, it was excused to him, because Mr. Milton on account of his blindness proceeded slower in business, and had not yet put the articles of the treaty inter Latin. Upon which the Ambassador was greatly surprised, that things of such consequence should be intrusted to a blind man, for he must necessarily employ an amanuensis, and that amanuensis might divulge the articles ; and said it was very wonderful, that there should be only one man in England who could write Latin, and he a blind one. But his blindness had not diminished, but rather increased the vigour of his mind : and his state-letters will remain as authentic memorials of those times, to be admired equally by critics and politicians; and those particularly about the sufferings of the poor Protestants in Piedmont, who can read without sensible emotion? This was a subject he had very much at heart, as he was an utter enemy to all sorts of persecution ; and among his sonnets there is a most excellent one upon the same occasion.

咸

But Oliver Cromwell being dead, and the government weak and unsettled in the hands of Richard and the Parliament, he thought it a seasonable time to offer his advice again to the public; and in 1659 published a Treatise of Civil Power in Ecclesiastica Causes; and another tract intitled Consideratione touching the likeliest Means to remove Hirelings out of the Church; both addressed to the Parliament & the commonwealth of England. And after the Parliament was dissolved, he wrote a letter to some Statesman, with whom he had a serious discourse the night before, concerning the ruptures of the commonwealth, and another, as it is supposed, to Ge steral Monk, being a brief Delineation of a Free Commonwealth, easy to be put in practice, and without delay. These two pieces were communicated in manuscript to Mr. Toland by a friend, who a little after Milton's death had them from his nephew ; and Mr. Toland gave them to be printed in the edition of our author's prose-works in 1698. But Milton, still finding that affairs were every day tending more and more to the subversion of the commonwealth, and the restoration of the royal family, published his Ready and Easy Way to establish a Free Commonwealth, and the Excellence thereof, compared with the Inconveniencies and Dangers of re-admitting Kingship in this Nation. We are informed by Mr. Wood, that he published this piece in February 1659-60: and after this he published Brief Notes upon a late Sermon intitled, the Fear of God and the King, preached by Dr. Matthew Griffith at Mercers Chapel, March 25, 1660: so bold and resolute was he in declaring his sentiments to the last, thinking that his voice was the voice of expiring liberty.

A little before the King's landing he was discharged from his office of Latin Secretary, and was forced to leave his house in Petty France, where he had lived eight years with great reputation, and had been visited by all foreigners of note, who could not go out of the country without seeing a man who did so much honour to it by his writings, and whose name was as well known and as famous abroad as in his own wa for; and by several persons of quality of be VOL. 1.

, particularly the pious and virtuous elagh, whose son for some time he instructed .e who was Paymaster of the Forces in King n's time; and by many learned and inger ends and acquaintance. particularly Andrew 1, and young Lawrence, son to the Presider liver's Council, to whom he has inscribed o is sonnets, and Marchamont Needham the writ Politicus, and above all Cyriac Skinner, whom h honoured with two sonnets. But now it was safe for him to appear any longer in public, so by the advice of some who wished him well and concerned for his preservation, he fled for shelt a friend's house in Bartholomew Close near ' Smithfield, where he lay concealed till the wor the storm was blown over. The first notice th find taken of him was on Saturday the 16th of 1660, when it was ordered by the House of mons, that his Majesty should be humbly no issue his proclamation for the calling in of N two books, his Defence of the People and clastes, and also Goodwyn's book intitled structors of Justice, written in justificatic murder of the late King, and to order th burnt by the hands of the common hangm at the same time it was ordered, that the General should proceed by way of indict formation against Milton and Goodwyn i their books, and that they themselves st for in custody of the Serjeant at Arms house.' On Wednesday June 27th an order of Council was made agreeable to the order of the House of Commons for a proclamation against Milton's and Goodwyn's books; and the proclamation was issued the 13th of August following, wherein it was said that the authors were fled or did abscond; and on Monday August 27th Milton's and Goodwyn's books were burnt according to the proclamation at the Old Baily by the hands of the common hangman. On Wednesday August 29th the act of indemnity was passed, which proved more favourable to Milton than could well have been expected; for though John Goodwyn Clerk was excepted among the twenty persons, who were to have penalties inflicted upon them, not extending to life, yet Milton was not excepted at all, and consequently was included in the general pardon. We find indeed that afterwards he was in custody of the Serieant at Arms ; but the time when he was taken into custody, is not certain. He was not in custody on the 12th of September, for that day a list of the prisoners in custody of the Serjeant at Arms was read in the House, and Milton is not among them; and on the 13th of September the House adjourned to the 6th of November. It is most probable therefore that after the act of indemnity was passed, and after the House had adjourned, he came out of his concealment, and was afterwards taken into custody of the Serjeant at Arms by virtue of the former order of the House of Commons : but we cannot find that he was prosecuted by the Attorney General, nor was he continued in cu. Saturday the 1 sth of Decem by the House of Commons, custody of the Serieant at A released, paving his fees; a of December, a complaint 1 jeant at Arms had demand imprisonment, it was refer privileges and elections to and to call Mr. Milton a them, and to determine wh the Serieant for his fees in was he at all times in defer the encroachments of power would yet be treated like This appears to be the mat collected partly from the I Commons, and partly from gister: and the clemency surely yery great towards his of his offences; for though King's judges and murder more to murder his characte of them all: and to what the that he was treated with su sily pardoned? It is certain powerful intercession for hi Parliament. It is said that ! Thomas Clargis greatly fa their interest in his behalf drew Marvel. member of Parliament for Hull, formed a considerable party for him in the House of Commons; and neither was Charles the Second (as Toland says) such an enemy to the muses, as to require his destruction. But the principal instrument in obtaining Milton's pardon was Sir William Davenant, out of gratitude for Milton's having procured his release, when he was taken prisoner in 1650. It was life fro life. Davenant had been saved by Milton's interest, and in return Milton was saved at Davenant's intercession. This story Mr. Richardson relates upon the authority of Mr. Pope; and Mr. Pope had it from Betterton the famous actor, who was first brought upon the stage and patronized by Sir William Davenant, and might therefore derive the knowledge of this transaction from the fountain.

è

Milton having thus obtained his pardon, and being set at liberty again, took a house in Holborn near Red Lion Fields; but he removed soon into Jewen-Street near Aldresgate-Street: and while he lived there, being in his 53d or 54th year, and blind and infirm, and wanting somebody better than servants to tend and look after him, he employed his friend Dr. Paget to choose a proper consort for him, and at his recommendation married his third wife, Elizabeth Minshul, of a gentleman's family in Cheshire, and related to Dr. Paget. It is said that an offer was made to Milton, as well as to Thurloe, of bolding the same place of Secretary under the King.

ં છુ

THE LIBE OR

which he had discharged with so much int and ability under Cromwell; but he persisted fusing it, though the wife pressed his compli-"Thou art in the right, says he; you, as women, would ride in your coach ; for me, m is to live and die an honest man." What is certain is, that in 1661 he published his Acce commenced Grammar, and a tract of Sir V Raleigh intitled Aphorisms of State; as in 16 had published another piece of Sir Walter R intitled the Cabinet Council discabinated, wh printed from a manuscript, that had lain many in his hands, and was given him for a true co a learned man at his death, who had collected ral such pieces : an evident sign, that he thou no mean employment, nor unworthy of a 1 genius, to be an editor of the works of gr thors. It was while he lived in Jewen-Stre Elwood the Quaker (as we learn from the h his life written by his own hand) was first int to read to him; for having wholly lost his kept always some body or other to perform fice, and usually the son of some gentlen acquaintance, whom he took in kindnes might at the same time improve him in hi Elwood was recommended to him by Dr. went to his house every afternoon exce and read to him such books in the Lati Milton thought proper. And Milton to if he would have the benefit of the L

66

not only to read and understand Latin authors, but to converse with foreigners either abroad or at home. he must learn the foreign pronunciation: and he instructed him how to read accordingly. And having a curious ear, he understood by my tone, says Elwood, when I understood what I read, and when I did not; and he would stop me and examine me, and open the most difficult passages to me. But it was not long after his third marriage, that he left Jewen-Street, and removed to a house in the Artillery Walk leading to Bunhill Fields : and this was his last stage in this world: he continued longer in this house than he had done in any other, and lived here to his dying day: only when the plague began to rage in London in 1665, he removed to a small house at Saint Giles Chalfont in Buckinghamshire, which Elwood had taken for him and his family; and there he remained during that dreadful calamity; but after the sickness was over, and the city was cleansed and made safely habitable again, he returned to his house in London.

His great work of Paradise Lost had principally engaged his thoughts for some years past, and was now compleated. It is probable, that his first detign of writing an epic poem was owing to his conversations at Naples with the Marquis of Villa about Tasso and his famous poem of the Delivery of Jetusalem; and in a copy of verses presented to that pobleman before he left Naples, he intimated his intention of fixing upon King Arthur for his hero.

In an Eclogue, made soon after his return to Eng upon the death of his friend and school fellow dati, he proposed the same design and the same ject, and declared his ambition of writing some in his native language, which might render his : illustrious in these islands, though he should b scure and inglorious to the rest of the world. in other parts of his works, after he had engage the controversies of the times, he still promisproduce some noble poem or other of a fitter sea but it doth not appear that he had then determ 'upon the subject, and King Arthur had another being reserved for the pen of Sir Richard Blackn The first hint of Paradise Lost is said to have taken from an Italian tragedy; and it is certain, he first designed it a tragedy himself, and there several plans of it in the form of a tragedy still t seen in the author's own manuscript, preserve the library of Trinity College, Cambridge. And probable, that he did not barely sketch out plans, but also wrote some parts of the drama it His nephew Philips informs us, that some of verses at the beginning of Satan's speech, addre to the sun, in the fourth book, were shown to and some others as designed for the beginnin the tragedy, several years before the poem begun : and many other passages might be produ which plainly appear to have been originally inte ed for the scene, and are not so properly of epic, as of the tragic strain. It was not till after was disengaged from the Salmasian controversy, which ended in 1655, that he began to mold the Paradise Lost in its present form ; but after the Restoration, when he was dismissed from public business, and freed from controversy of every kind, he prosecuted the work with closer application. Mr. Philips relates a very remarkable circumstance in the composure of this poem, which he says he had reason to remember, as it was told him by Milton himself, that his vein never happily flowed but from the autumnal equinox to the vernal, and that what he attempted at other times was not to his satisfaction. though he courted his fancy never so much. Mr. Toland imagines that Philips might be mistaken as to the time, because our author in his Latin elegy, written in his twentieth year, upon the approach of the spring, seemeth to say just the contrary, as if he could not make any verses to his satisfaction till the spring begun : and he says farther, that a judicious friend of Milton's informed him, that he could never compose well but in spring and autumn. But Mr. Richardson cannot comprehend, that either of these accounts is exactly true, or that a man with such a work in his head can suspend it for six months together, or only for one; it may go on more slowly, but it must go on : and this laying it aside is contrary to that eagerness to finish what was begun. which he says was his temper in his epistle to Deodati, dated Sept. 2, 1637. After all, Mr. Philips, who had the perusal of the poem from the beginning.

by twenty or thirty verses at a time, as it was co posed, and having not been shown any for a cor derable while as the summer came on, inquired the author the reason of it, could hardly be mistal with regard to the time : and it is easy to concei that the poem might go on much more slower summer than in other parts of the year; for notwi standing all that poets may say of the pleasures that season, I imagine most persons find by expe ence, that they can compose better at any other tir with more facility and with more spirit, than duri the heat and languor of summer. Whenever 1 poem was wrote, it was finished in 1665, and as ] wood says was shown to him that same year at Sa Giles Chalfont, whither Milton had retired to ave the plague, and it was lent to him to peruse it a give his judgment of it: and considering the di culties which the author lay under, his uneasiness account of the public affairs and his own, his a and infirmities, his gout and blindness, his not bei in circumstances to maintain an amanuensis. t obliged to make use of any hand that came next write his verses as he made them, it is really wc derful, that he should have the spirit to underta such a work, and much more that he should ever bri it to perfection. And after the poem was finishe still new difficulties retarded the publication of It was in danger of being suppressed through t malice or ignorance of the licencer, who took exce tion at some passages, and particularly at that no simile, in the first book, of the sun in an eclipse, in which he fancied that he had discovered treason. It was with difficulty too that the author could sell the copy; and he sold it at last only for five pounds, but Was to receive five pounds more after the sale of 1300 of the first impression, and five pounds more after the sale of as many of the second impression, and five more after the sale of as many of the third, and the number of each impression was not to exceed 1 500. What a poor consideration was this for such an inestimable performance ! and how much more do others get by the works of great authors, than the authors themselves ! This original contract with Samuel Simmons the printer is dated April 27, 1667, and was in thehands of the late Mr. Tonson the bookseller, as was kewise the manuscript of the first book copied fair for the press, with the Imprimateur by Thomas Tomkyns, chaplain to the Archbishop of Canterbury: <sup>10</sup> that though Milton was forced to make use of lifferent hands to write his verses from time to time is he had occasion, yet we may suppose that the "opy for the press was written all, or at least each Nok, by the same hand. The first edition in ten Noks was printed in a small quarto; and before it ould be disposed of, had three or more different itle-pages of the years 1667, 1668, and 1669. The ust sort was without the name of Simmons the rinter, and began with the poem immediately folowing the title-page, without any argument, or veface, or table of errata ; to others was prefixed.

short advertisement of the printer to the reade cerning the argument and the reason why the rimes not; and then followed the argument several books, and the preface concerning the of verse, and the table of errata: others again the argument and the preface, and the table rata, without that short advertisement of the p to the reader : and this was all the difference be them, except now and then of a point or a which were altered as the shects were printir So that, notwithstanding these variations, the still only one impression in quarto; and two almost elapsed, before 1300 copies could be so before the author was intitled to his secon pounds, for which his receipt is still in being, dated April 26, 1669. And this was probably : he received : for he lived not to enjoy the ben the second edition, which was not published year 1674, and that same year he died. The edition was printed in small octavo, and wa rected by the author himself, and the num books was augmented from ten to twelve, w addition of some few verses : and this alterati made with great judgment, not for the sake c a fanciful beauty as resembling the number of in the Æneid, but for the more regular disposi the poem, because the seventh and tenth bool before too long, and are more fitly divided ea The third edition was published in 167 1 WO. it appears that Milton had left his remaining the copy to his widow, and she agreed with Simmons the printer to accept eight pounds in full of all demands, and her receipt for the money is dated December 21, 1680. But a little before this, Simmons had covenanted to assign the whole right of copy to Brabazon Aylmer the bookseller for twenty-five pounds; and Aylmer afterwards sold it to old Jacob Tonson at two different times, one half on the 17th of August 1683, and the other half on the 24th of March 1690, with a considerable advance of the price: and except one fourth of it, which has been assigned to several persons, his family have enjoyed the right of copy ever since. By the last assignment it appears that the book was growing into repute, and rising in valuation : and to what perverseness could it be owing that it was not better received at first? We conceive there were principally two reasons ; the prejudices against the author on account of his principles and party; and many no doubt were offended with the novelty of a poem that was not in rime. Rymer, who was a redoubted critic in those days, would not so much as allow it to be a poem on this account; and declared war against Milton as well as against Shakespear; and threatened that he would Write reflections upon the Paradise Lost, which some (says he *) are pleased to call a poem, and would assert rime against the slender sophistry wherewith VOL. I. G

See Rymer's Tragedies of the last Age considered, p. 143-

the author attacks it. And such a man as ] Burnet maketh it a sort of objection to Miltor he affected to write in blank verse without And the same reason induced Dryden to tu principal parts of Paradise Lost into rime Opera called the State of Innocence and Fall of to tag his lines, as Milton himself expressed it. ing to the fashion then of wearing tags of m the end of their ribbons. We are told ind Mr. Richardson, that Sir George Hungerfo ancient member of parliament, told him, th John Denham came into the house one mornin a sheet of Paladise Lost wet from the press hand; and heing asked what he had there that he had part of the noblest poem that cy written in any language or in any age. He it is certain. that the book was unknown till two years after, when the Earl of Dorset pro it, as Mr. Richardson was informed by Dr. T: Robinson the "hysician, who had heard the often from Fleetwood Shephard himself, th Earl in company with Mr. Shephard, looking for books in Little Britain, accidentally met Paradise Lost; and being surprised at some p: in dipping here and there, he bought it. The seller begged his Lordship to speak in its fav he liked it, for the impression lay on his ha waste paper.

The Earl having read it, sent it to Dryden in a short time returned it with this answer; man cuts us all out and the ancients too:" Dryden's epigram upon Milton is too well known to be repeated; and those Latin verses by Dr. Barrow the physician, and the English ones by Andrew Marvel, Esq. usually prefixed to the Paradise Lost, were written before the second edition, and were published with it. But still the poem was not generally known and esteemed, nor met with the deserved applause, till after the edition in folio, which was published in 1688 by subscription.

The Duke of Buckingham in his Essay on Poetry prefers Tasso and Spenser to Milton: and it is related in the life of the witty Earl of Rochester, that he had no notion of a better poet than Cowley.

In 1686, or thereabout, Sir William Temple published the second part of his Miscellanies, and it may surprise any reader, that in his Essay on Poetry he taketh no notice at all of Milton; nay he saith ex-Pressly, that after Ariosto, Tasso, and Spenser, he knoweth none of the moderns who have made any atchievements in heroic poetry worth recording. And what can we think, that he had not read or heard of the Paradise Lost, or that the author's politics had prejudiced him against his poetry ? It was hippy that all great men were not of his mind. The bookseller was advised and encouraged to undertake the folio edition by Mr. Sommers, afterwards Lord Sommers, who not only subscribed himself, but was zealous in promoting the subscription; and in the hist of subscribers we find some of the most eminent names of that time, as the Earl of Dorset, Walle Dryden, Dr. Aldrich, Mr. Atterbury, and amor the rest Sir Roger Lestrange, though he had fo merly written a piece intitled No blind Guides, & against Milton's Notes upon Dr. Griffith's sermon

There were two editions more in folio, one I thin in 1692, the other in 1695, which was the six edition; for the poem was now so well received, th notwithstanding the price of it was four times great than before, the sale increased double the numb every year; as the bookseller, who should best know has informed us in his dedication of the small editions to Lord Sommers. Since that time, n only various editions have been printed, but al various notes and translations. The first perso who wrote annotations upon Paradise Lost was P. I or Patrick Hume, of whom we know nothing, u less his name may lead us to some knowledge his country; but he has the merit of being the fir (as I say) who wrote notes upon Paradise Lost, an his notes were printed at the end of the folio editic in 1605. Mr. Addison's Spectators upon the sul ject contributed not a little to establishing the chi racter, and illustrating the beauties of the poem. I 1732 appeared Dr. Bentley's new edition with notes and the year following Dr. Pearce published his Re view of the text, in which the chief of Dr. Bentley emendations are considered, and several other emer dations and observations are offered to the public The year after that. Messieurs Richardson, fath and son, published their explanatory notes and remarks.

the second se

The poem has been also translated into several languages, Latin, Italian, French and Dutch; and proposals have been made for translating it into Greek. The Dutch translation is in blank verse. and printed at Harlem. The French have a translation by Mons. Dupré de St. Maur; but nothing sheweth the weakness and imperfection of their language more, than that they have few or no good poetical versions of the greatest poets; they are forced to translate Homer, Virgil, and Milton into prose: blank verse their language has not harmony and dignity enough to support; their tragedies, and many of their comedies, are in rime. Rolli, the famous Italian master here in England, made an Italian translation; and Mr. Richardson the son saw another at Florence in manuscript by the learned Abbé Salvini, the same who translated Addison's Cato into Italian. One William Hog or Hogæus translated Paradise Lost, Paradise Regained, and Samson Agonistes, into Latin verse in 1690; but this version is very unworthy of the originals. There is a better translation of the Paradise Lost by Mr. Thomas Power, Fellow of Trinity College in Cambridge, the first book of which was printed in 1691, and the rest in manuscript is in the library of that College. The learned Dr. Trapp has also published translation into Latin verse; and the world is in. expectation of another, that will surpass all the rest, by Mr. William Dobson of New College in Oxfo So that by one means or other Milton is now cusidered as an English classic; and the Paradise I is generally esteemed the noblest and most subli of modern poems, and equal at least to the best the ancient; the honour of this country, and envy and admiration of all others!

In 1670 he published his History of Britain, t part especially now called England. He begai above twenty years before, but was frequently in rupted by other avocations: and he designed to h brought it down to his own times, but stopped at Norman conquest; for indeed he was not well: to pursue it any farther by reason of his blindn and he was engaged in other more delightful stud having a genius turned for poetry rather than histe When his History was printed, it was not prin perfect and intire; for the licenser expunged sev passages, which reflecting upon the pride and perstition of the Monks in the Saxon times, v understood as a concealed satire upon the Bishop Charles the Second's reign. But the author h self gave a copy of his unlicensed papers to the 1 of Anglesea, who, as well as several of the nob and gentry, constantly visited him: and in 168 considerable passage which had been suppressed the beginning of the third book, was published, ( taining a character of the Long Parliament and sembly of Divines in 1641, which was inserted in proper place in the last edition of 1738.

Bishop' Kennet begins his Complete History of England with this work of Milton, as being the best draught, the clearest and most authentic account of those early times; and his stile is freer and easier than in most of his other works, more plain and simple, less figurative and metaphorical, and better suited to the nature of history, has enough of the Latin turn and idiom to give it an air of antiquity, and sometimes rises to a surprising dignity and majesty.

In 1670 likewise his Paradise Regained and Samson Agonistes were licensed together, but were not published till the year following. It is somewhat remarkable, that these two poems were not printed by Simmons, the same who printed the Paradise Lost, but by J. M. for one Starkey in Fleet-Street; and what could induce Milton to have recourse to another printer? Was it because the former was not enough encouraged by the sale of Paradise Lost to become <sup>2</sup> purchaser of the other copies ? The first thought of Paradise Regained was owing to Elwood the quaker, as he himself relates the occasion in the history of his life. When Milton had lent him the manuscript of Paradise Lost at St. Giles Chalfont, as we said before, and he returned it, Milton asked him how he liked it, and what he thought of it: "Which I modestly, but freely told him," says Elwood: "and after some discourse about it, I pleasantly said to him, thou hast said much of Paradise Lost, but what hast thou to say of Paradise Found ? He made ne no answer, but sat some time in a muse; then broke off that discourse, and fell upon another When Elwood afterwards waited upon subject " him in London, Milton shewed him his Paradise Regained, and in a pleasant tone said to him, " This is owing to you, for you put it into my head by the question you put me at Chalfont, which before I had not thought of." It is commonly reported, that Milton himself preferred this poem to the Paradise Lost; but all that we can assert upon good authority is, that he could not endure to hear this poem tried down so much as it was, in comparison with the other. For certainly it is very worthy of the author. and contrary to what Mr. Toland relates, Milton may be seen in Paradisc Regained as well as in Paradise Lost; if it is inferior in poetry, I know not whether it is not superior in sentiment; if it is less descriptive, it is more argumentative; if it doth not sometimes rise so high, neither doth it ever sink so low : and it has not met with the approbation it deserves. only because it has not been more read and considered. His subject indeed is confined, and he has a narrow foundation to build upon ; but he has raised as noble a superstructure, as such little room and such scanty materials would allow. The great beauty of it is the contrast between the two characters of the Tempter and our Saviour, the artful sophistry and specious insinuations of the one refuted by the strong sense and manly eloquence of the other.

This poem has also been translated into French,

3

e.

Ю

ę.

ذ

1 2 1 together with some other pieces of Milton, Lycidas, L'Allegro, Il Penseroso, and the Ode on Christ's Nativity: and in 1732 was printed a Critical Dissertation with notes upon Paradise Regained, pointing out the beauties of it, written by Mr. Meadowcourt, Canon of Worcester: and the very learned and ingenious Mr. Jortin has added some observations upon this work at the end of his excellent Remarks upon Spenser, published in 1734: indeed this poem of Milton, to be more admired, needs only to be better known.

His Samson Agonistes is the only tragedy that he has finished, though he has sketched out the plans of several, and proposed the subjects of more, in his manuscript preserved in Trinity College Library; and we may suppose that he was determined to the choice of this particular subject by the similitude of his own circumstances to those of Samson, blind and among the Philistines. This I conceive to be the last of his poetical pieces; and it is written in the very spirit of the ancients, and equals, if not exceeds, any of the most perfect tragedies, which were ever exhibited on the Athenian stage, when Greece was in its glory. As this work was never intended for the stage, the division into acts and scenes is omitted. Bishop Atterbury had an intention of getting Mr. Pope to divide it into acts and scenes, and of having it acted by the King's Scholars at Westminster: but his commitment to the Tower put an end to that design. It has since been brought upon the stage in form of an Oratorio; and Mr. Handel's mu never employed to greater advantage, than wh is adapted to Milton's words. That great artis done equal justice to our author's L'Allegro a Penseroso, as if the same spirit possessed both ters, and as if the God of music and of verse still one and the same.

There are also some other pieces of Milton, f continued publishing to the last. In 1672 he lished Artis Logicæ plenior Institutio ad Petri Methodum concinnata, an Institution of Logic the method of Petrus Ramus; and the year fo ing, a treatise of True Religion and the best r to prevent the Growth of Popery, which had g increased through the connivance of the King the more open encouragement of the Duke of Y and the same year his poems, which had been t ed in 1545, were reprinted with the addition ( veral others. His familiar epistles and some a mical exercises, Epistolarum Familiarum, Lib. Prolusiones quædam Oratoriæ in Collegio Chris bitæ, were printed in 1674; as was also his tra tion out of Latin into English of the Poles De tion concerning the Election of their King John setting forth the virtues and merits of that Pi He wrote also a brief History of Muscovy, col from the relations of several travellers; but i not printed till after his death in 1682. He had wise his state letters transcribed at the request ( Danish resident, but neither were they print after his death, in 1676, and were translated into English in 1694; and to that translation a Life of Milton was prefixed by his nephew, Mr. Edward Philips: and at the end of that life his excellent sonnets to Fairfax, Cromwell, Sir Henry Vane, and Cyriac Skinner, on his blindness, were first printed. Besides these works, which were published, he wrote his system of divinity, which Mr. Toland says was in the hands of his friend Cyriac Skinner, but where .at present is uncertain. And Mr. Philips says, that he had prepared for the press an answer to some little scribbling quack in London, who had written a scurrilous libel against him; but whether by the dissuasion of friends, as thinking him a fellow not worth his notice, or for what other cause Mr. Philips knoweth not, this answer was never published. Indeed the best vindicator of him and his writings hath been Time. Posterity hath universally paid that honour to his merits, which was denied him by great part of his contemporaries.

After a life thus spent in study and labours for the public, he died of the gout at his house in Bunhill Row, on or about the 10th of November 1674, when he had within a month completed the sixty-sixth year of his age. It is not known when he was first attacked by the gout, but he was grievously afflicted with it several of the last years of his life, and was weakened to such a degree, that he died without a groan, and those in the room perceived not when he expired. His body was decently interred near that of his father (who had died very aged about the 1647) in the chancel of the church of St. G Cripplegate; and all his great and learned frien London, not without a friendly concourse of common people, paid their last respects in atten it to the grave.

Mr. Fenton, in his short but elegant accour the Life of Milton, speaking of our author's ha no monument, says, that " he desired a friend inquire at St. Giles's Church, where the se showed him a small monument, which he said supposed to be Milton's: but the inscription never been legible since he was employed in office, which he has possessed about forty ye This sure could never have happened in so she space of time, unless the epitaph had been indu ously erased : and that supposition, says Mr. Fen carries with it so much inhumanity, that I thinl ought to believe it was not erected to his memo. It is evident that it was not erected to his mem and that the sexton was mistaken. For Mr. To in his account of the Life of Milton says, tha was buried in the chancel of St. Giles's Chu " where the piety of his admirers will shortly ere monument becoming his worth and the encour ment of letters in King William's reign." plainly implies that no monument was erected to at that time, and this was written in 1698: and Fenton's account was first published, I think 1725; so that not above twenty-seven years in wened from the one account to the other; and consequently the sexton, who it is said had been possessed of his office about forty years, must have been mistaken, and the monument must have been designed for some other person, and not for Milton. A monument indeed has been erected to his memory in Westminster Abbey by Auditor Benson in the year 1737; but the best monument of him is his writings.

"

ī

In his youth he was esteemed extremely handsome. so that while he was a student at Cambridge, he was called the Lady of Christ's College. He had a very fine skin and fresh complexion; his hair was of a light brown, and parted on the foretop, hung down in curls waving upon his shoulders; his features were exact and regular; his voice agreeable and mutical; his habit clean and neat; his deportment erect and manly. He was middle-sized and well proportioned, neither tall nor short, neither too lean nor too corpulent, strong, and active in his younger years, and though afflicted with frequent head-akes, blindness, and gout, was yet a comely and well looking man to the last. His eyes were of a light blue colour, and from the first are said to have been none of the · brightest : but after he lost the sight of them (which happened about the forty-third year of his age) they still appeared without spot or blemish, and at first View, and at a little distance, it was not easy to know that he was blind.

Mr. Richardson had an account of him from an vol. 1.

ancient clergyman in Dorsetshire, Dr. W found him in a small house, which had but one room on a floor; in that, up stairs, which was hung with a rusty gr John Milton sitting in an elbow chair. clothes, and neat enough, pale but not his hands and fingers gouty, and with c among other discourse he expressed him purpose, that was he free from the pain his blindness would be tolerable. But less need to be particular in the descr person, as the idea of his face and cou pretty well known from the numerous prin busts, medals, and other representations been made of him. There are two pictur value than the rest, as they are undoubt and were in the possession of Milton's first was drawn when he was about twen is at present in the collection of the Rig able Arthur Onslow, Esq. Speaker of th Commons: the other in crayons was dra was about sixty-two, and was in the Mr. Richardson, but was afterwards purc Tonson. Several prints have been mad these pictures; and there is a print do was about sixty-two or sixty three, afte Faithorn, which, though not so handso perhaps be as true a resemblance as any It is prefixed to some of our author's pi the folio edition of his prose works in the printed in 1698.

In his way of living he was an example of sobriety and temperance. He was very sparing in the use of wine or strong liquors of any kind. Let meaner poets make use of such expedients to raise their fancy and kindle their imagination. 'He wanted not any artificial spirits; he had a natural fire, and poetic warmth enough of his own. He was likewise very abstemious in his dict, not fastidiously nice or delicate in the choice of his dishes, but content with any thing that was most in season, or easiest to be profured, eating and drinking (according to the distinction of the philosopher) that he might live, and not living that he might eat and drink. So that probaby his gout descended by inheritance from one or other of his parents; or if it was of his own acquiring, it must have been owing to his studious and edentary life. And yet he delighted sometimes in making and using exercise, but we hear nothing of his riding or hunting. Having early learned to fence, be was such a master of his sword, that he was not afraid of resenting an affront from any man; and before he lost his sight, his principal recreation was the exercise of his arms, but after he was confined by age and blindness, he had a machine to swing in for the preservation of his health. In his youth he Was accustomed to sit up late at his studies, and seldom went to bed before midnight; but afterwards, finding it to be the ruin of his eyes, and looking on this custom as very pernicious to health at any time, he used to go to rest early, soldom later than nine, and would be stirring in the summer at four. a: the winter at five in the morning; but if he wa disposed to rise at his usual hours, he still did n sleeping, but had some body or other by his bed to read to him. At his first rising he had usu: chapter read to him out of the Hebrew Bible. he commonly studied all the morning till tw then used some exercise for an hour, aftery dined, and after dinner played on the organ. either sung himself or made his wife sing, wh said) had a good voice but no ear; and the went up to study again till six, when his fr came to visit him and sat with him perhaps till e then he went down to supper, which was us olives or some light thing; and after suppe smoaked his pipe, and drank a glass of water, went to bed.

He loved the country, and commends it, as usually do; but after his return from his travels was very little there, except during the time o plague in London. The civil war might at firs tain him in town; and the pleasures of the cot were in a great measure lost to him, as they de mostly upon sight, whereas a blind man way company and conversation, which is to be had b in populous cities. But he was led out somet for the benefit of the fresh air, and in warm so weather he used to sit at the door of his house Bunhill Fields, and there, as well as in the he received the visits of persons of quality and dis tion; for he was no less visited to the last both by his own countrymen and foreigners, than he had been in his flourishing condition before the Restoration.

Some objections have indeed been made to his temper : and I remember there was a tradition in the · University of Cambridge, that he and Mr. King (whose death he laments in his Lycidas) were compritors for a fellowship, and when they were both equal in point of learning, Mr. King was preferred by the college for his character of good nature, which was wanting in the other; and this was by Milton grievously resented. But the difference of their ages, Milton being at least four years elder, tenders this story not very probable; besides, Mr. King was not elected by the college, but was made fellow by a royal mandate, so that there can be no tuth in the tradition : but if there was any, it is no ign of Milton's resentment, but a proof of his ge-Mercsity, that he could live in such friendship with a Accessful rival, and afterwards so passionately lament his decease. His method of writing controversy is Wyed as another argument of his want of temper : but some allowance must be made for the customs and manners of the time. Controversy, as well as war, was rougher and more barbarous in those days, than it is in these. And it is to be considered too. that his adversaries first began the attack ; they loadd him with much more personal abuse, only they had not the advantage of so much wit to season it. the had engaged with more candid and ingenuous disputants, he would have prefer and fair argument to wit and satire: "to my choice, and to have done thus was m as he expresses himself in the conclusio his controversial pieces. All who have v accounts of his life agree, that he was instructive in conversation, of an equal a temper; and yet I can easily believe, the sufficient sense of his own merits, and enough for his adversaries.

His merits indeed were singular ; for he not only of wonderful genius, but of imm ing and erudition; not only an incompa but a great mathematician, logician, his He was a master not only of the divine. Latin, but likewise of the Hebrew, Cl Syriac, as well as of the modern languag French, and Spanish. He was particular the Italian, which he always preferred to language, as all the men of letters did a in England; and he not only wrote eleg but is highly commended for his writings | learned of the Italians themselves, and es the members of that celebrated academy ( Crusca, which was established at Florence fining and perfecting of the Tuscan lans had read almost all authors, and impro even by romances, of which he had been younger years; and as the bee can extrac of weeds, so (to use his own words in ) for Smectymnuus) " those books, which to many others have been the fuel of wantonness and loose living, proved to him so many incitements to the love and observation of virtue." His favourite author after the Holy Scriptures was Homer. Homer he could repeat almost all without book; and he was advised to undertake a translation of his works. which no doubt he would have executed to admiration. But (as he says of himself in his postscript to the Judgment of Martin Bucer) " he never could delight in long citations, much less in whole traductions." And accordingly there are few things, and those of no great length, which he has ever translated. He was possessed too much of an original genius to be a mere copyer : "Whether it be natural disposition, says he, or education in me, or that my mother bore me a speaker of what God made my own, and not a translator." And it is somewhat remarkable. that there is scarce any author who has written so much, and upon such various subjects, and yet quotes so little from his contemporary authors, or so seldom mentions any of them. He Praises Selden indeed in more places than one, but for the rest he appears disposed to censure rather than commend.

After his severer studies, and after dinner, as we observed before, he used to divert and unbend his mind with playing upon the organ or bass-viol, which was a great relief to him after he had lost his sight for he was a master of music as was his father, he could perform both vocally and instrumentally ; and it is said that he composed very well, though nothing of this kind is handed down to us. It is also said that he had some skill in painting as well as im music, and that somewhere or other there is a head of Milton drawn by himself: but he was blessed with so many real excellencies, that there is no want of fictitious ones to raise and adorn his character. He had a quick apprehension, a sublime imagination, a strong memory, a piercing judgment, a wit alway's ready, and facetious or grave as the occasion required : and I know not whether the loss of his sight did not add vigour to the faculties of the mind. He at least thought so, and often comforted himself with that reflection.

But his great parts and learning have scarcely gained him more admirers, than his political principles have raised him enemies. And yet the darling passion of his soul was the love of liberty; this was his constant aim and end, however he might be miss taken in the means. He was indeed very zealous in what was called the good old-cause, and with his spi rit and his resolution, it is somewhat wonderful the he never ventured his person in the civil war; best though he was not in arms, he was not unaftive, and though the spin than by his sword. He was a thorough republican, and in this he thought like Greek or Roman, as he was very conversant with their writings. One day Sir Robert Howard, wh

:

1

is a friend to Milton as well as to the libertics of s country, and was one of his constant visitors to le last, inquired of him how he came to side with he republicans. Milton answered among other reaions, because theirs was the most fingal government, for the trappings of a monarchy might set up an ordinary commonwealth. But then his attachment to Cromwell must be condemned, as being neither consistent with his republican principles, nor with his love of liberty. And I know no other way of accounting for his conduct, but by presuming (as I think we may reasonably presume) that he was far from entirely approving of Cromwell's proceedings, but considered him as the only person who could rescue the nation from the tyranny of the Presbyterians, who he saw were erecting a worse dominion of their own upon the ruins of a prelatical episcopacy; and of ail things he dreaded spiritual slavery, and therefore closed with Cromwell and the Independents, as he expected under them greater liberty of conscience. And though he served Cromwell, yet it must be said for him, that he served a great master, and served him ably, and was not wanting from time to time in giving him excellent good edvice, especially in his second Defence : and so little being said of him in all Secretary Thurloe's state papers, it appears that he had no great share in the secrets and intrigues of government; what he dispatched was little more than matters of necessary form, letters and questions to foreign states : and he may be justified for acting in such a station, upon the same principle as Sir Matthew Hale for holding a judge's commission under the usurper: and in the latter part of his life he frequently expressed to his friends his entire satisfaction of mind that he had constantly employed his etrength and faculties in the defence of liberty, and in opposition to slavery.

In matters of religion too he has given as great offence, or even greater, than by his political princhples. But still let not the infidel glory: no such man was ever of that party. He had the advantage of a pious education, and ever expressed the profoundest reverence of the Deity in his words and actions, was both a Christian and a protestant, and studied and admired the Holy Scriptures above all other books whatsoever; and in all his writings he plainly showeth a religious turn of mind, as well in verse as in prose, as well in his works of an earlier date as in those of a later composition. When he wrote the Doctrine and Discipline of Divorce he appears to have been a Calvinist ; but afterwards he entertained a more favourable opinion of Arminius. Some have inclined to believe, that he was an Arian $ but there are more express passages in his works to overthrow this opinion, than any there are to confirm For in the conclusion of his treatise of Reforit. mation he thus solemnly invokes the Trinity; " Thou therefore that sittest in light and glory unapproachable, Parent of Angels and Men! next thee I implor Omnipotent King, Redeemer of that lost remnant whose nature thou didst assume, ineffable and everlasting Love! And thou the third subsistence of divine infinitude, illumining the Spirit, the joy and place of created things! one Tri-personal Godhead! look upon this thy poor, and almost spent and expiring church, &c." In his tract of Prelatical Episcopacy he endeavours to prove the spuriousness. of some epistles attributed to Ignatius, because they contained in them heresies, one of which heresies is, that " he condemns them for ministers of Satan, who say that Christ is God above all." And a little after in the same tract he objects to the authority of Tertullian, because he went about to " prove an imranty between God the Father and God the Son."-And in the Paradise Lost we shall find nothing upon this head, that is not perfectly agreeable to Scripture. The learned Dr. Irapp, who was as likely to cry out upon heresy as any man, asserts that the poem is orthodox in every part of it; or otherwise he would not have been at the pains of translating it. Neque alienum videtur a studiis viri theologi poema magna ex parte theologicum; omni ex parte (rideant, per me licet, atque ringantur athei et infideles) orthodoxum.

94

Milton was indeed a dissenter from the Church of Ingland, in which he had been cducated, and was by his parents designed for hely orders, as we related before; but he was led away by early prejudices against the doctrine and discipline of the Church in his fourger years he was a favourer of the Presbyterians,

; J

1

5

1

e

in his middle age he was best pleased with the pendents and Anabaptists, as allowing greater l of conscience than others, and coming nearest opinion to the primitive practice; in the latte of his life he was not a professed member o particular sect of Christians, he frequented no lic worship, nor used any religious rite in his fa Whether so many different forms of worship had seen, had made him indifferent to all form whether he thought that all Christians had in things corrupted the purity and simplicity . Gospel; or whether he disliked their endless ar charitable disputes, and that love of dominion inclination to persecution, which he said was a of popery inseparable from all churches; or wl he believed, that a man might be a good Chu without joining in any communion; or wheth did not look upon himself as inspired, as wra in God, and above all forms and ceremonies not easy to determine : to his own master he stand falleth: but if he was of any denomination, he sort of a Quietist, and was full of the interi religion though he so little regarded the ext and it is certain was to the last an enthusiast : than an infidel. As enthusiasm made Norris a so poetry might make Milton an enthusiast.

His circumstances were never very mean, no: great; for he lived above want, and was not upon accumulating wealth; his ambition was to enrich and adorn his mind. His father sup him in his travels, and for some time after. Then his pupils must have been of some advantage to him. and brought him either a certain stipend or considerable presents at least ; and he had scarcely any other method of improving his fortune, as he was of no profession. When his father died, he inherited an elder son's share of his estate, the principal part of which I believe was his house in Bread-Street: and not long after, he was appointed Latin Secretary with a salary of 2001. a year; so that he was now in opulent circumstances for a man, who had always led a frugal and temperate life, and was at little unnecessary expence besides buying of books. Though he was of the victorious party, yet he was far from sharing in the spoils of his country. On the contrary, (as we learn from his second Defence) he sustained great losses during the civil war, and was not at all favoured in the imposition of taxes, but sometimes paid beyond his due proportion. And upon a turn of affairs he was not only deprived of his place, but also lost 20001. which he had for security and improvement put into the Excise Office. He lost likewise another considerable sum for want of proper care and management, as persons of Milton's genius are seldom expert in money matters. In the fire of London his house in Bread-Street was burnt, before which accident foreigners have gone out of devotion (says Wood) to see the house and chamber where he was born. His gains were inconsiderable in proportion to his losses; for excepting the thousand VOL. I. 1 pounds, which were given him by the government; for writing his Defence of the people against Salmasius, we may conclude that he got very little by thecopies of his works, when it doth not appear that hereceived any more than ten pounds for Paradise Lost. Some time before he died he sold the greatest part of his library, as his heirs were not qualified to make a proper use of it, and as he thought that he could dispose of it to greater advantage than they could after his decease. Finally, by one means or other he died worth one thousand five hundred pounds besides his household goods, which was no incompetent subsistence for him, who was as great a philosopher as a poet.

96

To this account of Milton it may be proper to add something concerning his family. We said before, that he had a younger brother and a sister. His brother Christopher Milton was a man of totally opposite principles; was a strong royalist, and after the civil war made his composition through his brother "s. interest; had been entered young a student in the Inner Temple, of which house he lived to be an ancient bencher; and being a professed papist, was in the reign of James II. made a judge and knighted ; but soon obtained his quietus by reason of his a3e and infirmitics, and retired to Ipswich, where he lived all the latter part of his life. His sister Anne. Milton had a considerable fortune given her by her father in marriage with Mr. Edward Philips (son of Mr. Edward Philips of Shrewsbury) who coming young to London was bred up in the Crown Office in thancery, and at length became secondary of the office under Mr. Bembo. By him she had, besides other children who died infants, two sons, Edward and John, whom we have had frequent occasion to mention before.

anong our author's juvenile poems there is a copy of vises on the death of a fair infant, a nephew, or rather niece of his, dying of a cough; and this being written in his 17th year, as it is said in the title, it may be naturally inferred that Mrs. Philips was elder than either of her brothers. She had likewise two daughters, Mary who died very young, and Anne who was living in 1694, by a second hubband Mr. Thomas Agar, who succeeded his intimate friend Mr. Philips in his place in the Crown Office, which he enjoyed many years, and left to Mr. Thomas Milton, son of Sir Christopher before mentioned.

As for Milton himself he appears to have been to enemy to the fair sex by having had three wives. What fortune he had with any of them is no where said, but they were gentlemen's daughters; and it is remarkable that he married them all maidens, for (as he says in his Apology for Smectymnuus, which was written before he married at all) he "thought with them, who both in prudence and elegance of spirit would choose a virgin of mean fortunes honestly bred before the wealthiest widow." But yet he seemeth not to have been very happy in any of his marriages; for his first wife had justly offended him by her long absence and separation from hi the second, whose love, sweetness and goodness commends, lived not a twelvemonth with him; his third wife is said to have been a woman of a n vielent spirit, and a hard mother-in-law to his c dren. She died very old, about twenty years : at Nantwich in Cheshire ; and from the account: those who had seen her. I have learned, that confirmed several things which have been related before; and particularly that her husband used compose his poetry chiefly in winter, and on waking in a morning would make her write de sometimes twenty or thirty verses: and being as whether he did not often read Homer and Vin she understood it as an imputation upon him stealing from those authors, and answered y eagerness that he stole from nobody but the M who inspired him; and being asked by a lady sent who the Muse was, replied it was God's gr and the Holy Spirit that visited him nightly. was likewise asked whom he approved most of English poets, and answered Spenser, Shakesp and Cowley: and being asked what he though Dryden, she said Dryden used sometimes to v him, but he thought him no poet, but a good rim but this was before Dryden had composed his l poems, which made his name so famous afterway She was wont moreover to say, that her husband applied to by message from the King, and inv to write for the Court, but his answer was, "

100

JOHN MILTON.

ł

÷

such a behaviour would be very inconsistent with his former conduct, for he had never yet employed his pen against his conscience.

By his first wife he had four children, a son who died an infant, and three daughters who survived him; by his second wife he had only one daughter, who died soon after her mother, who died in childbed; and by his last wife he had no children at all. His daughters were not sent to school, but were instructed by a mistress kept at home for that purpose : and he himself, excusing the eldest on account of an impediment in her speech, taught the two others to read and pronounce Greek and Latin, and several other languages, without understanding any but English, for he used to say that one tongue was enough for a woman; but this employment was very irksome to them, and this, together with the sharpness and severity of their mother-in-law, made them very uneasy at home; and therefore they were <sup>all</sup> sent abroad to learn things more proper for them, and particularly embroidery in gold and silver.

As Milton at his death left his affairs very much in the power of his widow, though she acknowledged that he died worth one thousand five hundred pounds, yet she allowed but one hundred pounds to each of his three daughters. Anne the eldest was decrepit and deformed, but had a very handsome face; she married a master-builder, and died in child-bed of her first child, who died with her. Mary the second lived and died single. Deborah the youngest in ber father's life-time went over to Ireland with and afterwards was married to Mr. Abraham a weaver in Spittal Fields, and died in Augu in the 76th year of her age. She is said to h a woman of good understanding and genter viour, though in low circumstances. As been often called upon to read Homer and Metamorphosis to her father, she could have : a considerable number of verses from the be of both these poets, as Mr. Ward, Professor toric in Gresham College, relates upon 1 knowledge: and another gentleman has in me, that he has heard her repeat several verwise out of Euripides. Mr. Addison, and ti gentlemen, who had opportunities of seei knew her immediately to be Milton's daus the similitude of her countenance to her picture: and Mr. Addison made her a ha present of a purse of guineas, with a promise curing for her some annual provision for l but his death happening soon after, she 1 benefit of his generous design. She receiv sents likewise from several other gentlem Queen Caroline sent her fifty pounds by th of Dr. Friend the physician. She had ten cl seven sons and three daughters; but none of had any children, except one of her sons Caleb, aud one of her daughters named Eli Caleb went to Fort St. George in the East where he married, and had two sons, Abral Isaac ; the elder of whom came to England

JOHN MILTON.

ŗ.

.÷.

-

:n

late governor Harrison, but returned upon advice of his father's death. and whether he or his brother be now living is uncertain. Elizabeth, the youngest child of Mrs. Clarke, was married to Mr. Thomas Foster a weaver in Spittal Fields, and had seven children who are all dead; and she herself is aged, about sixty, and weak and infirm. She seemeth to be a good plain sensible woman, and has confirmed several particulars related above, and informed me of some others, which she had often heard from her mother: that her grand-father lost two thousand pounds by a money-scrivener, whom he had entrusted with that sum, and likewise an estate at Westminster of sixty pounds a year, which belonged to the Dean and Chapter, and was restored to them at the Restoration; that he was very temperate in his eating and drinking, but what he had he always loved to have of the best: that he seldom went abroad in the latter part of his life, but was visited even then by persons of distinction, both foreigners and others: that he kept his daughters at a great distance, and Would not allow them to learn to write, which he thought unnecessary for a woman : that her mother Washis greatest favourite, and could read in seven or eight languages, though she understood none but English: that her mother inherited his head-akes and disorders, and had such a weakness in her eyes, that she was forced to make use of spectacles from the age of eighteen; and she herself, she says, has "?t been able to read a chapter in the Bible these Wenty years: that she was mistaken in informing

103

Mr. Birch, what he had printed upon her authority that Milton's father was born in France ; and a bro ther of hers who was then living was very angry wit. her for it, and like a true-born Englishman resente it highly, that the family should be thought to bea. any relation to France: that Milton's second wife did not die in child-bed, as Mr. Philips and Toland relate, but above three months after of a consumption; and this too Mr. Birch relates upon her authority; but in this particular she must be mistaken as well as in the other, for our author's sonnet on his deceased wife plainly implies, that she died in childbed. She knows nothing of her aunt Philips or Agar's descendants, but believes that they are all extinct : as is likewise Sir Christopher Milton's family, the last of which, she says, were two maiden sisters. Mrs. Mary and Mrs. Catharine Milton, who lived and died at Highgate; but unknown to her, there is a Mrs. Milton living in Grosvenor-street, the grand-daughter of Sir Christopher, and the daughter of Mr. Thomas Milton before-mentioned : and the herself is the only survivor of Milton's own family, unless there be some in the East Indies, which she very much questions, for she used to hear from them sometimes, but has heard nothing now for several years; so that in all probability Milton's whole family will be extinct with her, and he can live only in his writings. And such is the caprice of fortune, this grand-daughter of a man, who will be an everlasting glory to the nation, has now for some years with her husband kept a little chandler's or grocer's shop for their subsistence, lately at the lower Halloway, in the road between Highgate and London, and at present in Cock-lane, not far from Shoreditch Church. Another thing let me mention, that is equally to the honour of the present age. Though Milton received not above ten pounds, at two different payments for the copy of Paradise Lost, yet Mr. Hoyle, author of the treatise on the Game of Whist, after having disposed of all the first impression, sold the copy to the bookseller, as I have been informed, for two hundred guineas.

JOHN MILTON.

As we have had occasion to mention more than once Milton's manuscripts, preserved in the library of Trinity College in Cambridge, it may not be ungrateful to the reader, if we give a more particular account of them before we conclude. There are. as We said, two draughts of a letter to a friend who had importuned him to take orders, together with a sonnet on his being arrived to the age of twenty-three; and by there being two draughts of this letter, with several alterations and additions, it appears to have been written with great care and deliberation; and both the draughts have been published by Mr. Birch in his Historical and Critical Account of the Life and Writings of Milton. There are also several of his Poems, Arcades; At a Solemn Music; On Time; Upon the Circumcision; the Mask; Lycidas; with five or six of his son: cts, all in his own hand-writing ; and there are some others of his sonnets written by different hands, being most of them composed after he had lost his sight. It is curious to see the first thoughts and subsequent corrections c a poet as Milton; but it is remarkable these manuscript poems, he doth not ofter stops, or begin his lines with great letter are likewise in his own hand-writing, diffe of Paradise Lost, in the form of a traged is an agreeable amusement to trace the gr gress and improvement of such a work fro dawnings in the plan of a tragedy to its ful an epic poem. Together with the plans o Lost, there are the plans or subjects of sev intended tragedies, some taken from the others from the British or Scottish historie the latter, the last mentioned is Macbeth had an inclination to try his strength w spear; and to reduce the play more to th he proposes " beginning at the arrival of at Macduff: the matter of Duncan may be by the appearing of his ghost."

These manuscripts of Milton were fou learned Mr. Professor Mason, among some papers, which, he says, belonged to Sir He ton Puckering, who was a considerable be the library; and for the better preservatic truly valuable reliques, they were collected and handsomely bound in a thin folio, by and at the charge, of a person who is now nent in his profession, and was always a le Muses, and at that time a Fellow of Trinit Mr. Clarke, one of his Majesty's counsel

I N

PARADISUM AMISSAM

SUMMI POETAL

JOHANNIS MILTONI.

QUI legis Amissam Paradisum, grandia magni Carmina Miltoni, quid nisi cuncta legis ? Res cunctas, et cunctarum primordia rerum, Et fata, & fines continet iste liber. Intima panduntur magni penetralia mundi, Scribitur & toto quicquid in orbe latet : Terræque, tractusque maris, cælumque profundum, Sulphureumque Erebi, flammivomumque specus : Quæque colunt terras, pontumque, & Tartara cæca, Quæque colunt summi lucida regna poli : Et quodcunque ullis conclusum est finibus usquame Et sine fine Chaos, et sine fine Deus ; Et sine fine magis, si quid magis est sine fine, In Christo erga homines conciliatus amor. Hæc qui speraret quis crederet esse futura? Et tamen hæc hodie terra Britanna legit. Quantos in bella duces! quæ protulit arma 🕻 Que canit, & quanta praelia dira tuba I.

Calestes acies; atque in certamine colum ! Et quæ cœlestes pugna deceret agros ! Quantus in æthereis tollit se Lucifer armis ! Atque ipso graditur vix Michaele minor ! Quantis, & quam funestis concurritur iris, Dum ferus hic stellas protegit, ille rapit ! Dum vulsos montes ceu tela reciproca torquent. Et non mortali desuper igne pluunt : Stat dubius cui se parti concedat Olympus. Et metuit pugnæ non superesse suæ. At simul in cœlis Messiæ insignia fulgent, Et carrus animes, armaque digna Deo, Horrendumque rotæ strident, et sæva rotarum Erumpunt torvis fulgura luminibus, Et flammæ vibrant, & vera tonitrua rauco Admistis flammis insonuere polo: Excidit attonitis mens omnis, & impetus omnis. Et cassis dextris irrita tela cadunt : Ad pænas fugiunt, & ceu foret Orcus asylum. Infernis certant condere se tenebris. Cedite Romani Scriptores, cedite Graii, Et quos fama recens vel celebravit anus. Hæc quicunque leget tantum cecinisse putabit

Mæonidem ranas, Virgilium culices.

SAMUEL BARROW, M. D.

O N

PARADISE LOST.

WHEN I beheld the Poet blind, yet bold, In slender book his vast design unfold, Messiah crown'd, God's reconcil'd decree, Rebelling Angels, the forbidden tree, Heaven, Hell, Earth, Chaos, all; the argument Held me a while misdoubting his intent, That he would ruin (for I saw him strong) The sacred truths to fable and old song, (So Sampson grop'd the temple's posts in spite) The world o'erwhelming to revenge his sight.

Yet as I read, soon growing less severe, I lik'd his project, the success did fear; Through that wide field how he his way should find, O'er which lame faith leads understanding blind; Lest he perplex'd the things he would explain, And what was easy he should render vain.

Or if a work so infinite he spann'd, Jealous I was that some less skilful hand (Such as disquiet always what is well, And by ill imitating would excel) POL. I.

108 MARVEL ON PARADISE LOST.

Might hence presume the whole creation's day To change in scenes, and show it in a play.

Pardon me, mighty Poet, nor despise My causeless, yet not impious, surmise. But I am now convinc'd, and none will dare Within thy labours to pretend a share. Thou hast not miss'd one thought that could be fit, And all that was improper dost omit: So that no room is here for writers left, But to detect their ignorance or theft.

That majesty which through thy work doth reign, Draws the devout, deterring the profane. And things divine thou treat'st of in such state As them preserves, and thee, inviolate. At once delight and horror on us seise, Thou sing'st with so much gravity and ease; And above human flight dost soar aloft With plume so strong, so equal, and so soft. The bird nam'd from that Paradise you sing So never flags, but always keeps on wing.

Where couldst thou words of such a compass find ? Whence furnish such a vast expanse of mind? Just Heav'n'thee like Tiresias to requite Rewards with prophecy thy loss of sight.

Well might'st thou scorn thy readers to allure With tinkling rhyme, of thy own sense secure; While the Town-Bays writes all the while and spells,

And like a pack horse tires without his bells ;

MARVEL ON PARADISE LOST.

Their fancies like our bushy-points appear, The poets tag them, we for fashion wear. I too transported by the mode offend, And while I meant to praise thee must commend. Thy verse created like thy theme sublime, In number, weight, and measure, needs not rhyme.

ANDREW MARVEL.

109

THE measure is English heroic verse with as that of Homer in Greek, and of Virg rime being no necessary adjunct or true ( poem or good verse, in longer works esp the invention of a barbarous age, to set o matter and lame meter; graced indeed s use of some famous modern poets, carrie custom, but much to their own vexation. and constraint to express many things other for the most part worse than else they v expressed them. Not without cause there both Italian and Spanish poets of prime not jected rhyme both in longer and shorter wo also long since our best English tragedies, of itself, to all judicious ears, trivial and musical delight : which consists only in ap fit quantity of syllables, and the sense drawn out from one verse into another. jingling sound of like endings, a fault a the learned Ancients, both in poetry and oratory. This neglect then of rhyme so lit taken for a defect, though it may seem so vulgar readers, that it rather is to be esteen ample set, the first in English, of ancient covered to heroic poem, from the trouble modern bondage of rhyming.

A CRITIQUE

UPON THE

PARADISE LOST.

B Y

MR. ADDISON.

Cedite Romani Scriptores, Cedite Graii.

PROPERTS

THERE is nothing in nature more irksome than general discourses, especially when they turn chiefly upon words. For this reason I shall wave the discussion of that point which was started some years since, whether Milton's Paradise Lost may be called an Heroic Poem ? Those who will not give it that title, may call it, (if they please) a Divine Poem. It will be sufficient to its perfection, if it has in it all the beauties of the highest kind of poetry; and as for those who allege it is not an heroic poen, they advance no more to the diminution of it, than if they should say Adam is not Abeneas, nor Eve Helen.

I shall therefore examine it by the rules of epic poetry, and see whether it falls short of the Iliad or Æneid, in the beauties which are essential to that kind of writing. The first thing to be considered in an epic poem is the Fable, which is perfect or imperfect, according as the action which it relates is more or less so. This action should have three qualifications in it. First it should be but one action. Secondly, it should be an entire action; and Thirdly, it should be a great action. To consider the action of the Iliad, Eneid, and Paradise Lost, in these three several lights. Homer, to preserve the unity of his action, hastens into the midst of things, as Horace has observed : had he gone up to Leda's egg, or begun much later, even at the rape of Helen, or the investing of Troy, it is manifest that the story of the poem would have been a series of several actions. He therefore opens his poem with the discord of his princes, and artfully interweaves, in the several succeeding Parts of it, an account of every thing material which ro-

t

lates to them, and had passed before this fatal dissent iAfter the same manner, Æneas makes his first appear:

n the Tyrrhene seas, and within sight of Italy, bec the action proposed to be celebrated was that of his sett himself in Latium. But because it was necessary for reader to know what had happened to him in the takir Troy, and in the preceding parts of his voyage, V makes his hero relate it by way of episode in the second third books of the Æneid: the contents of both w books come before those of the first book in the three the story, though for preserving of this unity of ac they follow it in the disposition of the poem. Miltor imitation of these two great poets, opens his Paradise with an infernal council plotting the fall of Man, whi the action he proposed to celebrate; and as for those actions, the battle of the Angels, and the creation of world, (which preceded in point of time, and which it opinion, would have entirely destroyed the unity of his; cipal action, had he related them in the same order they happened) he cast them into the fifth, sixth, and venth books, by way of episode to this noble poem.

Àristotle himself allows, that Homer has nothin boast of as to the unity of his fable, thrugh at the time that great critic and philosopher endeavours to pa this imperfection in the Greek poet, by imputing it in measure to the very nature of an epic poem. Some been of opinion, that the Æneid also labours in this ticular, and has episodes which may be looked upon a crescencies rather than as parts of the action. On contrary, the poem, which we have now under cur sideration, hath no other episodes than such as natu arise from the subject, and yet is filled with such a m tude of astonishing incidents, that it gives us at the time a pleasure of the greatest variety, and of the gre simplicity; uniform in its nature, though diversified i execution.

I must observe also, that, as Virgil in the poem v was designed to celebrate the original of the Romar pire, has described the birth of its great rival, the Ca ginian commonwealth: Milton, with the like at prem on the fall of Man, has related the fall of those Angels who are his professed enemies. Beside the many other beauties in such an episode, its running parallel with the Breat action of the poem, hinders it from breaking the unity so much as another episode would have done, that had not so great an affinity with the principal subject. In short this is the same kind of beauty which the critics admire in the Spanish Fryar, or the Double Discovery, where the two different plots look like counterparts and copies of one another.

PARADISE LOST.

The second qualification required in the action of an epic poem is, that it should be an entire action : an action is entire when it is complete in all its parts; or as Aristotle describes it. when it consists of a beginning, a middle, and an end. Nothing should go before it, be intermixed with it, or follow after it, that is not related to it. As on the contrary, no single step should be omitted in that just and regular progress which it must be supposed to take from its original to its consummation. Thus we see the anger of Achilles in its birth, its continuance, and effects; and Æneas's settlement in Italy, carried on through all the oppositions in his way to it both by sea and land. The action in Milton excels (I think) both the former in this Particular; we see it contrived in Hell, executed upon Earth, and purished by Heaven. The parts of it are told in the most distinct manner, and grow out of one another in the most natural order.

The third qualification of an epic poem is its greatness. The anger of Achillts was of such consequence, that it embroiled the kings of Greece, destroyed the heroes of Asia, and engaged all the Gods in factions. Æncas's settlement in Italy produced the Casars, and gave birth to the Roman empire. Milton s subject was still greater than either of the former; it does not determine the fate of single peisons of Hell are jointd together for the destruction of mankind, which they cflected in part, and would have completed, had are Man io his greatest periceticn, and Woman in her his hest beauty. Their enemies are the fallen Angels: the Messiah their friend, and the Almighty their protector. In short, every thing that is great in the whole circle of being, whether within the verge of nature, or out of it, has a proper part assigned it in this admirable poem.

In poetry, as in architecture, not only the whole, but the principal members, and every part of them, should be great. I will not presume to say, that the book of games in the Æneid, or that in the Iliad, are not of this nature; nor to reprehend Virgil's simile of the top, and many other of the same kind in the Iliad, as liable to any censure in this particular; but I think we may say, without derogating from those wonderful performances, that there is an indisputable and unquestioned magnificence in every part of Paradise Lost, and indeed a much greater than could have been formed upon any pagan system.

But Aristotle, by the greatness of the action, does not only mean that it should be great in its nature, but also in its duration; or in other words, that it should have a due length in it, as well as what we call proper greatness. The just measure of this kind of magnitude, he explains by the following similitude. An animal, no bigger than a mite, cannot appear perfect to the eye, because the sight takes it in at once, and has only a confused idea of the whole. and not a distinct idea of all its parts; if on the contrary you should suppose an animal of ten thousand furlongs in lengt the eye would be so filled with a single part of it, that it What these could not give the mind an idea of the whole. animals are to the eye, a very short or a very long action would be to the memory. The first would be, as it wer lost and swallowed up by it, and the other difficult to be contained in it. Homer and Virgil have shown their pri cipal art in this particular; the action of the Iliad, and the #1 of the Æneid, were in themselves exceeding short, b are so beautifully extended and diversified by the invention of episodes, and the machinery of Gods, with the like p etical ornaments, that they make up an agreeable story su 🗲 ficient to employ the memory without overcharging E # Milton's action is enriched with such a variety of circum* stances, that I have taken as much pleasure in reading trac contents of his books, as in the best invented story I eves í

,

ļ

į,

met with. It is possible, that the traditions, on which the Iliad and Æneid were built, had more circumstances in them than the history of the fall of Man, as it is related in Scripture. Besides it was easier for Homer and Virgil to dash the truth with fiction, as they were in no danger of offending the religion of their country by it. as for Milton, he had not only very few circumstances upon which to raise his poem, but was also obliged to proceed with the greatest caution in every thing that he added out of his own invention. And, indeed, notwithstanding all the restraints he was under, he has filled his story with so many surprizing incidents, which bear so close analogy with what is delivered in holy Writ, that it is capable of pleasing the most delicate reader, without giving offence to the most scrupulous.

The modern critics have collected from several hints in the Iliad and Æneid the space of time, which is taken up by the action of each of those poems; but as a great part of Milton's story was transacted in regions that lie out of the reach of the sun and the sphere of day, it is impossible to gratify the reader with such a calculation, which indeed would be more curious than instructive; none of the critices, either ancient or modern, having laid down rules to circumscribe the action of an epic poem within any determined number of years, days, or hours.

But of this more particularly hereafter.

HAVING examined the action of Paradise Lost, let us in the next place consider the Actors. This is Aristotle's method of considering; first the fable, and secondly the manners, or as we generally call them in English, the Fable and the Characters.

Homer has excelled all the heroic poets that ever wrote, in the multitude and variety of his charafters. Every Gud that is admitted into his poem, acts a part which would have been suitable to no other deity. His princes are as fluch distinguished by their manners as by their dominions; and even those among them, whose characters seem wholly made up of courage, differ from one another as to the Particular kinds of courage in which they excel. In short, there is scarce a speech or action in the Iliad, which the reader may not ascribe to the person that speaks or at without seeing his name at the head of it.

Homer does not only outshine all other poets in the v ricty, but also in the novelty of his characters. He 1 introduced among his Grecian princes a person, who h lived in three ages of men, and conversed with These Hercules, Polyphemus, and the first race of herces. I principal actor is the son of a Goddess, not to mention offspring of other Deitics, who have likewise a place in poem, and the venerable Trojan prince who was the fat of so many kings and heroes. There is in these seve characters of Homer, a certain dignity as well as nov: which adapts them in a more peculiar manner to the nat of an heroic poem. Though at the same time, to give th the greater variety, he has described a Vulcan, that is buffoon among his Gods, and a Thersites among his m tals.

Virgil falls infinitely short of Homer in the charad of his poem, both as to their variety and novelty. As a is indeed a perfect character, but as for Achates, though is stiled the hero's friend, he does nothing in the wt poem which may deserve that title. Gyas, Muesthe Sergestus, and Cloanthus, are all of them men of the sa stamp and character.

fortemque Gyan, fortemque Cloanthum. VII

There are indeed several very natural incidents in part of Ascanius; as that of Dido caunot be sufficien atmired. I do not see any thing new or particular Turnus. Pallas and Evander are remote copies of Het and Priam, as Lausus and Mezentius are almost paral to Pallas and Evander. The characters of Nisus and i rialus are beautiful, but common. We must not for the parts of Sinon, Camilla, and some few others, wt are fine improvements on the Greek poet. In short, tl is neither that wariety nor novelty in the persons of Æneid, which we meet with in those of the Iliad.

If we look into the characters of Milton, we shall I that he has introduced all the variety his table was ca i receiving. The whole species of mankind was in two ersons at the time to which the subject of his piem is conined. We have, however, four distinct characters in these two persons. We see Man and Woman in the highest innocence and perfection, and in the most abject state of guilt and infirmity. The two last characters are, indeed, way common and obvious, but the two first are not only more magnificent, but more new than any characters either in Virgil or Homer, or indeed in the whole circle of mature.

Milton was so sensible of this defect in the subject of his gorm, and of the few characters it would afford him, that has brought into it two actors of a shadowy and fictitious latter, in the persons of Sin and Death, by which means behas wrought into the body of his fable a very brautiful and well invented allegory. But notwithstanling the fineless of this allegory may atome for it in some means e, I cannot think that persons of such a chimerical existence are proper actors in an epic poem; because there is not that measure of probability annexed to them, which is requisite in writings of this kind, as I shall show more at large hereafter.

Virgil has, indeed, admitted Fame as an actiess in the Rneid, but the part she acts is very short, and none of the most admired circumstances in that divine work. Wefiad in mock-heroic poems, particularly in the Dispensary and the Lutrin, several allegorical persons of this nature, which are very beautiful in those compositions, and may, perhaps, be used as an argument, that the authors of them were of opinion, such characters might have a place in an pic work. For my own part, I should be glad the reader would think so, for the sake of the poem I am now anmining, and must farther add, that if such compty unsubstantial beings may be ever made use of on this occasion, never were any more nicely imagined, and employed in more proper actions, than those of which I am now speaking.

Another principal actor in this poem is the great enemy armankind. The part of Ulysses in Homer's Odyssey is "rymuch admired by Aristotle, as perplexing that table, in very agreeable plots and intricacites, not only by the many adventures in his voyage, and the subtlety of his behaviour, but by the various concealments and discoveries of his person in several parts of that poem. But the crafty being l have now mentioned, makes a much longer voyage than Ulysses, puts in practice many more wiles and stratagems, and hides himself under a greater variety of shapes and appearances, all of which are severally detected, to the great delight and surprise of the reader.

We may likewise observe with how much art the post has varied several characters of the persons that speak in his infernal assembly. On the contrary, how has he represented the whole Godhead exerting itself towards Mania its full benevolence under the three-fold distinction of a Creator, a Redeemer, and a Comforter !

Nor must we omit the person of Raphael, who, amidst his tenderness and friendship for Man, shows such a dignity and condescension in all his speech and behaviour, as are suitable to a superior nature. The Angels are indeed as much diversified in Milton, and distinguished by their proper parts, as the Gods are in Homer or Virgil. The reader will find nothing ascribed to Uriel, Gabriel, Michael, or Raphael, which is not in a particular manner suitable to their respective characters.

There is another circumstance in the principal actors of the Iliad and Æneid, which gives a peculiar beauty to those two poems, and was therefore contrived with very great judgment. I mean the authors having chosen for their heroes persons who were so nearly related to the people for whom they wrote. Achilles was a Greek, and Æneas the remote founder of Rome. By this means their countrymen (whom they principally proposed to themselves for their readers) were particularly attentive to all the parts of their story, and sympathized with their heroes in all their adventures. A Roman could not but reioice in the escapes, successes, and victories of Æneas, and be grieved at any defeats, misfortunes, or disappointments that bete him; as a Greek must have had the same regard fo Achilles. And it is plain, that each of those poems have lost this great advantage, among those readers to whom their heroes are as strangers or indifferent persons.

Milton's poem is admirable in this respect, since it is ble for any of its readers, whatever nation, country, opie he may belong to, not to be related to the perwho are the principal actors in it; but what is still itely more to its advantage, the principal actors in this hare not only our progenitors, but our representatives, have an actual interest in every thing they do, and no than our utmost happiness is concerned, and lies at in all their behaviour.

hall subjoin as a corollary to the foregoing remark, an rable observation out of Aristoth, which hath been much misrepresented in the quotations of some modern s. "If a man of perfect and consummate virtue falls a misfortune, it raises our pity, but not our terror, be-:we do not fear first it may be our own case, who do esemble the suffering person." But as that great phiher adds, "If we set a man of virtue, mixt with inties, fall into any misfortune, it does not only raise our but our terror; because we are airaid that the like "tune may happen to ourselves, who resemble the chafof the suffering person."

hall only remark, in this place, that the foregoing obtien of Aristorle, though it may be true in other occa-, does not hold in this; because in the present case, the persons who tall into misfortune are of the perf. If and consummate virtue, it is not to be consias what may possibly be, but what actually is our case; since we are embarked with them on the same m, and must be partakers of their happiness or V.

this, and some other very few instances, Aristotlo's for epic poetry (which he had drawn from lis reflecupon Homer) cannot be supposed to square exactly heleroic poems which have been made since his time; it is evident to every impartial judge his rules would have been more perfect, could he have peruged the id, which was made some hundred years after his

my next, I shall go through other parts of Milton's ; and hope that what I shall there advance, as well . I.

7

as what I have already written, will not comment upon Milton, but u on Aristotle

We have already taken a general survey of Characters in Milton's i'aradise Lost: the main to be considered, according to Aristot the Sentiments and the Language. Before 1 first of these, 1 must advertise my reader design, as soon as 1 have finished my gener these four several heads, to give particular the poem now before us of beauties an which may be observed under each of them. other particulars as may not properly fal them. This I thought fit to premise, that not j dge too hastily of this piece of cr upon it as imperfect, before he has seen th of it.

The sentiments in an epic poem are th behaviour which the author ascribes to the be introduces, and are just when they are the characters of the several persons. The likewise a relation to things as well as perso perfect when they are such as are adapted If in either of these cases the poet endeavo explain, to magnify or diminish, to raise pity or terror, or any other passion, we cu whether the sentiments he makes use of are ends. Homer is censured by the critics for this particular in several parts of the Ilia though at the same sime those who have treate with candour, have attributed this detect which he lived It was the fault of the Homer, if there wants that delicacy in sor ments, which now apocars in the works of interior genius. Besides, if there are blemi ticular thoughts, there is an infinite beauty part of them In short, if there are many p not have fallen into the meanness of som ments, there are none who could have riser tess of others. Virgil has excelled all o' priety of his sentiments. Millon shines li particular : nor must we omit one consideration ids to his honour and reputation. Homer and Virdeted persons whose characters are commonly mong men, and such as are to be met with either y, or in ordinary conversation. Milton's characst of them, lie o t of nature, and were to be purely by his own invention. It shows a greater 1 Shakespear to have drawn his Calyban, than his or fulius Cæsar:, the one was to be supplied out own imagination, whereas the other might have ned upon tradition, history, and observation. lt ch easier therefore for Homer to find proper sentir an assembly of Grecian generals, than for Milton ify his infernal council with proper characters, and hem with a variety of sentiments. The loves of i Æneas are only copies of what has passed beher persons. Adam and Eve, before the fall, are a species from that of mankind, who are descended n; and none but a post of the most unbounded i, and the most exquisite judgment, could have tir conversation and behaviour with so many apt ances during their state of innocence.

it suff. ient for an epic poem to be filled with such is a site natural, unless it abound also with such as me. Virgil in this particular alls short of Homer, or indeed so many thoughts that are low and vuliat the same time has not so many thoughts that me and noble. This truth of it is, Virgil seldom overy astonishing sentiments, where he is not fired ad. He every where charms and pleases us by the his own genues; but seldom elevates and transports he does not retch his hints from Homer.

i's chief talent, and indeed his distinguishing exlies in the sublimity of his thoughts. There are the Moderns who rival him in every other part of

but in the greatness of his sentiments he triumphe he poets both modern and ancient, Homer only ex-It is impossible for the integination of mar. to dis-

f with greater ideas, than those which he has laid this first, second, and sixth books. The sevenths which describes the creation of the world, is likew defully sublime, though not so apt to stir up en the mind of the reader, nor consequently so perfe epic way of writing, because it is filled with less : Let the judicious reader compare what Longinus aerved on several passages in Homer, and he will fillels for most of them in the Paradise Lost.

From what has been said we may infer, that as two kinds of sentiments, the natural and the sublim are always to be pursued in an heroic poem, there two kinds of thoughts which are carefully to be a The first are such as are affected and unnatural; th such as are mean and vulgar. As for the first thoughts we meet with little or nothing that is like Virgil: he has none of those trifling points and g that are so often to be met with in Ovid, none of grammatic turns of Lucan, none of those swelli ments which are so frequently in Statius and ( none of those mixed embellishments of Tasso. Ev is just and natural. His sentiments show that perfect insight into human nature, and that he km thing which was the most proper to affect it.

Mr. Dryden has in some places, which I may 1 take notice of, misrepresented Virgil's way of thin to this particular, in the translation he has given u Æneid. I do not remember that Homer any wi into the faults above-mentioned, which were in false refinements of later ages. Milton, it must be has sometimes erred in this respect, as I shall shew large in another paper; though considering all the the age in which he writ, were infected with this way of thinking, he is rather to be admired that he give more into it, than that he did sometimes com the victous taste which still prevails so much among writers.

But since several thoughts may be natural which and growching, an epic poet should not only avoid s timents as are unnatural or affected, but also suc mean and vulgar. Homer has opened a great field lery to men of more delicacy than greatness of ge the homeliness of some of his sentiments. But, as I have before said, these are rather to be imputed to the simplicity of the age in which he lived, to which I may also add, of that which he described, than to any imperfection in that divine poet. Zoilus among the Ancients, and Monsieur Perrault, among the Moderns, pushed their ridicule very far upon him, on account of some such sentiments. There is no blemish to be observed in Virgil, under this head, and but a very few in Milton.

1

I shall give but one instance of this impropriety of thought in Homer, and at the same time compare it with an instance of the same nature, both in Virgil and Milton. Sentiments which raise laughter, can very seldom be admitted with any decency into an heroic poem, whose business is to excite Passions of a much nobler nature. Homer, however, in his characters of Vulcan and Thersites, in his history of Mars and Venus, in his behaviour of Irus, and in other Passages, has been observed to have lapsed into the burlesque character, and to have departed from that serious air which seems essential to the magnificence of an epic poem. remember but one laugh in the whole Æneid, which rises in the fifth book upon Moncetes, where he is represented as thrown overboard, and drying himself upon a rock. But th s piece of mirth is so well timed, that the severest critic can have nothing to say against it, for it is in the book of sames and diversions, where the reader's mind may be sup-Posed to be sufficiently relaxed for such an entertainment .----The only picce of pleasantry in Paradise Lost, is where the mi spirits are described as rallying the Angels upon the success of their new invented artillery. This passage 1 look opon to be the most exceptionable in the whole poem, as being nothing else but a string of puns, and those too very indifferent.

And to his mates thus in derision call'd :

O Friends, why come not on these victors proud? Fre while they fierce were coming, and when we,

To entertain them fair with oten front,

And brease, (what could we more) propounded term

Of composition; straight they chang'd their minds, Flow off, and into strange vagaries fell. As they would dance, yet for a dance they seem'd Somewhat extravagant and wild, perhaps For joy of offer'd peace: but 1 suppose If our proposals once again were beard. We should compel them to a quick result. lo whom thus Belial in like gamesome mood. Leader, the terms we sent, were terms of weight, Of bord contents, and full of force urg'd home, Such as we might perceive amus'd them all, And simulated many : who receives them right. Had need, from head to foot, well understand ; Not und rstood, this gift they have besides, They show us when our fees walk not upright. Thus they among themselves in pleasant vein Stood scoring -----

HAVING already treated of the fable, the characters and sentiments in the Paradise Lost, we are in the last place to consider the Language; and as the learned world is very much divided upon Milton as to this point, I hope they will excuse me if I appear particular in any or my opinions, and incline to those who judge the most advantageously of the author.

It is requisite that the language of an heroic pcem should be both perspicuous and sublime. In proportion as either of these two qualities are wanting, the language is imperfect. Perspicuity is the first and most necessary qualification; insomuch that a good-natured reader sometimes overlooks a little slip even in the grammar or syntax, where it is impossible for him to mistake the poct's sense. Of this kind is that passage in Milton, wherein he speaks of Stan,

----- God and his Son except,

Created thing nought valu'd he nor shunn'd.

And that in which he describes Adam and Eve.

Adam the godlicst man of men since born His sons, the fairest of her daughters Eve

PARADISE LOST.

It is plain, that in the former of these passages, according to the natural syntax, the divine persons mentioned in the first line are represented as created beings; and that in the other, Adam and Eve are confounded with their sons and daughters. Such little blemishes as these, when the thought is great and natural, we should, with Horace, impute to a pardonable inadvertency, or to the weakness of human nature, which cannot attend to each minute particular, and sive the last finishing to every circumstance in so long a work. The ancient critics, therefore, who were acted by a spirit of candour, rather than that of cavilling, invented cortain figures of speech, on purpose to pallate little errors of this nature in the writings of those authers who had so many greater beauties to atone for them.

If clearness and perspicuity were only to be consulted, the poet would have nothing else to do hut to clothe hia thoughts in the most plain and natural expressions. Bue since it often happens that the most obvious phrases, and those which are used in ordinary conversation, become too familiar to the ear, and contract a kind of meanness by passing through the mouth of the vulgar, a poet should take particular care to guard himself against idiomatic ways of speaking. Ovid and Lucan have many poorne sets of expression upon this account, as taking up with the first phurases that offered, without putting themselves to the throuble of looking after such as would not only be natural, hut also elevated and sublime. Milton has but a few falings in this kind, of which, however, you may meet with some instances, as in the following passages.

Fmbrio's and idicts, ermites and friars, Whee, black and grey with all their trumpe'y, Here pilgrims ream-A while discourse they hold, No fear less dinner cool; when thus began Our author-Who of all ages to succeed, but feeling The evil on him brought by me will curso My head, ill fare our ancestor impure, For this we may thank siden.- The great masters in composition know very well that many an elegant phrase becomes improper for a poet or an orator, when it has been debased by common use. For this reason the works of ancient authors, which are written in dead languages, have a great advantage over those which are written in languages that are now spoken. Were there any mean phrases or idioms in Virgil and Homer, they would not shock the ear of the most delicate modern reader, so much as they would have done that of an old Greek or Roman, because we never hear them pronounced in our streets, or in ordinary conversation.

It is not therefore sufficient that the language of an epic poem be perspicuous, unless it be also sublime. To this end it ought to deviate from the common forms and ordinary pirases of speech. The judgment of a poet very much discovers itself in shunning the common roads of expression, without falling into such ways of speech as may seern stiff and unnatural; he must not swell into a false sublime, by endeavouring to avoid the other extreme. Among the Greeks, Æschylus, and sometimes Sophocles, were guilty of this fault; among the Latins, Claudian, and Statius; and among our own countrymen, Shakespear and Lee. In these authors the affectation of greatness often hurts the perspicuity of the stile, as in many others the endeavour after perspic uity prejudices its greatness.

Aristotle has observed, that the idiomatic stile may be avoided, and the sublime formed, by the following methods-First, by the use of metaphors : such are those in Milon-

Imparidit'd in one another's arms. — And in his hand a reed Stood waving tipt with fire — The grassy clods now calw'a — Spangt'd with eyes —

In these and innumerable other instances, the metaphors are very bold but just; I must howe or observe, that the metaphors are not thick solven in willon, which always saveurs too much of wie; that they never clash with one another, which, as Aristotle observes, turns a sentence into a ind of enigma or riddle; and that he seldom has recourse o them where the proper and natural words will do as well.

Another way of raising the language, and giving it a poeical turn, is to make use of the idiums of other tongues. Virgil is full of the Greek forms of speech, which the stitics call Hellenisms, as Horace in his odds abounds with them much more than Virgil. I need not mention the several dialects which Homer has made use of for this end.— Milton, in conformity with the practice of the ancient poets and with Aristotle's rule, has incused a great many Latinisms as well as Græcisms, and sometimes Hebraisms, into the language of his poem; as towards the beginning if it.

Nor did they not perceive the evil plight In which they were, or the fierce pains not feel. Yet to their general's voice they soon obey'd. Who shall tempt with wand'ring iest The dark unbottom'd infinite abyss, And through the pa'pable obscure find out His uncouth way, or spread his airy flight Upborne with indefatigable wings Over the wast abrupt !

So both ascend in the visions of God-B. xi.

Under this head may be reckoned the placing the adjrce after the substantive, the transposition of words, the ming the adjective into a substantive, with several other eign modes of speech, which this poet has naturalized Bive his verse the greater sound, and throw it out of ose.

The third method mentioned by Aristotle, is what agrees the the genius of the Greek language more than with that any other tongue, and is therefore none used by Homer an by any other poet. I mean the lengthening of a phrase of the addition of words, which may either be inserted or nitted, as also by the extending or contracting of partilar words by the insertion or onlission of certain syllables.

128 ADDISON'S CRITIQUE ON THE

Milton has put in practice this method of raising his guage, as far as the nature of our tongue will permit, a the passage above-mentioned, cremite, for what is her in common discourse. If you observe the measure of verse, he has with great judgment suppressed a syllable several words, and shortened those of two syllables into by which method, besides the above-mentioned advant he has given a greater variety to his numbers. But practice is more particularly remarkable in the name persons and of countries, as Beëlzebub, Hessebon, an many other particulars, wherein he has eit or changed name, or made use of that which is not the most comm known, that he might the better depart from the lang

The same reason recommended to him several old we which also makes his poem appear the more venerable, gives it a greater air of antiquity.

I must likewise take notice, that there are in Miltor veral words of his own coining, as Cerberean, miscreated, I doom'd, embryon atoms, and many others. If the read offended at this liberty in our English poet, I would reo mend him to a discourse in Plutarch, which show us I frequently Homer has made use of the same liberty.

Milton by the above mentioned helps, and by the ch of the noblest words and phrases which our tongue w afford him, has carried our language to a greater he than any of the English poets have ever done before or a bim, and made the sublimity of his stile equal to tha his sentiments.

I have been the more particular in these observation Milton's stile, because it is that part of him in which appears the most singular. The remarks I have here r upon the practice of other poets, with my observations of Aristotle, will perhaps alleviate the prejudice w some have taken to his poem upon this account; the after all, I must confess, that I think his stile, though mirable in general, is in some places too much stiffened obscured by the frequent use of those methods, w Ari:totle has prescribed for the taising of it.

This redundancy of those several ways of speech.

Aristotle calls foreign language, and with which Milton has to very much enriched, and in some places darkened the language of his poem, was the more proper for his use, because his poem is written in blank verse. Rhyme, without any other assistance, throws the language off from prose, and very often makes an indifferent phrase pass unregarded ; but where the verse is not built upon rhymes, there pomp of sound, and energy of expression, are indispensably neccesary to support the stile, and keep it from falling into the flatness of prose.

Those who have not a taste for this elevation of stile, and are apt to ridicule a poet when he goes out of the common forms of expression, would do well to see how Aristotle, has treated an ancient author called Euclid, for his insipid mith upon this occasion. Mr. Dryden used to call this fort of men his prose critics.

I should, under this head of the language, consider Milton's Numbers, in which is has made use of several elisions, that are not customary among other English poets, as may be particularly observed in his cutting off the letter Y, when it precedes a vewel. This and some other innovations in the measure of his verse, has varied his numbers in such a manner, as makes them incapable of satiating the ear and cloying the reader, which the same uniform measure would cer ainly have done, and which the perpetual returns of thyme never tail to do in long narrative poems. I shall close these reflections upon the language of Paradise Lost, with observing that Milton has copied after Homer, rather than Virgil, in the length of his periods, the copiou ness of his phrases, and the running of his verses into one another.

I HAVE now considered Milton's Paradise Lost under those four great heads of the fable, the characters, the sentiments, and the lancuage; and have shown that he excels, in general, under each of these heads. I hope that I have made several discoveries which may appear new, even to those who are versed in critical learning. Were I indeed to choose my readers, by whose judgment I would stand or fail, they should not be such as are acquainted only with the French and Italian critics, but also with the ancient and modern who have written in cither of the learned languages. one who brings with him any implicit notions a varions which he has made in his reading of the j find his own reflections methodized and expla perhaps several little hints hat had passed in his n fectod and improved in the works of a good critic one who has not these previous lights, is very ofte stranger to what he reads, and apt to put a wre pretation upon it.

1.

24

Nor is it sufficient, that a man who sets up for criticism, should have perused the authors above ed, unless he has also a clear and logical head. this talent, he is perpetually puzzled and perplex his own blunders, mistakes the sense of those confute, or if he chances to think right, does how to convey his thoughts to another with clea perspicuity. Aristotle, who was the best critic, one of the best logicians that ever appeared in th

Mr. Locke's Essay on Human Understanding thought a very odd book for a man to make hims of, who would get a reputation by critical writing at the same time it is very certain, that an author not learned the art of distinguishing between v things, and of ranging his thoughts, and settin proper lights, whatever notions he may have, himself in confusion and obscurity. I might fi pon and ordinary systems of arts and sciences. A few geseral rules, extracted out of the French authors, with a crtain cant of words, has sometimes set up an illiterate beavy writer for a most judicious and formidable critic.

One great mark, by which you may discover a critic who h.s neither taste nor learning, is this, that he seldom ventures to praise any passage in an author, which has not been before received and applauded by the public, and that his criticism turns wholly upon little faults and errors. This part of a critic is so very easy to succeed in, that we find every ordinary reader, upon the publishing of a new poem, has wit and ill-nature enough to turn several pasuges of it into ridicule, and very often in the right plane. This Mr. Dryden has very agreeably remarked in those two celebrated lines,

Errors, like straws, upon the surface flow; He who would search for pearls must dive below.

A true critic ought to dwell rather upon excellencies than imperfections, to discover the concealed beauties of a writer, and communicate to the world such things as are worth their observation. The most exquisite words, and finest strokes of an author, are those which very often appear the most doubtful and exceptionable to a man who wants a relish for polite learning; and they are these, which a sour undistinguishing critic generally attacks with the greatest violence. Tully observes, that it is very easy to brand or fir a mark upon what he calls verbum ardens, or, as it may be rendered into English, a glowing bold expression, and to turn it into ridicule by a cold ill-natured criticism. A little wit is equally capable of exposing a beauty, and of aggravating a fault; and though such a treatment of an author naturally produces indignation in the mind of an understanding reader, it has, however, its effect among the senerality of those whose hands it falls into, the rabble of mankind being very apt to think, that every thing which is laughed at with any mixture of wit, is ridiculous in itseif.

YOL L.

Such a mirth as this is always unseasonable in as it rather prejudices the reader than convinces hi is capable of making a beauty, as well as a blem subject of derision. A man who cannot write wi on a proper subject, is dull and stupid, but one wh it in an improper place, is as impertinent and absursides, a man who has the gift of ridicule, is apt fault with any thing that gives him an opport exerting his belowed talent, and very often censure sage, not because there is any fault in it, but bec can be merry upon it. Such kinds of pleasantry a unfair and disingenuous in works of criticism, in w greatest masters, both ancient and modern, have appeared with a serious and instructive air.

As I intend in my next paper to show the defects ton's Paradise Lost, I thought fit to premise these f ticulars, to the end that the reader may know I ent it, as on a very ungrateful work, and that I shall ju at the imperfections, without endeavouring to inflar with ridicule. I must also observe with Longin the productions of a great genius, with many lapses advertencies, are infinitely preferable to the works ( ferior kind of author, which are scrupulously exact formable to all the rules of correct writing.

I shall conclude my paper with a story out of B which sufficiently shows us the opinion that judic thor entertained of the sort of critics 1 have been he tioning. A famous critic, says he, having gather ther all the faults of an eminent poet, made a pr them to Apollo, who received them very graciou resolved to make the author a suitable return for the he had been at in collecting them. In order to set before him a sack of wheat, as it had been just out of the sheaf. He then bid him pick out the ch among the corn, and lay it aside by itself. The c plied himself to the task with great industry and and after having made the due separation, was pres Apollo with the chaff for his pains.

AFTER what I have said, I shall enter on the without further preface, and remark the serve pear in the fable, the characters, the sentiments, language of Milton's Paradise Lost; not doubting eader will pardon me, if I allege at the same time r may be said tor the extenuation of such defects. imperfection which I shall observe in the fable is, event of it is unhappy.

able of every poem is, according to Aristotle's diviner simple or implex. It is called simple, when to change of fortune in it; implex when the fo tune hief actor changes from bad to good, or from good

The implex fable is thought the most perfect; I, bec.use it is more proper to stir up the passional rader, and to surprise kim with a greater variety of S.

mplex fable is therefore of two kinds: In the first actor makes his way through a long series of dandifficult.es. till he arrives at honour and prosperity, ein the story of Ulysses. In the second, the chief the poem falls from some eminent pitch of honour sperity, into misery and disgrace. Thus we see and Eve sinking from a state of innocence and ss, into the most abject condition of sin and sor-nost taking tragedies among the Ancients were built last sort of implex fable, particularly the tragedy pus, which proceeds upon a story, if we may bestoile, the most proper for tra edy that could be I by the wit of man. I have taken some pains in a paper, to show that this kind of implex fable, the event is unhappy, is more apt to affect an e than that of the first kind; notwithstanding scellent pieces among the Ancients, s well as most which have been written of late years in our own , are raised upon contrary plans. I must however hat I think this kind of fable, which is the most in tragedy, is not so proper for an heroic poem. in seems to have been sensible of this imperfection ible, and has therefore endeavoured to cure it by sepedients; particularly by the mortification which t adversary of mankind meets with upon his return to the assembly of infernal spirits, as it i beautiful passage of the tenth book; and vision, wheren Adam. at the close of the offspring triumphing over his great ene restored to a happier Paradise than that tell.

There is another objection against Milte is indeed almost the same with the forme in a different light, namely, That the her Lost is unsuccessful, and by no means a n This gave occasion to Mr. Dryden mies. the Devil was in reality Milton's hero. viated this objection in my first paper. is an epic, or a narrative Poem, and he that in it, searches for that which Milton nev if he will needs fix the name of an hero u it, 'tis certainly the Messiah is the hero, cipal action, and in the chief episodes. not furnish out a real action for a fable gr the Iliad or Æneid, and therefore an he form a higher notion of a poem than one o they call an heroic. Whether Milton's is nature, I will not presume to determine that I show there is in the Paradise Lost a plan, regularity of design, and masterly | discover in Homer and Virgil.

I must in the next place observe, that woven, in the texture of his fable, some do not seem to have probability enough f particularly in the actions which he asc Death, and the picture which he draws Vanity, with other passages in the second legories rather savour of the spirit of Spe than of Homer and Virgil.

In the structure of this poem he has of too many digressions. It is finely obse that the author of an heroic poem shou himself, but throw as much of his work mouths of those who are his principal actgiven no reason for this precept; but I ense the mind of the reader is more awed and elevated when he hears Æneas or Achilles speak, than when Virgil or Homertalk in their own persons. Besides that assuming the character of an eminent man is apt to fire the imagination, and raise the ideas of the author. Tully tells us, mentioning his dialogue of old age, in which Cato is the chief speaker, that upon a review of it he was agreeably imposed upon, and fancied that it was Cato, and not he himself, who uttered his thoughts on that subject.

If the reader would be at the pains to see how the story of the Iliad and Æneid is delivered by those persons who at in it, he will be surprised to find how little in either of these poems proceeds from the authors. Milton has, in the general disposition of his fable, very finely observed this great rule; insomuch that there is scarce a third part of t which comes from the poet; the rest is spoken either by Adam and Fve, or by some good or evil Spirit who is en-Baged either in their destruction or defence.

From what has been here observed, it appears, that digressions are by no means to be allowed of in an epic poem. If the poet, even in the ordinary course of his narration, should speak as little as possible, he should certainly never let his narration sleep for the sake of any reflections of his own. I have often observed, with a secret admiration, that the longest reflection in the Æreid is in that passage of the ten th book, where Turnus is represented as dressing himself in the spoils of Pallas, whom he had slain. Virgil here lets his table stand still for the sake of the following remark. 4 How is the mind of man ignorant of futurity, and unable to bear prosperows fortune with moderation ? ' The time will come when 'I urnus shall wish that he had <sup>4</sup> left the body of Pallas untouched, and curse the day on " which he dressed himself in these spoils." As the great event of the Æneid, and the death of Turnus, whom Æneas slew, because he saw him adorned with the spoils Of Pallas, turns upon this incident, Virgil went out of his way to make this reflection upon it, without which so small a circumstance might possibly have slipt out of his reader's. memory. Lucan, who was an injudicious poet, lets drop us story very frequently for the sake of his unnecessary digressions, or his diverticula, as Scaliger calls them. If he gives us an account of the prodigies which preceded the civil war, he declaims upon the occasion, and shows how much happier it would be for man, if he did not feel his evil fortune before it comes to pass, and suffer not only by its real weight, but by the apprehension of it. Milton'a complaint of his blindness, his panegyric on marriage, his reflections on Adam and Eve's going naked, of the Angel'a eating, and several other passages in his poem, are liable to the same exception, though I must confess there is so great a betty in these very digressions that I would not wish them out of his poem.

136 ADDISON'S CRITIQUE ON THE

I have, in a former paper, spoken of the character of Milton's Paradise Lost, and declared my opinion, as to the allegorical persons who are introduced in it.

If we look into the sentiments, I think they are sometimes defective under the following heads • First, as there are several of them too much pointed, and some that degenerate even into puns. Of this last kind, I am afraid is that in the first book, where speaking of the pigmics, he calls them

Warr'd on by cranes

Another blemish that appears in some of his thoughts, in his frequent allusion to heathen fables, which are not certainly of a piece with the divine subject of which he treats. I do not find fault with these allusions, where the poet himself represents them as fabulous, as he does in some places, but where he mentions them as truths and matters of tact. The limits of my paper will not give me leave to be particular in instances of this kind: the reader will easily remark them in his perusal of the poem.

A third fault in his sentiments, is an unnecessary ostentation of learning, which likewise occurs very frequently. It is certain, that both Homer and Virgil were masters of all the learning of their times, but it shows itself in their works, after an indirect and concealed manny. Milton secons ambitious of letting us know, by his excursion on free will and predestination, and his many glances upon history, astronomy, geography, and the like, as well as by the terms and phrases he sometimes makes use of, that he was acquained with the whole circle of arts and sciences.

f 🖢

Ċ

If, in the last place, we consider the language of this great poet, we must allow what I have hinted in a former paper, that it is often too much laboured, and sometimes obscured by old words, transpositions, and foreign idioms. Seneca's objection to the stile of a great author, Riget ejus oratio, nihil in ea placidum, nihil lene, is what many critics make to Milton : as I cannot wholly refute it, so I have already apologized for it in another paper ; to which I may farther add, that Milton's sentiments and ideas were so wonderfully sublime, that it would have been impossible for him to have represented them in their full strength and beauty, without having recourse to these foreign assistances. Our language sunk under him, and was unequal to that greatness of soul which furnished him with such glorious conceptions.

A second fault in his language is, that he often affects a kind of jingle in his words, as in the following passages, and many others :

That brought into this world a world of woe. Begint th' almighty throne Beseeching or besieging This tempted our assempt At one slight bound high over-leapt all bound.

I know there are figures for this kind of speech, that some of the greatest Ancients have been guilty of it, and that Aristotle himself has given it a place in his Rhetoric, among the beauties of that art. But as it is in itself poor and trafing, it is I think at present universally exploded by all the masters of polite writing.

The last fault which I shall take notice of in Milton's stile, is the frequent use of what the learned call technical words or terms of art. It is one of the great beauties of poetry, to make hard things intelligible, and to deliver what is abstruse of itself in such easy language as may b stood by ordinary readers. Besides that the knowle poet should rather seem born with him, or inspir drawn from books and systems. I have often w how Mr. Dryden could translate a passage out c after the following manner :

> Tack to the larboard, and stand off to sea, Veer starboard sea and land.

Milton makes use of larboard in the same manner. he is upon building, he mentions Doric pillars, cornice, freeze, architrowe. When he talks of hear dies, you meet with ecliptic and eccentric, the tr stars dropp ng from the zenith, rays culminating from tor. To which might be added many instances of kind in several other arts and sciences.

I HAVE seen in the works of a modern phile map of the spots in the sun. My last paper of t and blemishes in Milton's Paradise Lost, may be cr as a piece of the same nature. To pursue the alluit is observed, that among the bright parts of the body above-mentioned, there are some which gle intensely, and dart a stronger light than others; withstanding I have already shown Milton's potvery beautiful in general, I shall now proceed to ta of such beauties as appear to me more exquisite rest.

[The Reader will find the remainder of the of Mr. Addison interspersed with the other Notes, tioned in the Preface.]

BOOK I.

THE ARGUMENT.

This first Book proposes, first in brief, the whole subjed, Man's day ebedience, and the loss thereupon of Paradise wherein he was places Then touches the prime cause of his fail, the Sergent, or rather Satan in the serpent : who revolting from God, and drawing to his side many legions of Angels, was by the command of God driven out of Heaven with all his crow into the great deep. Which action passed over, the poem hastens into the midst of things, presenting Satan with his Angels now falling into Hell described here, not in the centre (for Eleaven and Earth may be supposed as yet not made, certainly not yet accursed) but in a place of utter darkness, fitliest called Chaos 2 Here Satan with his Angels lying on the burning lake, thunder-struck and autonished, after a certain space recovers, as from confusion, calls up him who next in order and dignity lay by him; they conter of their miscrable fall, Satan awakens all his legions, who lay till then in the mme manner confounded. They rue, their numbers, array of hatele, their chief leaders named, according to the idols known afterwards in Canaan and the countries adjoining. To these Satan directs his speech, comforts them with hope yet of regaining Heaven, but tells them lastly of a new world and new kind of creature to be created, according to an ancient prophecy or report in Heaven ; for that Angels were long before this visible creation, was the opinion of many ancient Fachera. To find out the truth of this prophecy, and what to determine thereon, he refers to a full council. What his associates thence attemapt. Pandemonium the palace of Satan rises, suddenly built out of the deep: The infernal peers there sit in council.

OF Man's first disobedience, and the fruit Of that forbidden tree, whose mortal taste Brought death into the world, and all our woe, With loss of Eden, till one greater Man Restore us, and regain the blissful seat, Sing, heav'nly Muse, that on the secret top

Of Oreb, or of Sinai, didst inspire That shepherd, who first taught the chosen seed, In the beginning how the heav'ns and earth Rose out of Chaos: Or if Sion hill Delight thee more, and Siloa's brook that flow'd Fast by the oracle of God; I thence Invoke thy aid to my adventrous song. That with no middle flight intends to soar Above th' Aonian mount, while it pursues Things unattempted yet in prose or rhime. And chiefly Thou, O Spi'rit, that dost prefer Before all temples th' upright heart and pure, Instruct me, for Thou know'st; Thou from the first Wast present, and with mighty wings outspread 2 Dove-like sat'st brooding on the vast abyss. And mad'st it pregnant : What in me is dark Illumine, what is low raise and support; That to the height of this great argument I may assert eternal Providence, And justify the ways of God to Men.

Say first, for Heav'n hides nothing from thy vie Nor the deep tract of Hell, say first what cause Mov'd our grand parents, in that happy state, Favour'd of Heav'n so highly, to fall off 3 From their Creator, and transgress his will For one restraint, lords of the world besides ? Who first seduc'd them to that foul revolt ? Th' infernal Serpent; he it was, whose guile, Stirr'd up with envy and revenge, deceiv'd The mother of mankind, what time his price him out from Heav'n, with all his host Angels, by whose aid aspiring nself in glory' above his peers, 1 to have equal'd the most High. 40 os'd; and with ambitious aim he throne and monarchy of God pious war in Heav'n, and battle proud n attempt. Him the Almighty Power adlong flaming from th' ethereal sky, eous ruin and combustion, down mless perdition, there to dwell intine chains and penal fire, st defy the Omnipotent to arms. es the space that measures day and night 50 al men, he with his horrid crew uish'd, rolling in the fiery gulf, ded though immortal: But his doom him to more wrath; for now the thought lost happiness and lasting pain ts him; round he throws his baleful eyes, tness'd huge affliction and dismay ith obdurate pride and stedfast hate: as far as Angels ken, he views nal situation waste and wild; 6a con horrible on all sides round great furnace flam'd, yet from those flames , but rather darkness visible nly to discover sights of woe, of sorrow, doleful shades, where peace t can never dwell, hope never comes

140

That comes to all; but torture without en Still urges, and a fiery deluge, fed With ever-burning sulphur unconsum'd : Such place eternal Justice had prepar'd For those rebellious, here their pris'on or . In utter darkness, and their portion set As far remov'd from God and light of He As from the centre thrice to th' utmost pc O how unlike the place from whence they There the companions of his fall, o'erwhy With floods and whirlwinds of tempestuo He soon discerns, and welt'ring by his sid One next himself in power, and next in ci Long after known in Palestine, and nam'c Beelzebub. To whom th' Arch-Enemy, And thence in Heav'n call'd Satan, with bol Breaking the horrid silence, thus began.

If thou beest he; but O how fall'n ! how From him, who in the happy realms of lig Cloth'd with transcendent brightness, didst Myriads though bright! If he whom mut: United thoughts and counsels, equal hope And hazard in the glorious enterprise, Join'd with me once, now misery hath joi: In equal ruin: into what pit thou seest From whatheight fall'n, so much the stronge He with his thunder: and till then who kn The force of those dire arms? yet not for 1 Nor what the potent victor in his rage Can else inflict, do I repent or change, hough chang'd in outward lustre, that fix'd mind, nd high disdain from sense of injur'd merit, hat with the Mightiest rais'd me to contend, and to the fierce contention brought along 100 nnumerable force of Spirits arm'd, That durst dislike his reign, and me preferring, His utmost pow'r with adverse pow'r oppos'd In dubious battle on the plains of Heav'n, And shook his throne. What though the field be lost? All is not lost; th' unconquerable will, And study of revenge, immortal hate, And courage never to submit or yield, And what is else not to be overcome; That glory never shall his wrath or might 110 Extort from me. To bow and sue for grace With suppliant knee, and deify his pow'r, Who from the terror of this arm so late Doubted his empire; that were low indeed, That were an ignominy' and shame beneath This downfall; since by fate the strength of Gods And this empyreal substance cannot fail, Since through experience of this great event In arms not worse, in foresight much advanc'd, We may with more successful hope resolve 120 To wage by force or guile eternal war, Irreconcileable to our grand foe, Who now triumphs, and in th' excess of joy Ole reigning holds the tyranny of Heav'n.

So spake th' apostate Angel, though in pain, aunting aloud, but rack'd with deep despair : Vol. 1. And him thus answer'd soon his bold comper-

O Prince, O Chief of many throned Powers, That led th' imbattl'd Seraphim to war Under thy conduct, and in dreadful deeds 139 Feariers, endanger'd Heav'n's perpetual King, And put to proof his high supre . acy, Whether upheld by strength, or chance, or fate; Too well I see and rue the dire event. That with sad overthrow and foul defeat Hath lost us Heav'n, and all this mighty host In horrible destruction laid thus low. As far as Gods and heav'nly essences Can perish: for the mind and spi'rit remains Invincible, and vigour soon returns, 140 Though all our glory' extinct, and happy state Here swallow'd up in endless misery. But what if he our conqu'ror (whom I now Of force believe almighty, since no less Than such could have o'er-pow'r'd such force as ours) Have left us this our spi'rit and strength entire Strongly to suffer and support our pains, That we may so suffice his vengeful ire, Or do him mightier service as his thralls 150 By right of war, whate'er his business be Here in the heart of Hell to work in fire. Or do his errands in the gloomy deep; What can it then avail, though yet we feel Strength undiminish'd, or eternal being To undergo eternal punishment? Where to with speedy words th' Arch-Fiendreph? BOOK 1.]

PARADISE LOST.

Fall'n Cherub, to be weak is miserable Doing or suffering : but of this be sure, To do ought good never will be our task, But ever to do ill our sole delight, 160 As being the contrary to his high will Whom we resist. If then his providence Out of our evil seek to bring forth good, Our labour must be to pervert that end, And out of good still to find means of evil; Which oft-times may succeed, so as perhaps Shall grieve him, if I fail not, and disturb His inmost counsels from their destin'd aim. But see the angry victor hath recall'd His ministers of vengeance and pursuit 170 Back to the gates of Heav'n : the sulphurous hail shot after us in storm, o'erblown hath laid The fiery surge, that from the precipice Of Heav'n receiv'd us falling; and the thunder, Wing'd with red lightning and impetuous rage, Perhaps hath spent his shafts, and ceases now To bellow through the vast and boundless deep. Let us not slip th' occasion, whether scorn, Or satiate fury yield it from our foe. Seest thou you dreary plain, forlorn and wild, 180 The seat of desolation, void of light, Save what the glimmering of these livid flames Casts pale and dreadful? Thither let us tend From off the tossing of these fiery waves, There rest, if any rest can harbour there, And re-assembling our afflicted Powers, Consult how we may henceforth most offend Our enemy, our own loss how repair, How overcome this dire calamity, What reinforcement we may gain from hope, 19 If not what resolution from despair.

Thus Satan talking to his nearest mate With head up-lift above the wave, and eves That sparkling blaz'd, his other parts besides Prone on the flood, extended long and large, Lay floating many a rood, in bulk as huge As whom the fables name of monstrous size. Titanian, or Earth-born, that warr'd on love. Briarcos or Typhon, whom the den By ancient Tarsus held, or that sea-beast 24 Leviathan, which God of all his works Created hugest that swim th' ocean stream : Him haply slumb'ring on the Norway foam : The pilot of some small night-founder'd skiff Deeming some island, oft, as seamen tell, With fixed anchor in his scaly rind Moors by his side under the lee, while night Invests the sea, and wished morn delays : So stretch'd out huge in length the Arch-Fiend L Chain'd on the burning lake, nor ever thence 2 Had ris'n or heav'd his head, but that the will And high permission of all-ruling Heaven Left him at large to his own dark designs, That with reiterated crimes he might Heap on himself damnation, while he sought Evil to others, and enrag'd might see

BOOK I.]

How all his malice serv'd but to bring forth Infinite goodness, grace and mercy shown On Man by him seduc'd, but on himself Treble confusion, wrath and vengeance pour'd. 220 Forthwith upright he rears from off the pool His mighty stature; on each hand the flames Driv'n backward slope their pointing spires, and roll'd In billows, leave i' th' midst a horrid vale. Then with expanded wings he steers his flight Aloft, incumbent on the dusky air That felt unusual weight, till on dry land He lights, if it were land that ever burn'd With solid, as the lake with liquid fire; And such appear'd in hue, as when the force 230 Of subterranean wind transports a hill Torn from Pelorus, or the shatter'd side Of thund ring Ætna, whose combustible And fuel'd entrails thance conceiving fire, Sublim'd with mineral fury, aid the winds, And leave a singed bottom all involv'd With stench and smoke: such resting found the sole Of unblest feet. Him follow'd his next mate, Both glorying to have 'scap'd the Stygian flood As Gods, and by their own recover'd strength, 240 Not by the sufferance of supernal Power.

Is this the region, this the soil, the clime, Said then the lost Arch-Angel, this the seat That we must change for Heav'n, this mournful gloom For that celestial light? Be it so, since he Who now is Sov'rain can dispose and bid

What shall be right: farthest from him is be Whom reason hath equal'd, force hath made Above his equals. Farewell happy fields, Where joy for ever dwells : Hail horrors, h Infernal world, and thou profoundest Hell Receive thy new possessor ; one who brings A mind not to be chang'd by place or time. The mind is its own place, and in itself Can make a Heav'n of Hell, a Hell of Heav What matter where, if I be still the same, And what I should be, all but less than he Whom thunder hath made greater ? Here a We shall be free; th' Almighty hath not be Here for his envy, will not drive us hence Here we may reign secure, and in my choic To reign is worth ambition though in Hell : Better to reign in Hell, than serve in Heave But wherefore let we then our faithful frien Th' associates and copartners of our loss, Lie thus astonish'd on th' oblivious pool, And call them not to share with us their pa In this unhappy mansion, or once more With rallied arms to try what may be yet Regain'd in Heav'n, or what more lost in H

So Satan spake, and him Beëlzebub Thus answer'd. Leader of those armies b Which but th' Omnipotent none could hav If once they hear that voice, their liveliest p Of hope in fears and dangers, heard so oft In worst extremes, and on the perilous edge

`R48

Of battle when it rag'd, in all assaults Their surest signal, they will soon resume New courage and revive, though now they lie Groveling and prostrate on yon lake of fire, 280 As we ere while, astounded and amaz'd, No wonder, fall'n such a pernicious height.

He scarce had ceas d when the superior Fiend Was moving tow'ard the shore; his pond'rous shield, Ethereal temper, massy, large, and round, Behind him cast; the broad circumference Hung on his shoulders like the moon, whose orb Through optic glass the Tuscan artist views At evening from the top of Fesolé, Or in Valdarno, to descry new lands, 290 Rivers or mountains on her spotty globe. His spear, to equal which the tallest pine Hewn on Norwegian hills, to be the mast Of some great ammiral, were but a wand, He walk'd with to support uneasy steps Over the burning marle, not like those steps On Heaven's azure, and the torrid clime Sinote on him sore besides, vaulted with fire: Nathless he so endur'd, till on the beach Of that inflamed sea he stood, and call'd 300 His legions, Angel forms, who lay entranc'd Thick as autumnal leaves that strow the brooks In Vallombrosa, where th' Etrurian shades High over-arch'd imbow'r; or scatter'd sedge Atloat, when with fierce winds Orion arm'd Hath vex'd the Red-Sea coast, whose waves o'erthrew

BOOK I.]

Busiris and his Memohian chivalry, While with perfidious hatred they pursued The sojourners of Goshen, who beheld From the safe shore their floating carcases 1 And broken chariot-wheels: so thick bestrown. Abject and lost lay these, covering the flood, Under amazement of their hidgous change. He call'd so loud, that all the hollow deep Of Hell resounded. Princes. Potentates. Warriors, the flow'r of Heav'n, once yours, nowl If such astonishment as this can seize Eternal Spi'rits : or have ve chos'n this place After the toil of battle to repose Your wearied virtue, for the ease you find 1 To slumber here, as in the vales of Heaven? Or in this abject posture have ye sworn To' adore the conqueror? who now beholds Cherub and Seraph rolling in the flood With scatter'd arms and ensigns, till anon His swift pursuers from Heav'n gates discern Th' advantage, and descending tread us down Thus drooping, or with linked thunderbolts Transfix us to the bottom of this gulf. Awake, arise, or be for ever fall'n.

They heard, and were abash'd, and up they spr Upon the wing, as when men wont to watch On duty, sleeping found by whom they dread, Rouse and bestir themselves ere well awake. Nor did they not perceive the evil plight In which they were, or the fierce pains not feels

150

Yet to their general's voice they soon obey'd Innumerable. As when the potent rod Of Amrani's son, in Egypt's evil day, Wav'd round the coast, up call'd a pitchy cloud 340 )f locusts, warping on the eastern wind, hat o'er the realm of impious Pharaoh hung ike night, and darken'd all the land of Nile: numberless were those bad Angels seen Overing on wing under the cope of Hell wixt upper, nether, and surrounding fires; ill, as a signal giv'n, th' up-lifted spear f their great Sultan waving to direct heir course, in even balance down they light <sup>1</sup> the firm brimstone, and fill all the plain; 350 multitude, like which the populous north )ur'd never from her frozen loins, to pass lene or the Danaw, when her barbarous sons ume like a deluge on the south, and spread ineath Gibraltar to the Lybian sands. "thwith from every squadron and each band he heads and leaders thither haste where stood heir great commander; Godlike shapes and forms Celling human, princely dignities, 1d pow'rs that erst in Heaven sat on thrones; 360 <sup>1</sup>Ough of their names in heav'nly records now no memorial, blotted out and ras'd their rebellion from the books of life. " had they yet among the sons of Eve >t them new names, till wand ring o'er the earth, "rough God's high sufferance for the tri'al of man,

By falsities and lies the greatest part Of mankind they corrupted to forsake God their Creator, and the invisible Glory of him that made them to transform Oft to the image of a brute, adorn'd With gay religions full of pomp and gold, And Devils to adore for Deities: Then were they known to men by various 1 And various idols through the Heathen wo Say, Muse, their names then known, who first. Rous'd from the slumber, on that fiery cou At their great emp'ror's call. as next in we Came singly where he stood on the bare stra While the promiscuous crowd stood yet alo The chief were those who from the pit of H Roaming to seek their prey on earth, durst Their seats long after next the seat of God Their altars by his altar. Gods ador'd Among the nations round, and durst abide Jehovah thund'ring out of Sion, thron'd Between the Cherubim; yea, often plac'd Within his sanctuary itself their shrines, Abominations; and with cursed things His holy rites and solemn feasts profan'd. And with their darkness durst affront his li First Moloch, horrid king, besmear'd with Of human sacrifice, and parents tears, Though for the noise of drums and timbrels Their childrens cries unheard, that pass'd thre To his grim idol. Him the Ammonite

Z 53

BOOK'I.7

PARADISE LOST.

Worshipp'd in Rabba and her watry plain, In Argob and in Basan, to the stream Of utmost Arnon. Nor content with such Audacious neighbourhood, the wisest heart Of Solomon he led by fraud to build His temple right against the temple' of God On that opprobious hill, and made his grove The pleasant valley' of Hinnom, Tophet thence And black Gehenna call'd, the type of Hell. Next Chemos, th' obscene dread of Moab's sons, From Aroar to Nebo, and the wild Of southmost Abarim; in Hesebon And Horonaim, Seon's realm, beyond The flow ry dale of Sibma clad with vines, 410 And Eleälé to th' Asphaltic pool. Peor his other name, when he entic'd Israel in Sittim on their march from Nile To do him wanton rites, which cost them woe. Yet thence his lustful orgies he enlarg'd Evn to that hill of scandal, by the grove OF Moloch homicide, lust hard by hate; Till good Josiah drove them thence to Hell. With these came they, who from the bord'ring flood Of Old Euphrates to the brook that parts 420 ESP pt from Syrian ground, had general names Of Bailim and Ashtaroth, those male, These feminine. For Spirits when they please Can either sex assume, or both; so soft And uncompounded is their essence pure, Not ty'd or manacled with joint or limb,

$53

Nor founded on the brittle strength of bone Like cumbrous flesh : but in what shape the Dilated or condens'd, bright or obscure, Can execute their airy purposes, And works of love or enmity fulfil. For those the race of Israel oft forsook Their living strength, and unfrequented lef His righteous altar, bowing lowly down To bestial Gods; for which their heads as 1 Bow'd down in battle, sunk before the spea Of despicable foes. With these in troop Came Astoreth, whom the Phœnicians call' Astarte, queen of Heav'n, with crescent he To whose bright image nightly by the moor Sidonian virgins paid their vows and songs, In Sion also not unsung, where stood Her temple on th' offensive mountain, buil By that uxorious king, whose heart though Beguil'd by fair idolatresses, fell To idols foul. Thammuz came next behin Whose annual wound in Lebanon allur'd The Syrian damsels to lament his fate In amorous ditties all a summer's day, While smooth Adonis from his native rock Ran purple to the sea, suppos'd with blood Of Thammuz yearly wounded : the love-ta Infected Sion's daughters with like heat, Whose wanton passions in the sacred porch Ezekiel saw, when by the vision led His eye survey'd the dark idolatries

154

BOOK I.

PARADISE LOST.

Of alienated Judah. Next came one Who mourn'd in earnest, when the captive ark Maim'd his brute image, head and hands lopt off In his own temple, on the grunsel edge, 450 Where he fell flat, and sham'd his worshippers : Dagon his name, sea monster, upward man And downward fish : yet had his temple high Rear'd in Azotus, dreaded through the coast Of Palestine, in Gath and Ascalon, And Accaron and Gaza's frontier bounds. Him follow'd Rimmon, whose delightful seat Was fair Damascus, on the fertile banks Of Abbana and Pharphar, lucid streams. He also' against the house of God was bold: 470 A leper once he lost, and gain'd a king, A haz his sottish conqu'ror, whom he drew God's altar to disparage and displace For one of Syrian mode, whereon to burn His odious offerings, and adore the Gods Whom he had vanquish'd. After these appear'd A crew who under names of old renown, Osiris, Isis, Orus, and their train, With monstrous shapes and sorceries abus'd Fanatic Egypt and her priests, to seek 480 Their wand'ring Gods disguis'd in brutish forms Rather than human. Nor did Israel 'scape Th' infection, when their borrow'd gold compos'd The calf in Oreb; and the rebel king Doubled that sin in Bethel and in Dan, Likening his Maker to the grazed ox, VOL. I. ٥

Ichovah, who is our of the when he r From Frypt marc'd as a sual'd with Both her first-bar all her bleatin Belink to see the hom a Spirit r Fell not gena 2.9. . . or more gross' Vice for Stoffs to Man on temple stor Or altar shock'd; yet who more oft th In temples and et siture when the p Turas at the state the state who With Instant victory the house of In courts and point the new reigns, Of riot ascends drove their loftiest t And injury and ustright and when n Darkens the structs, then wander for Of Eelial, hown with insolence and Witness the streets of Sodom, and th In Gibeah, when the hospitable door Expos'd a matron to avoid worse rap These were the prime in order and in The rest were long to tell, though fa Th' Ionian Gods, of Javan's issue h Gods, yet confess'd later than Heave Their boasted parents: Titan Heav': With his enormous brood, and birth-1 By younger Saturn ; he from mightie His own and Rhea's son like measure So love usurping reign'd: these first And Ida known, thence on the snow Of cold Olympus rul'd the middle

3 56

Their highest Heav'n; or on the Delphian cliff, Or in Dodona, and through all the bounds Of Doric land; or who with Saturn old Fled over Adria to th' Hesperion fields, 520 And o'er the Celtic roam'd the utmost isles.

All these and more came flocking ; but with looks Down-cast and damp, yet such wherein appear'd Obscure some glimpse of joy, to' have found their chief Not in despair, to' have found themselves not lost In loss itself; which on his count nance cast Like doubtful hue : but he his wonted pride Soon recollecting, with high words, that bore Semblance of worth not substance, gently rais'd Their fainting courage, and dispell'd their fears. 530 Then straight commands that at the warlike sound Of trumpets loud and clarions be uprear'd His mighty standard : that proud honour claim'd Azazel as his right, a Cherub tall; Who forthwith from the glittering staff unfurl'd Th' imperial ensign, which full high advanc'd Shone like a meteor streaming to the wind, With gems and golden lustre rich emblazid, Seraphic arms and trophies ; all the while Sonorous metal blowing martial sounds : 540 At which the universal host up sent A shout, that tore Hell's concave; and beyond Frighted the reign of Chaos and old Fight. All in a moment through the gloom were seen Ten thousand banners rise into the dar Vith orient colours waving : with them rose

A forest huge of spears, and thronging helms Appear'd, and servied shields in thick array Of depth immeasurable : anon they move In perfect phalanx to the Dorian mood Of flutes and soft recorders : such as rais'd To height of noblest temper heroes old Arming to battle, and instead of rage Deliberate valour breath'd, firm and unmov'd With dread of death to flight or foul retreat; Nor wanting pow'r to mitigate and swage With solemn touches, troubled thoughts, and c Anguish and doubt and fear and sorrow' and 1 From mortal or immortal minds. Thus they Breathing united force with fixed thought Mov'd on in silence to soft pipes, that charm'd Their painful steps o'er the burnt soil; and no Advanc'd in view they stand, a horrid front Of dreadful length and dazzling arms, in guis Of warriors old with order'd spear and shield, Awaiting what command their mighty chief Had to impose : He through the armed files Darts his experienc'd eye, and soon traverse The whole battalion views, their order due. Their visages and statures as of Gods. Their number last he sums. And now his hes Distends with pride, and hard'ning in his stre Glories : for never since created man, Met such embodied force, as nam'd with these Could merit more than that small infantry Warr'd on by cranes; though all the giant br

BOOK I. ]

Of Phlegra with th' heroic race were join'd That fought at Thebes and Ilium, on each side Mix'd with auxiliar Gods; and what resounds In fable or romance of Uther's son, 58e Begirt with British and Armoric knights; And all who since, baptiz'd or infidel, Jousted in Aspramont or Montalban, Damasco, or Marocco, or Trebisond, Or whom Biserta sent from Afric shore When Charlemain with all his peerage fell By Fontarabbia. Thus far these beyond Compare of mortal prowess, yet observ'd Their dread commander : he above the rest In shape and gesture proudly eminent 590 Stood like a tow'r; his form had not yet lost All her original brightness, nor appear'd Less than Arch-Angel ruin'd, and th' excess Of glory' obscur'd; as when the sun new risen Looks through the horizontal misty air Shorn of his beams, or from behind the moon In dim eclipse disastrous twilight sheds On half the nations, and with fear of change Perplexes monarchs. Darken'd so, yet shone Above them all th' Arch-Angel: but his face 600 Deep scars of thunder had intrench'd, and care Sat on his faded cheek, but under brows Of dauntless courage, and considerate pride Waiting revenge: cruel his eye, but cast Signs of remorse and passion to behold The fellows of his crime, the followers rather (Far other once beheld in bliss) condemn'd For ever now to have their lot in pain, Millions of Spirits for his fault amerc'd Of Heav'n, and from eternal splendours flung 610 For his revolt, yet faithful how they stood, Their glory wither'd : as when Heav'n's fire Hath scath'd the forest oaks, or mountain pines, With singed top their stately growth though bare Stands on the blasted heath. He now prepar'd To speak; whereat their doubled ranks they bend From wing to wing, and half inclose him round With all his peers : attention held them mute. Thrice he assay'd, and thrice in spite of scorn Tears, such as Angels weep, burst forth : atlast 610 Words interwove with sighs found out their way.

159

BOOK L

O Myriads of immortal Spi'rits, O Powers Matchless, but with th' Almighty, and that strift Was not inglorious, though th' event was dire, As this place testifies, and this dire change, Hateful to utter: but what pow'r of mind, Foreseeing or presaging, from the depth Of knowledge past or present, could have fear'd, How such united force of Gods, how such As stood like these, could ever know repulse? 630 For who can yet believe, though after loss, That all these puisant legions, whose exile Hath emptied Heav'n, shall fail to re-ascend Self-rais'd, and repossess their native seat? For me be witness all the host of Heav'n, If counsels different, or dangers shunn'd

160

100KI.]

By me, have lost our hopes. But he who reigns Monarch in Heav'n, till then as one secure Sa on his throne, upheld by old repute, Consent or custom, and his regal state 649 Put forth at full, but still his strength conceal'd, Which tempted our attempt, and wrought our fall. Henceforth his might we know, and know our own, So as not either to provoke, or dread New war, provok'd; our better part remains To work in close design, by fraud or guile, What force effected not: that he no less At length from us may find, who overcomes By force, hath overcome but half his foe. Space may produce new worlds; whereof so rife 650 There went a fame in Heav'n that he ere long Intended to create, and therein plant A generation, whom his choice regard Should favour equal to the sons of Heaven : Thither, if but to pry, shall be perhaps Our first eruption, thither or elsewhere : For this infernal pit shall never hold Celestial Spirits in bondage, nor th' abys Long under darkness cover. But these thoughts Full counsel must mature : Peace is despair'd, 660 For who can think submission! War, then, War Open or understood must be resolv'd.

He spake: and to confirm his words, out flew Millions of flaming swords, drawn from the thighs Of mighty Cherubim; the sudden blaze

Far round illumin'd Hell ; highly they rag'd

I nere stoon a nun not rar, wnose gra: Belch'd fire and rolling smoke; the rest Shone with a glossy scurf, undoubted s That in his womb was hid metallic ore, The work of sulphur. Thither wing'c A numerous brigade hasten'd: as when Of pioneers with spade and pickax arm Forerun the royal camp, to trench a fie Or cast a rampart. Mammon led them Mammon, the least erected Spi'rit that i From Heav'n, for e'en in Heav'n his looks a Were always downward bent, admiring The riches of Heav'n's pavement, trod Than ought divine or holy else enjoy'd In vision beatific: by him first

Men also, and by his suggestion taught Ransack'd the centre, and with impious Rifled the bowels of their mother earth For treasures better hid. Soon had his

100K I.]

PARADISE LOST.

By Spirits reprobate, and in an hour What in an age they with incessant toil And hands innumerable scarce perform. Nigh on the plain in many cells prepar'd, 700 That underneath had veins of liquid fire Sluic'd from the lake, a second multitude With wond'rous art founded the massy ore, Severing each kind, and scumm'd the bullion dross: A third as soon had form'd within the ground A various mould, and from the boiling cells By strange conveyance fill'd each hollow nook, As in an organ from one blast of wind To many a row of pipes the sound-board breathes. Anon out of the earth a fabric huge 719 Rose like an exhalation, with the sound Of dulcet symphonies and voices sweet, Built like a temple, where pilasters round Were set, and Doric pillars overlaid With golden architrave; nor did there want Cornice or freeze, with bossy sculptures graven ; The roof was fretted gold. Not Babylon, Nor great Alcairo such magnificence Equal'd in all their glories, to inshrine Belus or Serapis their Gods, or seat 7.20 Their kings, when Egypt with Assyria strove In wealth and luxury. Th' ascending pile Stood fix'd her stately height, and straight the doors Opening their brazen folds discover wide Within her ample space, o'er the smooth And level pavement : from the arched roof

163

Pendent by subtle magic many a row Of starry lamps and blazing cressets, fed With Naphtha and Asphaltus, vielded light As from a sky. The hasty multitude 734 Admiring enter'd, and the work some praise And some the architect : his hand was known In Heav'n by many a tow'red structure high, Where scepter'd Angels held their residence, And sat as princes, whom the supreme King Exalted to such pow'r, and gave to rule, Each in his hierarchy, the orders bright. Nor was his name unheard or unador'd In Ancient Greece; and in Ausonian land 744 Men call'd him Mulciber; and how he fell From Heav'n, they fabled, thrown by angry love Sheer o'er the crystal battlements ; from morn To noon he fell, from noon to dewy eve, A summer's day; and with the setting sun Dropt from the zenith like a falling star, On Lemnos th' Ægean isle : thus they relate. Erring; for he with this rebellious rout Fell long before; nor ought avail'd him now T'have built in Heav'n high tow'rs; nor did he's By all his engines, but was headlong sent 1 With his industrious crew to build in Hell:

Mean while the winged heralds by command Of sov'reign pow'r, with awful ceremony And trumpets sound, throughout the host prov A solemn council forthwith to be held At Pandemonium, the high capital place or choice the worthiest; they anon ith hundreds and with thousands trooping came rended: all access was throng'd, the gates 761 nd porches wide, but chief the spacious hall L'hough like a cover'd field, where champions bold Vont ride in arm'd, and at the Soldan's chair >efy'd the best of Panim chivalry  $\Gamma_{O}$  mortal combat, or career with lance) Thick swarm'd, both on the ground and in the air, Brush'd with the hiss of rustling wings. As been In spring time, when the sun with Taurus rides, Pour forth their populous youth about the hive 770 In clusters ; they among fresh dews and flowers Fly to and fro, or on the smoothed plank, The suburb of their straw-built citadel, New rubb'd with balm, expatiate and confer Their state affairs. So thick the airy croud Swarm'd and were straiten'd; till the signal giv'n, Behold a wonder! they but now who seem'd In bigness to surpass each's giant sons, Nove less than smallest dwarfs, in narrow room Throng numberless, like that pygmean race 780 Bey Ond the Indian mount, or fairy elves, Whose midnight revels by a forest side Or fountain some belated peasant sees, Or dreams he sees, while over-head the moon Sits arbitress, and nearer to the earth Wheels her pale course, they on their mirth and da

PARADISE LOST.

Intent, with jocund music charm his ear; At once with joy and fear his heart rebounds. Thus incorporeal Spi'rits to smallest forms Reduc'd their shapes immense, and were at large, Though without number still amidst the hall 791 Of that infernal court. But far within, And in their own dimensions like themselves, The great Seraphic Lords and Cherubim In close recess and secret conclave sat A thousand Demi-gods on golden seats, Frequent and full. After short silence then And summons read, the great consult began.

THE END OF THE FIRST BOOK.

BOOK II.

THE ARGUMENT.

The consultation begun, Satan debates whether another battle be to be starded for the recovery of Heaven: Some advise it, others dissuade: A third proposal is preferred, mentioned before by Satan, to search the ruth of that prophecy or tradition in Heaven concerning another world, and another kind of creature equal or not much inferior to themselves, ilout this time to be created : Their doubt who shall be sent on this diffirult search; Satan their chief undertakes alone the voyage, is bonoured and applauded. The council thus ended, the rest betake them several ways, and to several employments, as their inclinations lead them, to entertain the time till Satan return. He passes on his journey to Hell gates, finds them shut, and who sate there to guard them, by whom at length it ey are openel, and discover to him the great gulf between Hell and Heaven; with what difficulty he pas-es through, directed by Chaos, the Power of that place, to the sight of this new world which he sought.

HIGH on a throne of royal state, which far Outshone the wealth of Ormus and of Ind, Or where the gorgous east with richest hand Show'rs on her kings barbaric pearl and gold, Satan exclted sat, by merits rais'd To that bad eminence; and from despair Thus high uplifted beyond hope, aspires Beyond thus high, insatiate to pursue Vain war with Heav'n, and by success untaught His proud inaginations thus display'd. Pow'rs and Dominions, Deities of Heav'n, 'or since no deep within her gulf can hold Vol. 1.

.

PARADISE LOST. [BOOK

Immortal vigour, though oppress'd and fall'n. I give not Heav'n for lost. From this descent Celestial virtues rising, will appear More glorious and more dread than from no fall, And trust themselves to fear no second fate. Me, though just right, and the fix'd laws of Heave Did first create your leader, next free choice. With what besides, in council or in fight, 20 Hath been achiev'd of merit, vet this loss Thus far at least recover'd, hath much more Establish'd in a safe unenvied throne, Yielded with full consent. The happier state In Heav'n, which follows dignity, might draw Envy from each inferior : but who here Will envy whom the highest place exposes Foremost to stand against the 'Thund'rer's aim Your bulwark, and condemns to greatest share Of endless pain? where there is then no good 3º For which to strive, no strife can grow up there From faction; for none sure will claim in Hell Precedence; none, whose portion is so small Of present pain, that with ambitious mind Will covet more. With this advantage then To union, and firm faith, and firm accord, More than can be in Heav'n, we now return To claim our just inheritance of old. Surer to prosper than prosperity Could have assur'd us; and by what best way, A Whether of open war or covert guile, We now debate; who can advise, muy speak.

)K II.] PARADISE LOST.

He ceas'd; and next him Moloch, scepter'd king, >od up, the strongest and the fiercest Spirit lat fought in Heav'n, now hercer by despair : s trust was with th' Eternal to be deem'd ul in strength, and rather than be less r'd not to be at all; with that care lost ent all his fear : of God, or Hell, or worse reck'd not, and these words thereafter suake. co My sentence is for open war : of wiles, )re unexpert, I boast not: them let those ntrive who need, or when they need, not now. " while they sit contriving, shall the rest, llions that stand in arms, and longing wait e signal to ascend, sit ling'ring here av'n's fugitives, and for their dwelling place cept this dark opprobious den of shame, e prison of his tyranny who reigns our delay ? no. let us rather choose. 60 n'd with Hell flames and fury, all at once " Heav'n's high tow'rs to force resistless way, ming our tortures into horrid arms inst the torturer; when to meet the noise his almighty engine he shall hear rnal thunder, and for lightning see :k fire and horror shot with equal rage Ong his Angels, and his throne itself 'd with Tartarean sulphur, and strange fire, Own invented torments. But perhaps 79 way seems difficult and steep, to scale h upright wing against a higher foe.

Let such bethink them, if the sleepy drench Of that forgetful lake benumb not still, That in our proper motion we ascend Up to our native seat : descent and fall To us is adverse. Who but felt of late. When the fierce foe hung on our broken rear Insulting, and pursued us through the deep, With what compulsion and laborious flight 80 We sunk thus low? Th' ascent is easy then: Th' event is fear'd; should we again provoke Our stronger, some worse way his wrath may find To our destruction : if there be in Hell Fear to be worse destroy'd : what can be worse Than to dwell here, driv'n out from bliss, condemn'd In this abhorr'd deep to utter woe: Where pain of unextinguishable fire Must exercise us without hope of end The vassals of his anger, when the scourge 99 Inexorably, and the torturing hour Calls us to penance? More destroy'd than thus We should be quite abolish'd and expire. What fear we then ? what doubt we to incense His utmost ire ? which to the height enrag'd, Will either quite consume us, and reduce To nothing this essential, happier far Than miserable to have eternal being : Or if our substance be indeed divine, And cannot cease to be, we are at worst 100 On this side nothing; and by proof we feel Our power sufficient to disturb his Heaven,

And with perpetual inroads to alarm, Though inaccessible, his fatal throne : Which, if not victory, is yet revenge.

He ended frowning, and his look denounc'd Desp'rate revenge, and battle dangerous To less than Gods. On th' other side up rose Belial, in act more graceful and humane; A fairer person lost not Heav'n; he seem'd For dignity compos'd and high exploit : But all was false and hollow; though his tongue Dropt manna, and could make the worse appear The better reason, to perplex and dash Maturest counsels : for his thoughts were low; To vice industrious, but to nobler deeds Timorous and slothful : yet he pleas'd the ear, A nd with persuasive accent thus began.

I should be much for open war, O Peers! As not behind in hate, if what was urg'd 120 Main reason to persuade immediate war, Did not dissuade me most, and seem to cast Ominous conjecture on the whole success: When he who most excels in fact of arms, In what he counsels and in what excels Mistrustful, grounds his courage on despair And utter dissolution, as the scope Of all his aim, after some dire revenge. First, what revenge ? the tow'rs of Heav'n are fill'd With armed watch, that render all access 110 Impregnable; oft on the bord'ring deep Encamp their legions, or with obscure wing

Scout far and wide into the realm of night, Scorning surprise. Or could we break our way By force, and at our heels all Hell should rise With blackest insurrection, to confound Heav'n's purest light, yet our great enemy All incorruptible would on his throne Sit unpolluted, and th' ethereal mould Incapable of stain would soon expel 140 Her mischief, and purge off the baser fire Victorious. Thus repuls'd, our final hope Is flat despair : we must exasperate Th' Almighty Victor to spend all his rage. And that must end us, that must be our cure, To be no more; sad cure; for who would lose, Though full of pain, this intellectual being, Those thoughts that wander through eternity, 'To perish rather, swallow'd up and lost In the wide womb of uncreated night, 150 Devoid of sense and motion? and who knows, Let this be good, whether our angry foe. Can give it, or will ever? how he can Is doubtful; that he never will is sure. Will he, so wise, let loose at once his ire. Belike through impotence, or unaware, To give his enemies their wish, and end Them in his anger, whom his anger saves 'To punish endless ? Wherefore cease we then? Say they who counsel war, we are decreed, 169 Reserv'd, and destin'd to eternal woe; Whatever doing, what can we suffer more,

What can we suffer worse? Is this then worst, Thus sitting, thus consulting, thus in arms? What when we fled amain, pursued and struck With Heav'n's afflicting thunder, and besought The deep to shelter us ? this Hell then seem'd <sup>1</sup> refuge from those wounds: or when we lay hain'd on the burning lake ? that sure was worse. N hat if the breath that kindled those grim fires, 170 wak'd should blow them into sev'nfold rage, ind plunge us in the flames? or from above hould intermitted vengeance arm again is red right hand to plague us? what if all er stores were open'd, and this firmament f Hell should spout her cataracts of fire, npendent horrors, threat'ning hideous fall 'ne day upon our heads; while we perhaps 'esigning or exhorting glorious war, aught in a fiery tempest shall be hurl'd 180 * "Ch on his rock transfix'd, the sport and prey f wracking whirlwinds, and for ever sunk nder yon boiling ocean, wrapt in chains; bere to converse with everlasting groans, nrespited, unpitied, unrepriev'd, Ses of hopeless end! this would be worse. Var therefore, open or conceal'd, alike Iy voice dissuades; for what can force or guile Vith him, or who deceive his mind, whose eye iews all things at one view ? he from Heav'n's height Il these our motions vain sees and derides; 194 of more almighty to resist our might

Than wise to frustrate all our plots and Shall we then live thus vile, the race of Thus trampled, thus expell'd to suffer Chains and these torments? better these By my advice : since fate inevitable Subdues us. and omnipotent decree. The victor's will. To suffer, as to do. Our strength is equal, nor the law unju That so ordains : this was at first resol-If we were wise, against so great a foe Contending, and so doubtful what migl I laugh, when those who at the spear a And vent'rous, if that fail them, shrin! What yet they know must follow, to en Exile, or ignominy', or bonds, or pain The sentence of their conqu'ror : this Our doom; which if we can sustain an Our súpreme foe in time may much ren His anger, and perhaps thus far remov' Not mind us not offending, satisfy'd With what is punish'd; whence these 1 Will slacken, if his breath stir not the Our purer essence then will overcome Their noxious vapour, or inur'd not fe Or chang'd at length, and to the place ( In temper and in nature, will receive Familiar the fi rce heat, and void of pa This horror will grow mild, this darknes Besides what hope the never-ending fli Of future days may bring, what chance

. II.] PARADISE LOST.

-th waiting, since our present lot appears happy though but ill, for ill not worst, 'e procure not to ourselves more woe. hus Belial with words cloth'd in reason's garb nsel'd ignoble ease, and peaceful sloth, peace : and after him thus Mammon spake. ther to disinthrone the King of Heaven war, if war be best, or to regain 230 own right lost: him to unthrone we then hope, when everlasting Fate shall yield ickle Chance, and Chaos judge the strife: former vain to hope argues as vain latter : for what place can be for us hin Heav'n's bound, unless Heav'n's Lord upreme

overpow'r? Suppose he should relent, publish grace to all, on promise made ew subjection; with what eyes could we 1 in his presence humble, and receive 240 t laws impos'd, to celebrate his throne 1 warbled hymns, and to his Godhead sing 'd Hallelujahs; while he lordly sits envied sov'reign, and his altar breathes rosial odours and ambrosial flowers. cryile offerings? This must be our task eav'n, this our delight; how wearisome ity so spent in worship paid 'hom we hate ! Let us not then pursue rce impossible, by leave obtain'd 219 reptable, though in Heav'n, our state

Of splendid vassalage; but rather seek Our own good from ourselves, and from our own Live to ourselves, though in this vast recess, Free, and to none accountable, preferring Hard liberty before the easy yoke Of servile pomp. Our greatness will appear Then most conspicuous, when great things of small, Useful of hurtful, prosp'rous of adverse We can create, and in what place so e'er 260 Thrive under ev'il, and work ease out of pain Through labour and indurance. This deep world Of darkness do we dread? How oft amidst Thick cloud and dark doth Heav'n's all-ruling Sire Choose to reside, his glory unobscur'd, And with the majesty of darkness round Covers his throne; from whence deep thunders roar Must'ring their rage, and Heav'n resembles Hell? As he our darkness, cannot we his light Imitate when we please ? This desert soil 270 Wants not her hidden lustre, gems and gold; Nor want we skill or art, from whence to raise Magnificence; and what can Heav'n shew more? Our torments also may in length of time Become our elements, these piercing fires As soft as now severe, our temper chang'd Into their temper; which must nee.ls remove The sensible of pain. All things invite To peaceful counsels, and the settled state Of order, how in safety best we may 180 Compose our present evils, with regard

Of what we are and where, dismissing quite All thoughts of war: ye have what I advise.

He scarce had finish'd, when such murmur fill'd Th' assembly, as when hollow rocks retain The sound of blust ring winds, which all night long Had rous'd the sea, now with hoarse cadence lull Sea faring men o'er-watch'd, whose bark by chance Or pinnace anchors in a craggy bay After the tempest: Such applause was heard 290 As Mammon ended, and his sentence pleas'd, Advising peace: for such another field They dreaded worse than Hell: so much the fear Of thunder and the sword of Michaël Wrought still within them; and no less desire To found this nether empire, which might rise By policy, and long process of time, In emulation opposite to Heav'n. Which when Beelzebub perceiv'd than whom, Satan except, none higher sat, with grave 300 Aspéct he rose, and in his rising seem'd A pill'ar of state; deep on his front engraven Deliberation sat and public care; And princely counsel in his face yet shone, <sup>Aajestic</sup> though in ruin : sage he stood Vith Atlantean shoulders fit to bear he weight of mightiest monarchies; his look rew audience and attention still as night " Summer's noon-tide air, while thus he spake. Thrones and Imperial Pow'rs, Offspring of Heav'n, hereal Virtues; or these titles now 311

t

Must we renounce, and changing stile be call'd Princes of Hell? for so the popular vote Inclines, here to continue', and build up here A growing empire; doubtless; while we dream, And know not that the King of Heav'n hath doom'd This place our dungeon, not our safe retreat Beyond his potent arm, to live exempt From Heav'n's high jurisdiction, in new league Banded against his throne, but to remain 120 In strictest bondage, though thus far remov'd Under th' inevitable curb, reserv'd His captive multitude : for he, be sure, In height or depth, still first and last will reign Sole king, and of his kingdom lose no part By our revolt, but over Hell extend His empire, and with iron sceptre rule Us here, as with his golden those in Heaven. What sit we then projecting peace and war? War hath determin'd us, and foil'd with loss 110 Irreparable; terms of peace yet none Vouchsaf'd or sought; for what peace will be given To us inslav'd, but custody severe, And stripes, and arbitrary punishment Inflicted? and what peace can we return. But to our pow'r hostility and hate, Untam'd reluctance, and revenge though slow, Yet ever plotting how the conque'ror least May reap his conquest, and may least rejoice In doing what we most in suffering feel? 370 Nor will occasion want, nor shall we need

I.] PARADISE LOST.

dang'rous expedition to invade n, whose high walls fear no assault or siege, ubush from the deep. What if we find easier enterprise? There is a place, icient and prophetic fame in Heaven ot) another world, the happy seat me new race call'd Man, about this time : created like to us, though less w'r and excellence, but favour'd more 350 m who rules above; so was his will bunc'd among the Gods, and by an oath, hook Heav'n's whole circumference, confirm'd. ier let us bend all our thoughts, to learn : creatures there inhabit, of what mould bstance, how endued, and what their power, where their weakness, how attempted best, rce or subtlety. Though Heav'n be shut, Heav'n's high arbitrator sit secure 3 own strength, this place may lie expos'd, 360 atmost border of his kingdom, left heir defence who hold it : here perhaps advantageous act may de atchiev'd idden onset, either with Hell fire aste his whole creation, or possess s our own, and drive, as we were driven, puny habitants, or if not drive, e them to our party, that their God prove their foe, and with repenting hand ish his own works. This would surpass 370 ion revenge, and interrupt his joy L, I. Q

PARADISE LOST.

BOOK II.

In our confusion, and our joy upraise In his disturbance: when his darling sons, Hurl'd headlong to partake with us, shall curse Their frail original, and faded bliss. Faded so soon. Advise if this be worth Attempting, or to sit in darkness here Hatching vain empires. Thus Beëlzebub Pleaded his devilish counsel, first devis'd By Satan, and in part propos'd: for whence, 389 But from the author of all ill, could spring So deep a malice, to confound the race Of mankind in one root, and Earth with Hell To mingle and involve, done all to spite The great Creator? But their spite still serves His glory to augment. 'The bold design Pleas'd highly those infernal States, and joy Sparkled in all their eyes; with full assent They vote: whereat his speech he thus renews.

Well have ye judg'd, well ended long debate, 39° Synod of Gods, and like to what ye are, Great things resolv'd, which from the lowest deep Will once more lift us up in spite of fate, Nearer our ancient seat; perhaps in view Of those bright confines, whence with neighbring arms

And opportune excursion we may chance Re-enter Heav'n; or else in some mild zone Dwell not unvisited of Heav'n's fair light Secure, and at the brightning orient beam Purge off this gloom; the soft delicious air, 490 heal the scar of these corrosive fires. all breathe her balm. But first whom shall we send search of this new world? Whom shall we find ficient? Who shall tempt with wand'ring feet e dark unbottom'd infinite abyss. d through the palpable obscure find out uncouth way, or spread his airy flight borne with indefatigable wings er the vast abrupt, ere he arrive e happy isle ? What strength, what art can then fice, or what evasion bear him safe 411 rough the strict senteries and stations thick Angels watching round? Here he had need circumspection, and we now no less ice in our suffrage; for on whom we send, weight of all our last hope relies. his said. he sat: and expectation held ook suspense, awaiting who appear'd cond, or oppose, or undertake verilous attempt ; but all sat mute, 420 ring the danger with deep thoughts; and each ers count'nance read his own dismay sh'd: none among the choice and prime e Heav'n-warring champions could be found y as to proffer or accept he dreadful voyage; till at last 'hom now transcendent glory rais'd is fellows, with monarchal pride : of highest worth, unmov'd thus spake. Q 2

O Progeny of Heav'n, empyreal Thrones, 430 With reason hath deep silence and demur Sciz'd us, though undismuy'd: long is the way And hard, that out of Hell leads up to light; Our prison strong; this huge convex of fire, Outrageous to devour, immures us round Ninefold, and gates of burning adamant Barr'd over us prohibit all egress. These pass'd, if any pass, the void profound Of unessential Night receives him next Wide gaping, and with utter loss of being Threatens him, plung'd in that abortive gulf. If thence he 'scape into whatever world, Or unknown region, what remains him less Than unknown dangers, and as hard escape? But I should ill become this throne, O Peers, And this imperial sov'reignty, adorn'd With splendour, arm'd with pow'r, if ought propes'd And judg'd of public moment, in the shape Of difficulty or danger, could deter Me from attempting. Wherefore do' I assume 450 These royalties, and not refuse to reign, Refusing to accept as great a share Of hazard as of honour, due alike To him who reigns, and so much to him due Of hazard more, as he above the rest High honour'd sits? Go therefore, mighty Powers

Terror of Heav'n, though fall'n; intend at home, While here shall be our home, what best may e

e present misery, and render Hell re tolerable; if there be cure or charm 460 respite, or receive, or slack the pain this ill mansion infermit no watch ainst a wakeful foe, while I abroad rough all the coasts of dark destruction seek liverance for us all: this enterprise ne shall partake with me. Thus saying, rose le Monarch, and prevented all reply, udent. lest from his resolution rais'd hers among the chief might offer now ertain to be refus'd) what erst they fear'd; 470 nd so refus'd might in opinion stand is rivals, winning cheap the high repute 'hich he through hazard huge must earn. But they readed not more th' adventure than his voice rbidding; at once with him they rose; heir rising all at once was as the sound thunder heard remote. Tow'ards him they bend ith awful reverence prone; and as a God tol him equal to the high'st in Heaven : r fail'd they to express how much they prais'd, 480 at for the general safety he despis'd 3 own : for neither do the Spirits damn'd se all their virtue; lest bad men should boast eir specious deeds on earth, which glory' excites, close ambition varnish'd o'er with zeal. us they their doubtful consultations dark. ded rejoicing in their matchless chief . when from mountain-tops the dusky clouds Ascending, while the north-wind sleeps Heav'n's cheerful face, the low'ring ele Scowls o'er the darken'd landskip snow If chance the radiant sun with farewel Extend his evening beam, the fields re The birds their notes renew, and bleat Attest their joy, that hill and valley ri O shame to men! Devil with Devil dan Firm concord holds, men only disagre Of creatures rational, though under h Of heav'nly grace: and God proclaimi Yet live in hatred, enunity, and strife Among themselves, and levy cruel was Wasting the earth, each other to destr As if (which might induce us to accor Man had not hellish foes enow besides That day and night for his destruction

18g

The Stygian council thus dissolv'd; In order came the grand infernal peers Midst came their mighty paramount, : Alone th' antagonist of Heav'n, nor l Than Hell's dread emperor with pomp And God-like imitated state; him rou A globe of fiery Seraphim inclos'd With bright emblazonry, and horrent Then of their session ended they bid c With trumpets regal sound the great r Tow'ards the four winds four speedy ( J'ut to their mouths the sounding alche By heralds voice explain'd; the holic

Heard far and wide, and all the host of Hell With deaf 'ning shout return'd them loud acclaim. 520 Thencemore at ease their minds, and somewhat rais'd By false presumptuous hope, the ranged Powers Disband, and wand'ring, each his several way Pursues. as inclination or sad choice Leads him perplex'd, where he may likeliest find Truce to his restless thoughts, and entertain The irksome hours, till his great chief return. Part on the plain, or in the air sublime. Upon the wing, or in swift race contend, As at th' Olympian games or Pythian fields ; 530 Part curb their fiery steeds, or shun the goal With rapid wheels, or fronted brigades form. As when to warn proud cities war appears Wag'd in the troubled sky, and armies rush To battle in the clouds, before each van Prick forth the airy knights, and couch their spears Till thickest legions close; with feats of arms From either end of Heav'n the welkin burns. Others with vast Typhcan rage more fell Rend up both rocks and hills, and ride the air 540 In whirlwind; Hell scarce holds the wild uproar. As when Alcides, from Oechalia crown'd With conquest, felt th' envenom'd robe, and tore Through pain up by the roots Thessalian pines, And Lichas from the top of Oeta threw Into th' Euboic sea. Others more mild, Re reated in a silent valley, sing With notes angelical to many a harp

Their own heroic deeds and hapless fall By doom of battle; and complain that fate Free virtue should inthrall to force her chance Their song was partial, but the harmony (What could it less when Spi'rits immortal sin Suspended Hell, and took with ravishment The thronging audience. In discourse more s (For eloquence the soul, song charms the sens Others apart sat on a hill retir'd, In thoughts more elevate, and reason'd high Of providence, foreknowledge, will, and fate Fix'd fate, free will, foreknowledge absolute, And found no end, in wand'ring mazes lost. Of good and evil much they argued then, Of happiness and final misery, Passion and apathy, and glory' and shame, Vain wisdom all, and false philosophy : Yet with a pleasing sorcery could charm Pain for a while or anguish, and excite Fallacious hope, or arm th' obdured breast With stubborn patience as with triple steel. Another part in squadrons and gross bands, On hold adventure to discover wide That dismal world, if any clime perhaps Might yield them easier habitation, bend Four ways their flying march, along the bank Of four infernal rivers, that disgorge Into the burning lake their baleful streams; Abhorred Styx, the flood of deadly hate; Sad Acheron of sorrow, black and deep;

b. 1

tus, nam'd of lamentation loud d on the rueful stream; fierce Phlegethon, 580 se wayes of torrent fire inflame with rage. off from these a slow and silent stream. e the river of oblivion rolls wat'ry labyrinth, whereof who drinks, hwith his former state and be'ing forgets, ets both joy and grief, pleasure and pain. nd this flood a frozen continent dark and wild, beat with perpetual storms whirlwind and dire hail, which on firm land ws not, but gathers heap, and ruin seems 590 ncient pile; all else deep snow and ice, ilf profound as that Serbonian bog ixt Damiata and mount Casius old, re armies whole have sunk : the parching air is frore, and cold performs th' effect of fire. her by harpy-footed furies hal'd ertain revolutions all the danin'd brought; and feel by turns the bitter change erce extremes, extremes by change more fierce, 1 beds of raging fire to starve in ice 600 r soft ethereal warmth, and there to pine oveable, infix'd, and frozen round, ods of time, thence hurried back to fire. / ferry over this Lethean sound to and fro, their sorrow to augment, wish and struggle, as they pass, to reach tempting stream, with one small drop to lose véct forgetfulness all pain and woe, .

All in one moment, and so near the brink; But fate withstands, and to oppose th' attempt 616 Medusa with Gorgonian terror guards The ford, and of itself the water flies All taste of living wight, as once it fled The lip of Tantalus. Thus roving on In cónfus'd march forlorn, th' advent'rous bands With shudd'ring horror pale, and eyes aghast, View'd first their lamentable lot, and found No rest: through many a dark and dreary vale They pass'd, and many a region dolorous, O'er many a frozen, many a fiery Alp, 62 Rocks, caves, lakes, fens, bogs, dens, and shades death,

A universe of death, which God by curse Created ev'il, for evil only good, Where all life dies, death lives, and nature breeds Perverse, all monstrous, all prodigious things, Abominable, inutterable, and worse Than fables yet have feign'd, or fear conceiv'd; Gorgons, and Hydras, and Chimæras dire.

Meanwhile the Adversary' of God and Man, Satan with thoughts inflam'd of high'est design, 63 Puts on swift wings, and tow'ards the gates of Hel Explores his solitary flight; sometimes He scours the right hand coast, sometimes the left Now shaves with level wing the deep, then soars Up to the fiery concave tow'ring high. As when far off at sea a fleet descry'd Hangs in the clouds, by equinoctial winds se sailing from Bengala, or the isles Ternate and Tidore, whence merchants bring eir spicy drugs: they on the trading flood 640 rough the wide Ethiopian to the Cape stemming nightly tow'ard the pole. So seem'd ' off the flying Fiend : at last appear 1 bounds high reaching to the horrid roof, d thrice threefold the gates; three folds were brass, ree iron, three of adamantine rock. >enetrable, impaled with circling fire, : unconsum'd. Before the gates there sat either side a formidable shape; e one seem'd woman to the waist, and fair, 650 : ended foul in many a scaly fold uminous and vast, a serpent arm'd th mortal sting: about her middle round :ry of Hell hounds never ceasing bark'd th wide Cerberian mouths full loud, and rung ideous peal: yet, when they list, would creep, >ught disturb'd their noise, into her womb, d kennel there, yet there still bark'd and howl'd, thin unseen. Far less abhorr'd than these <'d Scylla, bathing in the sea that parts 660 Bbria from the hoarse Trinacrian shore : r uglier follow the night hag, when call'd secret, riding through the air she comes, "d with the smell of infant blood, to dance th Lapland witches, while the lab'ring moon Pses at their charms. The other shape, hape it might be call'd that shape had none

Distinguishable in member, joint, or limb, Or substance might be call'd that shadow seem'd . For each seem'd either; black it stood as Night, G = Fierce as ten furies, terrible as Hell, And shook a dreadful dart; what seem'd his he The likeness of a kingly crown had on. Satan was now at hand, and from his seat The monster moving onward came as fast With horrid strides, Hell trembled as he strode. Th' undaunted Fiend what this might be admir', Admir'd, not fear'd; God and his Son except, Created thing nought valued he nor shunn'd; And with disdainful look thus first began.

Whence and what art thou, execrable shape, That dar'st, though grim and terrible, advance Thy miscreated front athwart my way To yonder gates? Through them I mean to pass? That be assured, without leave ask'd of thee: Retire, or taste thy folly', and learn by proof, Hell-born, not to contend with Spi'rits of Heaven.

To whom the goblin full of wrath reply'd. Art thou that traitor Angel, art thou He, Who first broke peace in Heav'n and faith, till then Unbroken, and in proud rebellious arms 69<sup>1</sup> Drew after him the third part of Heav'n's sons Conjur'd against the High'est, for which both thou And they, outcast from God, are here condemn'd To waste eternal days in woe and pain? And reckon'st thou thyself with Spi'rits of Heav'n, Hell-doom'd, and breath'st defiance here and score

I.] PARADISE LOST.

e I reign king, and to enrage thee more, sing and lord ? Back to thy punishment, fugitive, and to thy speed add wings, 700 vith a whip of scorpions I pursue ing'ring, or with one stroke of this dart ze horror seize thee, and pangs unfelt before. spake the grisly terror, and in shape, aking and so threat'ning, grew tenfold dreadful and deform : on th' other side s'd with indignation Satan stood rifi'd, and like a comet burn'd, fires the length of Ophiuchus huge ' arctic sky, and from his horrid hair 710 s pestilence and war. Each at the head 'd his deadly aim : their fatal hands cond stroke intend, and such a frown cast at th' other, as when two black clouds, Heav'n's artillery fraught, come rattling on the Caspian, then stand front to front / ring a space, till winds the signal blow in their dark encounter in mid-air: wn'd the mighty combatants, that Hell darker at their frown, so match'd they stood; ever but once more was either like 731 cet so great a foe: and now great deeds been atchiev'd, whereof all Hell had rung, tot the snaky sorceress that sat by Hell gate, and kept the fatal key, , and with hideous outcry rush'd between. L. I. R

PARADISE LOST.

O Father, what intends thy ha Against thy only Son? What fu Possesses thee to bend that morts Against thy Father's head? and 1 For him who sits above and laugh At thee ordain'd his drudge, to e Whate'er his wrath, which he cal His wrath, which one day will d

She spake, and at her words th Forbore, then these to her, Sata

So strange thy outcry, and thy Thou interposest, that my sudd Prevented, spares to tell thee yet What it intends; till first I know What thing thou art, thus doubl In this infernal vale first met tho Me Father, and that phantasm c I know thee not, nor ever saw t Sight more detestable than him a

T' whom thus the portress of Hast thou forgot me then, and d Now in thine eyes so foul? Once In Heav'n when at th' assembly, Of all the Seraphim with thee co In bold conspiracy against Heav All on a sudden miserable pain Surpriz'd thee, dim thine eyes, : In darkness, while thy head flam Threw forth, till on the left sid Likest to thee in shape and co

H.] PARADISE LOST.

n shining heav'nly fair, a Goddess arm'd of thy head I sprung : amazement seiz'd h' host of Heav'n; back they recoil'd afraid rst, and call'd me SIN, and for a sign 760 entous held me; but familiar grown, as'd, and with attractive graces won most averse, thee chiefly, who full oft self in me thy perfect image viewing m'st enamour'd, and such joy thou took'st h me in secret, that my womb conceiv'd owing burthen. Mean while war arose, fields were fought in Heav'n : wherein remain'd what could else?) to our almighty foe r victory, to our part loss and rout 770 ough all the empyréan : down they fell 'n headlong from the pitch of Heaven, down this deep, and in the general fall o; at which time this pow'rful key my hand was giv'n, with charge to keep se gates for ever shut, which none can pass nout my opening. Pensive here I sat ie, but long I sat not, till my womb nant by thee, and now excessive grown igious motion felt and rueful throes. 780 ast this odious offspring whom thou seest ie own begotten, breaking violent way : through my entrails, that with fear and pain orted, all my nether shape thus grew isform'd: but he my inbred enemy h issued, brandishing his fatal dart

R 2

193

ł

Made to destroy : I fied, and cry'd out DEATH; Heli trembled at the hideous name, and sigh'd From all her caves, and back resounded Death. I fled, but he pursued, (though more, it seems, 790 Infiam'd with lust than rage) and swifter far, Me overtook his mother all dismay'd. And in embraces forcible and foul Ingendering with me. of that rape begot These yelling monsters, that with ceaseless ay Surround me, as thou saw'st, hourly conceiv'd And hourly born, with sorrow infinite To me; for when they list into the womb That bred them, they return, and howl and gnaw My bowels, their repast; then bursting forth $00 Afresh with conscious terrors vex me round, That rest or intermission none I find. Before my eyes in opposition sits Grim Death my son and foe, who sets them on, And me his parent would full soon devour For want of other prey, but that he knows . His end with mine involv'd : and knows that I Should prove a bitter morsel, and his bane, Whenever that shall be; so fate pronounc'd. But thou, O Father, I forewarn thee, shun 810 His deadly arrow; neither vainly hope To be invulnerable in those bright arms, Though temper'd heav'nly, for that mortal dint, Save he who reigns above, none can resist.

She finish'd, and the subtle Fiend his lore Soon learn'd, now milder, and thus answer'd smoot iter, since thou claim'st me for thy sire, r son here show'st me, the dear pledge e had with thee in Heav'n, and joys now sad to mention, through dire change unforeseen, unthought of; know 821 nemy, but to set free is dark and dismal house of pain id thee, and all the heav'nly host that in our just pretences arm'd from on high : from them I go th errand sole, and one for all ose, with lonely steps to tread ded deep, and through the void immense vith wand'ring quest a place foretold 830 and, by concurring signs, ere now t and round, a place of bliss eus of Heav'n, and therein plac'd pstart creatures, to supply r vacant room, though more remov'd, 1 surcharg'd with potent multitude :o move new broils: Be this or ought nore secret now design'd, I haste and this once known, shall soon return, ve to the place where thou and Death it ease, and up and down unseen ly the buxom air, imbalm'd 's; there ye shall be fed and fill'd sly, all things shall be your prey. for both seem'd highly pleas'd, and Death rible a ghastly smile, to hear

R 3

His famine should be fill'd, and blest h Destin'd to that good hour : no less rej His mother bad, and thus bespake her :

The key of this infernal pit by due. And by command of Heav'n's all-powe I keep, by him forbidden to unlock These adamantine gates; against all fc Death ready stands to interpose his dar Fearless to be o'ermatch'd by living mi But what owe I to his commands above Who hates me, and hath hither thrust Into this gloom of Tartarus profound, To sit in hateful office here confin'd. Inhabitant of Heav'n, and heav'nly be Here in perpetual agony and pain, With terrors and with clamours compa: Of mine own brood, that on my bowel Thou art my father, thou my author, My being gav'st me; whom should I c But thee, whom follow ? thou wilt brir To that new world of light and bliss, : The Gods who live at ease, where I sh At thy right hand voluptuous, as besee Thy daughter and thy darling, withou

Thus saying, from her side the fatal Sad instrument of all our woe, she too And tow'ards the gate rolling her besti Forthwith the huge portcullis high up Which but herself, not all the Stygian Could once have mov'd; then in the b

"h' intricate wards, and every bolt and bar -)f massy ir on or solid rock with case Infastens: on a sudden open fly With impetuous recoil and jarring sound 880 Th' infernal doors, and on their hinges grate larsh thunder, that the lowest bottom shook If Erebus. She open'd, but to shut Excell'd her pow'r, the gates wide open stood, That with extended wings a banner'd host Inder spread ensigns marching might pass through With horse and chariots rank'd in loose array; io wide they stood, and like a furnace mouth Last forth redounding smoke and ruddy flame. Sefore their eyes in sudden view appear 890 The secrets of the hoary deep, a dark llimitable ocean, without bound. Nithout dimension, where length, breadth, and

height,

And time, and place are lost; where eldest Night, And Chaos, ancestors of nature, hold iternal anarchy, amidst the noise If endless wars, and by confusion stand. 'or hot, cold, moist, and dry, four champions fierce, trive here for mast'ry, and to battle bring 'heir embryon atoms; they around the flag 900 If each his faction, in their several clans, .ight-arm'd or heavy, sharp, smooth, swift or slow, warm populous, un-number'd as the sands If Barca or Cyrene's torrid soil, evied to side with warring winds, and poise heir lighter wings. To whom these most adherees PARADISE LOST.

BOOK II.

He rules a moment ; Chaos umpire sits, And by decision more embroils the fray By which he reigns : next him high arbiter Chance governs all. Into this wild abyss. 010 The womb of nature, and perhaps her grave, Of neither sea, nor shore, nor air, nor fire, But all these in their pregnant causes.mix'd Confus'dly, and which thus must ever fight, Unless th' almighty maker them ordain His dark materials to create more worlds; Into this wild abyss the wary Fiend Stood on the brink of Hell and look'd a while. Pond'ring his voyage; for no narrow frith He had to cross. Nor was his ear less peal'd 910 With noises loud and ruinous (to compare Great things with small) than when Bellona storms, With all her battering engines bent to raze Some capital city'; or less than if this frame Of Heav'n were falling, and these elements In mutiny had from her axle torn The steadfast earth. At last his sail-broad vans He spreads for flight, and in the surging smoke Uplifted spurns the ground; thence many a league, As in a cloudy chair, ascending rides 930 Audacious; but that seat soon failing, meets A vast vacuity : all unawares Fluttering his pennons vain, plumb down he drops Ten thousand fathom deep, and to this hour Down had been failing, had not by ill chance The strong rebuff of some tumultuous cloud, Instinct with fire and nitre, hurried him

As many miles aloft: that fury stay'd, Quench'd in a boggy Syrtis, neither sea, Nor good dry land : nigh founder'd on he fares, 940 Treading the crude consistence, half on foot, Half flying; behoves him now both oar and sail. As when a gryphon through the wilderness With winged course, o'er hill or moory dale, Pursues the Arimaspian, who by stealth Had from his wakeful custody purloin'd The guarded gold : So eagerly the Fiend O'er bog, or steep, through straight, rough, dense, or rare, With head, hands, wings, or feet pursues his way, And swims, or sinks, or wades, or creeps, or flies : 950 At length a universal hubbub wild Of stunning sounds and voices all confus'd, Borne through the hollow dark, assaults his ear With loudest vehemence : thither he plies, Undaunted to meet there whatever power Or Spirit of the nethermost abyss Might in that noise reside, of whom to ask Which way the nearest coast of darkness lies Bord'ring on light; when straight behold the throne Of Chaos, and his dark pavillion spread 060 Wide on the wasteful deep ; with him enthron'd Sat sable-vested Night, eldest of things, The consort of his reign; and by them stood Orcus and Ades, and the dreaded name Of Demogorgon; Rumour next and Chance, And Tumult and Confusion all embroil d.

And Discord with a thousand various mouths.

 $\Gamma$  whom Satan turning boldly, thus. Ye Pow And Spirits of this nethermost abyss, Chaos and ancient Night, I come no spy, 97 With purpose to explore or to disturb The secrets of your realm, but by constraint Wand'ring this darksome desart, as my way Lies through your spacious empire up to light, Alone, and without guide, half lost, I seek What readiest path leads where your gloomy bound Confine with Heav'n; or if some other place, From your dominion won, th' ethereal king Possesses lately, thither to arrive I travel this profound; direct my course; 080 Directed no mean recompence it brings To your behoof, if I that region lost, All usurpation thence expell'd, reduce To her original darkness and your sway (Which is my present journey) and once more Erect the standard there of ancient Night; Yours be th' advantage all, mine the revenge.

Thus Satan; and him thus the Anarch old, With falt'ring speech and visage incompos'd, Answer'd. I know thee, stranger, who thou art, That mighty leading Angel, who of late 99<sup>1</sup> Made head against Heav'n's king, though overthrown I saw and heard, for such a numerous host Fled not in silence through the frighted deep With ruin upon ruin, rout on rout, Confusion worse confounded; and Heav'n gate d out by millions her victorious bands ing. I upon my frontiers here residence; if all I can will serve little which is left so to defend. 1000 ach'd on still through your intestine broils, ' 'ning the sceptre of old Night: first Hell dungeon stretching far and wide beneath ; ately Heav'n and Earth, another world, o'er my realm, link'd in a golden chain at side Heav'n from whence your legions fell : t way be your walk, you have not far; ch the nearer danger; go and speed; and spoil and ruin are my gain. ceas'd; and Satan stay'd not to reply, 1010 ad that now his sea should find a shore. fresh alacrity and force renew'd s upward like a pyramid of fire he wild expanse, and through the shock hting elements, on all sides round m'd wins his way; harder beset tore endanger'd, than when Argo pass'd gh Bosporus betwixt the justling rocks : en Ulysses on the larboard shunn'd odis, and by th' other whirlpool steer'd. 1020 with difficulty and labour hard on, with difficulty and labour he; once past, soon after when man fell. e alteration! Sin and Death amain ing his track, such was the will of Heaven, fter him a broad and beaten way

BOOK 1

Over the dark abyss, whose boiling guif 'Tamely endur'd a bridge of wond'rous length From Hell continued reaching th' utmost orb Of this frail world; by which the Spi'rits pervers With easy intercourse pass to and fro 1031 To tempt or nunish mortals, except whom God and good Angels guard by special grace. But now at last the sacred influence Of light appears, and from the walls of Heaven Shoots far into the bosom of dim Night A glimmering dawn; here Nature first begins Her farthest verge, and Chaos to retire As from her outmost works a broken foe With tumult less and with less hostile din. 104 That Satan with less toil, and now with ease Wafts on the calmer wave by dubious light, And like a weather-beaten vessel holds Gladly the port, though shrouds and tackle torn Or in the emptier waste, resembling air, Weighs his spread wings, at leisure to behold Far off th' empyreal Heav'n, extended wide In circuit, undetermin'd square or round, With opal tow'rs and battlements adorn'd Of living sapphire, once his native seat; 40 And fast by hanging in a golden chain This pendant world, in bigness as a star Of smallest magnitude close by the moon. Thither full fraught with mischievous revenge, Accurs'd, and in a cursed hour he hies. END OF THE SECOND BOOK.

BOOK III.

THE ARGUMENT.

God sitting on his throne sees Satan flying towards this world, then :wly created ; shews him to the Son who sat at his right hand ; foretcls e success of Satan in perverting mankind; clears his own justice and isdom from all imputation, having created Man free and able enough to we withstood his tempter ; yet declares his purpose of grace towards m, in regard he fell not of his own malice, as did Satan, but by him duced. The Son of God renders praises to his Father for the manifestion of his gracious purpose towards Man ; but Gid again declares, that race cannot be extended towards Man without the satisfaction of divine stice; Man hath offended the majesty of God by aspiring to Godhead, id therefore with all his progeny devoted to death must die, unless some te can be found sufficient to answer for his offence, and undergo his pushment. The Son of God freely offers himself a ransom for Man: the ther accepts him, ordains his incarnation, pronounces his exaltation above I names in Heaven and Earth : commands all the Angels to adore him : ey obey, and hybning to their harps in full quire, celebrate the Father id the Son. Mean while Satan alights upon the bare convex of this orld's outermost orb ; where wandering he first finds a place, since called c Limbo of Vanity ; what persons and things fly up thither ; thence mes to the gate of Heaven, described ascending by stairs, and the waters love the firmament that flow about it : His passage thence to the orb of e sun : he finds there Uriel the regent of that orb, but first changes him-If into the shape of a meaner Angel; and pretending a zealous desire to shold the new creation, and Man whom God had placed here, enquires ' him the place of his habitation, and is direfted ; alights first on mount iphates.

HAIL holy Light, offspring of Heav'n first-born, Or of th' Eternal coeternal beam May I express thee' unblam'd? Since God is light, And never but in unapproached light Dwelt from eternity, dwelt then in thee, Bright effluence of bright essence increase.

VOL. I.

BOOK III.

Or hear'st thou rather pure ethereal stream, Whose fountain who shall tell? Before the sun. Before the Heav ns thou wert, and at the voice Of God, as with a mantle didst invest 10 The rising world of waters dark and deep, Won from the yoid and formless infinite. Thee I re-visit now with bolder wing. Escap'd the Stygian pool, though long detain'd In that obscure sojourn, while in my flight Through utter and through middle darkness borne With other notes than to th' Orphéan lyre I sung of Chaos and eternal Night. Taught by the heav'nly Muse to venture down The dark descent, and up to re-ascend, 20 Though hard and rare : thee I revisit safe. And feel thy sov'reign vital lamp; but thou Revisit'st not these eyes, that roll in vain To find thy piercing ray, and find no dawn; So thick a drop serene hath quench'd their orbs, Or dim suffusion veil'd. Yet not the more Cease I to wander where the Muses haunt Clear spring, or shady grove, or sunny hill, Smit with the love of sacred song ; but chief Thee, Sion, and the flow'ry brooks beneath, 30 That wash thy hallow'd feet, and warbling flow, Nightly I visit: nor sometimes forget Those other two equal'd with me in fate. So were I equal'd with them in renown, Blind Thamyris and blind Mæonides, And Tiresas and Phineus prophets old:

Then feed on thoughts that voluntary move Harmonious numbers : as the wakeful bird Sings darkling, and in shadiest covert hid Tunes her nocturnal note. Thus with the year 40 Seasons return, but not to me returns Day, or the sweet approach of ev'n or morn, Or sight of vernal bloom, or summer's rose, Or flocks, or herds, or human face divine; But cloud instead, and ever-during dark-Surrounds me, from the cheerful ways of men Cut off, and for the book of knowledge fair Presented with an universal blank Of nature's works to me expung'd and ras'd, And wisdom at one entrance quite shut out. 50 So much the rather thou, celestial Light, Shine inward, and the mind through all her powers Irradiate, there plant eyes, all mist from thence Purge and disperse, that I may see and tell Of things invisible to mortal sight.

205

Now had th' almighty Father from above, From the pure empyréan where he sits High thron'd above all height, bent down his eye, His own works and their works at once to view : About him all the Sanctities of Heav'n 60 Stood thick as stars, and from his sight receiv'd Beatitude past utterance; on his right The radiant image of his glory sat, His only Son; on earth he first beheld Our two first parents, yet the only two Of mankind, in the happy garden plac'd,

S 2.

PARADISE LOST.

Reaping immortal fruits of joy and love, Unian rrupted joy, unrival'd love. In bilissful solitude; he then survey'd Heil and the gulf between, and Satan there 7° Coasting the wall of Heav'n on this side Night In the dun air sublime, and ready now To stoop with wearied wings and willing feet On the bare outside of this world, that seem'd Firm land embosom'd, without firmament, Uncertain which, in ocean or in air. Him God beholding from his prospect high, Wherein past, present, future he beholds, Thus to his only Son foreseeing spake.

Only begotten Son, seest thou what rage 20 Transports our Adversary? whom no bounds Prescrib'd, no bars of Hell, nor all the chains Heap'd on him there, nor yet the main abyss Wide interrupt can hold; so bent he seems On desperate revenge, that shall redound Upon his own rebellious head. And now 'Through all restraint broke loose he wings his way Not far off Heav'n, in the precincts of light, Directly tow'ards the new created world, And Man there plac'd, with purpose to assay 90 If him by force he can destroy, or worse, By some false guile pervert; and shall pervert, For Man will hearken to his glozing lies, And easily transgress the sole command, Sole pledge of his obedience : So will fall, He and his faithless progeny ; Whose fault

205

BOOK IL.

PARADISE LOST.

Whose but his own? Ingrate he had of me All he could have; I made him just and right, Sufficient to have stood, though free to fall. Such I created all th' ethereal Powers 100 And Spirits, both them who stood and them who fail'd; Freely they stood who stood, and fell who fell. Not free, what proof could they have giv'n sincere Of true allegiance, constant faith or love, Where only what they needs must do appear'd, Not what they would? what praise could they receive? What pleasure I from such obedience paid, When will and 'reason (reason also' is choice) Useless and vain, of freedom both despoil'd, Made passive both, had serv'd necessity, 110 Not me! They therefore as to right belong'd, So were created, nor can justly' accuse Their maker, or their making, or their fate, As if predestination over-rul'd Their will, dispos'd by absolute decree Or high foreknowledge; they themselves decreed Their own revolt, not I; if I foreknew, Foreknowledge had no influence on their fault, Which had no less prov'd certain unforeknown. So without least impulse or shadow' of fate, 120 Or ought by me immutably foreseen, They trespass, authors to themselves in all Both what they judge and what they choose; for so I form'd them free, and free they must remain, Till they enthrall themselves; I else must change Their nature, and revoke the high decree

Unchangeable, eternal, which ordain'd Their freedom, they themselves ordain'd their fall The first sort by their own suggestion fell, Self-tempted, self-deprav'd: Man falls, deceiv'd 1 By th' other first: Man therefore shall find grace. The other none: in mercy' and justice both, Through Heav'n and Earth, so shall my glory' excee But mercy first and last shall brightest shine.

Thus while God spake, ambrosial fragrance fill All Heav'n, and in the blessed Spi'rits elect Sense of new joy ineffable diffus'd: Beyond compare the Son of God was seen Most glorious; in him all his Father shone Substantially express'd; and in his face Divine compassion visibly appear'd, Love without end, and without measure grace, Which uttering thus, he to his Father spake.

O Father, gracicus was that word which clos'd Thy sov'reign sentence, that man should find grace For which both Heav'n and Earth shall high extol. Thy praises, with th' innumerable sound Of hymns and sacred songs, wherewith thy throne Encompass'd shall resound thee ever blest. For should Man finally be lost, should Man, 150 Thy creature late so lov'd, thy youngest son, Fall circumvented thus by fraud, though join'd With his own folly? That be from thee far, That far be from thee, Father, who art judge Of all things made, and judgest only right. Of shall the Adversary thus obtain. His end, and frustrate thine? Shall he fulfil His malice, and thy good..css bring to nought, Or proud return, though to his heavier doom, Yet with revenge accomplish'd, and to Hell 160 Draw after him the whole race of mankind, By him corrupted? Or wilt thou thyself Abolish thy creation, and unmake, For him, what for thy glory thou hast made? So should thy goodness and thy greatness both Be question'd and blasphem'd without defence.

To whom the great Creator thus reply'd. O Son, in whom my soul hath chief delight, Son of my bosom, Son who art alone My word, my wisdom, and effectual might, 170 All hast thou spoken as my thoughts are, all As my eternal purpose hath decreed: Man shall not quite be lost, but sav'd who will, Yet not of will in him, but grace in me Freelv vouchsaf'd; once more I will renew Lis lapsed pow'rs, though forfeit and inthrall'd 'Y sin to foul exorbitant desires; Pheld by me, vet once more he shall stand n even ground against his mortal foe, ' me upheld, that he may know how frail 180 s fail'n condition is, and to me owe 1 his deliv'rance, and to none but me. ne I have chosen of peculiar grace St above the rest; so is my will: ' rest shall hear me call, and oft he warn'd ir sinful state, and to appease betimes

Th' incensed Deity, while offer'd grace Invites : for I will clear their senses dark What may suffice and soften stony hearts To pray, repent, and bring obedience du To pray'r, repentance, and obedience di Though but endeavour'd with sincere int Mine ear shall not be slow, mine eye not And I will place within them as a guide My umpire conscience, whom if they wi Light after light well us'd they shall attai And to the end persisting, safe arrive. This my long sufferance and my day of They who neglect and scorn, shall never But hard be harden'd, blind be blinded m That they may stumble on, and deeper f. And none but such from mercy I exclude But yet all is not done; Man disobeying, Disloyal breaks his fealty, and sins Against the high supremacy of Heaven, Affecting God-head, and so losing all, To expiate his treason hath nought left, But to destruction sacred and devote. He with his whole posterity must die. Die he or justice must ; unless for him Some other able, and as willing, pay The rigid satisfaction, death for death. Say heav'nly Pow'rs, where shall we find s Which of ye will be mortal to redeem Man's mortal crime, and just th' unjust to Dwells in all Heaven charity so dear ?

He ask'd, but all the heav'nly quire stood mute, Id silence was in Heav'n 1 on Man's behalf tron or intercessor none appear'd, Ach less that durst upon his own head draw 220 e deadly forfeiture, and ransom set. id now without redemption all mankind . ust have been lost, adjudg'd to Death and Hell-<sup>7</sup> doom severe, had not the Son of God, whom the fulness dwells of love divine. is dearest meditation thus renew'd. Father, thy word is past, Man shall find grace; nd shall grace not find means, that finds her way, he speediest of thy winged messengers, o visit all thy creatures, and to all 230 mes unprevented, unimplor'd, unsought? uppy for Man, so coming; he her aid n never seek, once dead in sins and lost; conement for himself or offering meet, debted and undone, hath none to bring : hold me then; me for him, life for life offer; on me let thine anger fall, count me Man; I for his sake will leave ly bosom, and this glory next to thee eely put off, and for him lastly die 240 ell pleas'd; on me let Death wreck all his rage; ider his gloomy pow'r I shall not long e vanquish'd; thou hast given me to possess fe in myself for ever; by thee I live, rough now to Death I yield, and am his due I that of me can die; yet that debt paid,

PARADISE LOST.

BOOK III.

Thou wilt not leave me in the loathsome grave His prev, nor suffer my unspotted soul For ever with corruption there to dwell; But I shall rise victorious, and subdue 290 My vanquisher, spoil'd of his vaunted spoil; Death his death's wound shall then receive, and stoop Inglorious, of his mortal sting disarm'd. I through the ample air in triumph high Shall lead Hell captive maugre Hell, and show The Pow'rs of darkness bound. Thou at the sight Pleas'd, out of Heaven shalt look down and smile, While by thee rais'd I ruin all my foes, Death last, and with his carcase glut the grave: Then with the multitude of my redeem'd 260 Shall enter Heav'n long absent, and return, Father, to see thy face, wherein no cloud Of anger shall remain, but peace assur'd And reconcilement ; wrath shall be no more Thenceforth, but in thy presence joy entire.

His words here ended, but his meek aspéct Silent yet spake, and breath'd immortal love To mortal men, above which only shone Filial obedience: as a sacrifice Glad to be offer'd, he attends the will of his great Father. Admiration seiz'd All Heav'n, what this might mean, and whither tend Wond'ring; but soon th' Almighty thus reply'd.

O thou in Heav'n and Earth the only peace Found out for mankind under wrath, O thou My sole complacence! well thou know'st how d

) me are all my works, nor Man the least, lough last created; that for him I spare nee from my bosom and right hand, to save, losing thee a while, the whole race lost. 280 nou therefore, whom thou only canst redeem, heir nature also to thy nature join ; id be thyself Man among men on earth, ide flesh, when time shall be, of virgin seed, wond'rous birth : be thou in Adam's room he head of all mankind, though Adam's son. in him perish all men, so in thee, from a second root, shall be restor'd ; many as are restor'd, without thee none. s crime makes guilty all his sons ; thy merit 200 puted shall absolve them who renounce eir own both righteous and unrighteous deeds, d live in thee transplanted, and from thee eive new life. So Man, as is most just, l satisfy for Man, be judg'd and die, dying rise, and rising with him raise rethren. ransom'd with his own dear life. av'nly love shall outdo hellish hate, g to death, and dying to redeem, rly to redeem what hellish hate ly destroy'd, and still destroys e who, when they may, accept not grace. It thou, by descending to assume nature, lessen or degrade thine own. thou hast, though thron'd in highest bliss God, and equally enjoying

God-like fruition, quitted all to save A world from utter loss, and hast bee By merit more than birthright Son of Found worthiest to be so by being goo Far more than great or high ; because Love hath abounded more than glory' : Therefore thy humiliation shall exalt With thee thy manhood also to this the Here shalt thou sit incarnate, here sha Both God and Man, Son both of God Anointed universal king; all power I give thee; reign for ever, and assum Thy merits; under thee as head subre Thrones, Princedoms, Pow'rs, Dominic All knees to thee shall bow, of them t In Heav'n, or Earth, or under Earth i When thou attended gloriously from H Shalt in the sky appear, and from thee Thy summoning Arch-Angels to procl Thy dread tribunal; forthwith from a The living, and forthwith the cited de Of all past ages to the general doom Shall hasten, such a peal shall rouse th Then all thy saints assembled, thou sh: Bad men and Angels ; they arraign'd : Beneath thy sentence; Hell, her numl Thenceforth shall be for ever shut. The world shall burn, and from her as New Heav'n and Earth, wherein the jus And after all their tribulations long

See golden days, fruitful of golden deeds, With joy and love triumphing, and fair truth. Then thou thy regal sceptre shalt lay by, For regal sceptre then no more shall need, 349 God shall be all in all. But all ye Gods, Adore him who to compass all this dies; Adore the Son, and honour him as me.

No sooner had th' Almighty ceas'd, but all The multitude of Angels, with a shout Loud as from numbers without number, sweet As from blest voices, uttering joy, Heav'n rung With jubilee, and loud Hosannas fill'd Th' eternal regions : lowly reverent Tow'ards either throne they bow, and to the ground With solemn adoration down they cast 351 Their crowns inwove with amarant and gold ; Immortal amarant, a flow'r which once In Paradise, fast by the tree of life, Began to bloom; but soon for man's offence To Heav'n remov'd, where first it grew, there grows. And flow'rs aloft shading the fount of life, And where the riv'er of bliss through midst of Heaven Rolls o'er Elysian flow'rs her amber stream ; With these that never fade the Spi'rits elect 260 Bind their resplendent locks inwreath'd with beams. Now in loose garlands thick thrown off, the bright Pavement, that like a sea of jasper shone, Impurpled with celestial roses smil'd. Then crown'd again their golden harps they took, Harps ever tun'd, that glittering by their side VOL. I. т

Like quivers hung, and with preamble sweet Of charming symphony they introduce Their sacred song, and waken raptures high; No voice exempt, no voice but well could join 379 Melodious part, such concord is in Heaven.

Thee, Father, first they sung, Omnipotent, Immutable, Immortal, Infinite, Eternal King; thee Author of all being, Fountain of light, thyself invisible Amidst the glorious brightness where thou sitt'st Thron'd inaccessible, but when thou shad'st The full blaze of thy beams, and through a cloud Drawn round about thee like a radiant shripe. Dark with excessive bright thy skirts appear, 380 Yet dazzle Heav'n, that brightest Scraphim Approach not but with both wings veil their eyes, Thee, next they sang, of all creation first, Begotten Son, Divine Similitude, In whose conspicuous count nance, without cloud Made visible, th' almighty Father chines, Whom else no creature can behold ; on the Impress'd th' effulgence of his glory' abides, Transfus'd on thee his ample Spirit rests. He Heav'n of Heav'ns and all the Pow'rs therein By thee created, and by thee threw down 39I Th' aspiring Dominations : thou that day Thy Father's dreadful thunder didst not spare, Nor stop thy flamin, chi riot wheels, that shook Heav'n's everlasting fran.e, while o'er the necks. Thou drov'st of warring Angels disarray'd.

$76

217

Back from pursuit thy Pow'rs with loud acclaim Thee only' extoll'd, Son of thy Father's might, To execute fierce vengeance on his foes, 399 Not so on Man : him through their malice fall'n, Father of mercy' and grace, thou didst not doom So strictly, but much more to pity' incline: No sooner did thy dear and only 9on Perceive thee purpos'd not to doom frail Man So strictly, but much more to pity' incline, He to appease thy wrath, and end the strife Of mercy' and justice in thy face discern'd, Regardless of the bliss wherein he sat Second to thee, offer'd himself to die For Man's offence. O unexampled love, 410 Love no where to be found less than Divine ! Hail Son of God, Saviour of Men, thy name Shall be the copious matter of my song Henceforth, and never shall my harp thy praise Forget, nor from thy Father's praise disjoin.

Thus they in Heav'n, above the starry sphere, Their happy hours in joy and hymning spent. Meanwhile upon the firm opacous globe Of this round world, whose first convex divides The luminous inferior orbs inclos'd 420 From Chaos and th' inroad of Darkness old, Satan alighted walks: a globe far off It seem'd, now seems a boundless continent Dark, waste, and wild, under the frown of Night Starless expos'd, and ever-threat'ning storms Of Chaos blust'ring round, inclement sky;

TS

Save on that side which from the wall of Heaven Though distant far, some small reflection gains Of glimmering air less yex'd with tempest loud: Here walk'd the Fiend at large in spacious field. 430 As when a vulture on Imaus bred. Whose snowy ridge the roying Tartar bounds, Dislodging from a region scarce of prev To gorge the flesh of lambs or yeanling kids On hills where flocks are fed, flies tow'ard the springs Of Ganges or Hydaspes, Indian streams; But in his way lights on the barren plains Of Sericana, where Chineses drive With sails and wind their cany waggons light: So on this windy sea of land, the Fiend . 440 Walk'd up and down alone, bent on his previ Alone, for other creature in this place Living or lifeless to be found was none; None yet, but store hereafter from the earth Up hither like aerial vapours flew Of all things transitory' and vain, when sin With vanity had fill'd the works of men; Both all things vain, and all who in vain things Built their fond hopes of glory' or lasting fame, Or happiness in this or th' other life: 450 All who have their reward on earth, the fruits Of painful superstition and blind zeal. Nought seeking but the praise of men, here find Fit retribution, empty as their deeds; All the unaccomplish'd works of Nature's hand, Abortive, monstrous, or unkindly mix'd, Dissoly'd on earth, fleet hither, and in vain,

219

Il final dissolution, wander here, t in the neighb'ring moon, as some have dream'd; ose argent fields more likely habitants, 460 anslated Saints, or middle Spirits hold wixt th' angelical and human kind. ther of ill-join'd sons and daughters born st from the ancient world those giants came th many a vain exploit, though then renown'd : e builders next of Babel on the plain Sennaar, and still with vain design W Babels, had they wherewithal, would build: ters came single; he who to be deem'd God, leap'd fondly into Ætna flames, 470 ipedocles; and he who to enjoy to's Elysium, leap'd into the sea, ombrotus; and many more too long. bryos and idiots, eremites and friars lite, black, and grey, with all their trumpery. re pilgrims roam, that stray'd so far to seek Golgotha him dead, who lives in Heaven; d they who to be sure of Paradise ing put on the weeds of Dominic, in Franciscan think to pass disguis'd; 480 ey pass the planets sev'n, and pass the fix'd. d that crystalline sphere whose balance weighs e trepidation talk'd, and that first mov'd: d now Saint Peter at Heav'n's wicket seems wait them with his keys, and now at foot Heav'n's ascent they lift their feet, when lo iolent cross wind from either coast

PARADISE LOST.

Blows them transverse ten thousand leagues awry Into the devious air; then might ye see Cowls, hoods, and habits with their wearers tost 4 And flutter'd into rags, then reliques, beads, Indulgences, dispenses, pardons, bulls, The sport of winds : all these upwhirl'd aloft Fly o'er the backside of the world far off Into a Limbo large and broad, since call'd The Paradise of Fools, to few unknown Long after, now unpeopled, and untrod. All this dark globe the Fiend found as he pass d, And long he wander'd, till at last a gleam Of dawning light turn'd thither-ward in haste 5° His travel'd steps : far distant he descries Ascending by degrees magnificent Up to the wall of Heav'n a structure high, At top whereof, but far more rich, appear'd The work as of a kingly palace gate, With frontispiece of diamond and gold Embellish'd; thick with sparkling orient gems The portal shone, inimitable on earth By model, or by shading pencil drawn. The stairs were such as when Jacob saw 51 Angels ascending and descending, bands Of guardians bright, when he from Esau fied To Padan-Aram, in the field of Luz, Dreaming by night under the open sky, And waking cry'd, This is the gate of Heaven Each stair mysteriously was meant, nor stood There always, but drawn up to Heav'n scnet

OOK III, ] PARADISE LOST.

. •

Viewless; and underneath a bright sea flow'd Of jasper, or of liquid pearl, whereon Who after came from earth, sailing arriv'd, s20 Wafted by Angels, or flew o'er the lake Rapt in a chariot drawn by fiery steeds. The stairs were then let down, whether to dare The Fiend by easy' ascent, or aggravate His sad exclusion from the doors of bliss : Direct against which open'd from beneath. Just o'er the blissful seat of Paradise, A passage down to th' Earth, a passage wide, Wider by far than that of after-times Over mount Sion, and, though that were large, 530 Over the Promis'd Land to God so dear. By which, to visit oft those happy tribes, On high behests his Angels to and fro Pass'd frequent, and his eye with choice regard From Paneas the fount of Iordan's flood To Bëersaba, where the Holy Land Borders on Egypt and th' Arabian shore; bo wide the opening seem'd, where bounds were set To darkness, such as bound the ocean wave. Satan from hence, now on the lower stair 540 That scal'd by steps of gold to Heaven gate, Looks down with wonder at the sudden view If all this world at oncce. As when a scout I'hrough dark and desert ways with peril gone All night; at last by break of cheerful dawn Dbtains the brow of some high-climbing hilly Which to his eye discovers unaware

The goodly prospect of some foreign land First seen, or some renown'd metropolis With glist'ring spires and pinnacles adorn'd, 550 Which now the rising sun gilds with his beams: Such wonder seiz'd, though after Heaven seen, The Spi'rit malign, but much more envy seiz'd At sight of all this world beheld so fair. Round he surveys (and well might, where he stood So high above the circling canopy Of night's extended shade) from eastern point Of Libra to the fleecy star that bears Andromeda far off Atlantic seas Beyond th' horizon; then from pole to pole 560 He views in breadth, and without longer pause Down right into the world's first region throws His flight precipitant, and winds with ease Through the pure marble air his oblique way Amongst innumerable stars, that shone Stars distant, but nigh hand seem'd other worlds; Or other worlds they seem'd, or happy isles, Like those Hesperian gardens fam'd of old, Fortunate fields, and groves, and flow'ry vales, Thrice happy isles, but who dwelt happy there He stay'd not to enquire : above them all 571 The golden sun in splendour likest Heaven Allur'd his eye: thither his course he bends Through the calm firmament, (but up or down By centre, or eccentric, hard to tell, Or longitude) where the great luminary Alcof the vulgar constellations thick,

That from his lordly eye keep distance due, Dispenses light from far; they as they move Their starry dance in numbers that compute 580 Days, months, and years, tow ards his all-cheering lamp

Turn swift their various motions, or are turn' By his magnetic beam, that gently warms The universe, and to each inward part With gentle penetration. though unseen. Shoots invisible virtue ev'n to the deep ; So wond'rously was set his station bright. There lands the Fiend, a spot like which perhaps Astronomer in the sun's lucent orb Through his glaz'd optic tube yet never saw. 590 The place he found beyond expression bright, Compar'd with ought on earth, metal or stone; Not all parts like, but all alike inform'd With radiant light, as glowing ir'on with fire; If metal, part seem'd gold, part silver clear; If stone, carbuncle most or chrysolite, Ruby or topaz, to the twelve that shone In Aaron's breast-plate, and a stone besides Imagin'd rather oft than elsewhere seen, That stone, or like to that which here below 600 Philosophers in vain so long have sought, In vain, though by their pow'rful art they bind Volatile Hermes, and call up unbound In various shapes old Proteus from the sea, Drain'd through a limbec to his native form. What wonder then if fields and regions here

Breathe forth Elixir pure, and rivers run Potable gold, when with one virtuous touch Th' arch-chemic sun, so far from us remote, Produces, with terrestrial humour mix'd, 616 Here in the dark so many precious things Of colour glorious and effect so rare? Here matter new to gaze the Devil met Undazzled; far and wide his eye commands; For sight no obstacle found here, nor shade, But all sun-shine, as when his beams at noon Culminate from th' equator, as they now Shot upward still direct, whence no way round Shadow from body' opaque can fall; and th' air No where so clear, sharpen'd his visual ray 620 To objects distant far, whereby he soon Saw within ken a glorious Angel stand, The same whom John saw also in the sun: His back was turn'd, but not his brightness hid Of beaming sunny rays a golden tiar Circled his head, nor less his locks behind Illustrious on his shoulders fledge with wings Lay waving round; on some great charge employ'd He seem'd, or fix'd in cogitation deep. Glad was the Spi'rit impure, as now in hope 630 To find who might direct his wand'ring flight To Paradise, the happy seat of Man, His journey's end, and our beginning woe. But first he casts to change his proper shape, Which else might work him danger or delay: And now a stripling Cherub he appears, of the prime, yet such as in his face th smil'd celestial, and to every limb ble gr. ce diffus'd, so well he teign'd: er a coronet his flowing hair 640 irls on either cheek play'd; wings he wore nany a colour'd plume sprinkled with gold. habit fit for speed succinct, and heid re his decent steps a silver wand. rew not nigh unheard; the Angel bright, he drew nigh, his radiant visage turn'd, ionish'd by his ear, and straight was known Arch-Angel Uriël, one of the seven ) in God's presence, nearest to his throne, d ready at command, and are his eyes 650 t run through all the Heav'ns, or down to th' arth

$24

III.] PARADISE LOSP.

his swift errands over moist and dry, sea and land: him Satan thus accosts. iel, for thou of those sev'n Spi'rits that stand ght of God's high throne, gloriously bright, first art wont his great authentic will preter through highest Heav'n to bring, re all his sons thy embassy attend; here art likeliest by supreme decree honour to obtain, and as his eye 66e visit oft this new creation round; beakable desire to see, and know these his wond'rous works, but chiefly Man, Chief delight and favour, him for whom hese his works so wond'rous he ordain'd,

PARADISE LOST.

Hath brought me from the quires of Cherubim Alone thus wand'ring. Brightest Scraph, tell In which of all these shining orbs hath Man His fixed seat, or fixed seat hath none. But all these shining orbs his choice to dwell; 670 That I may find him, and with secret gaze Or open admiration him behold, On whom the great Creator hath bestow'd Worlds, and on whom hath all these graces pour'd; That both in him and all things, as is meet, The universal Maker we may praise; Who justly hath driv'n out his rebel foes To deepest Hell, and to repair that loss Created this new happy race of Men To serve him better: wise are all his ways. 680

So spake the false dissembler unperceiv'd; For neither Man nor Angel can discern Hypocrisy, the only' evil that walks Invisible, except to God alone, By his permissive will, through Heav'n and Earth And oft though wisdom wake, suspicion sleeps At wisdom's gate, and to simplicity Resigns her charge, while goodness thinks no ill Where no ill seems : which now for once beguil'd Uriel, though regent of the sun, and held 690 The sharpest sighted Spi'rit of all in Heaven; Who to the fraudulent impostor foul In his uprightness answer thus return'd.

Fair Angel, thy desire which tends to know The works of God, thereby to glorify

The great Work-Master, leads to no excess That reaches blame, but rather merits praise The more it seems excess, that led thee hither From thy empyreal mansion thus alone, To witness with thine eves what some perhaps 700 Contented with report hear only' in Heav'n; For wonderful indeed are all his works. Pleasant to know, and worthiest to be all Had in remembrance always with delight; But what created mind can comprehend Their number, or the wisdom infinite That brought them forth, but hid their causes deep? I saw when at his word the formless mass, This world's material mould, came to a heap: Confusion heard his voice, and wild uproar 710 Stood rul'd. stood vast infinitude confin'd : Till at his second bidding darkness fled, Light shone, and order from disorder sprung : Swift to their several quarters hasted then The cumbrous elements, earth, flood, air, fire; And this ethereal quintessence of Heaven Flew upward, spirited with various forms, That roll'd orbicular, and turn'd to stars Numberless, as thou seest, and how they move ; Each had his place appointed, each his course; 720 The rest in circuit walls this universe. Look downward on that globe, whose hither side With light from hence, though but reflected, shines; That place is Earth the seat of Man, that light His day, which else as th' other hemisphere YOL. I. u

Night would invade; but there the neighb'ring moon (So call that opposite fair star) her aid Timery' interposes, and her monthly round Still ending, still renewing, through mid Heaven, With borrow'd light her countenance triform 739 Hence fills and empties to enlighten th' Earth, And in her pale dominion checks the night. That spot to which I point is Paradise, Adam's abode, those lofty shades his bower. Thy way thou canst not miss, me mine requires.

Thus said, he turn'd; and Satan bowing low, As to superior Spi'rits is wont in Heaven, Where honour due and reverence none neglects, Took leave, and tow ard the coast of earth beneath, Down from th' ecliptic, sped with hop'd success, 74 Throws his steep flight in many an airy wheel, Nor stay'd, till on Niphates' top he lights.

THE END OF THE THIRD BOOK.

BOOK IV.

THE ARGUMENT.

ow in prospect of Eden, and nigh the place where he must now te hold enterprize which he undertook alone against God and into many doubts with himself, and many passions, fear, envy, r; but at length confirms himself in evil, journeys on to Pause outward prospect and situation is described, overleaps the ts in the shape of a cormorant on the tree of life, as highest in 1, to look about him. The garden described; Satan's first sight and Eve; his wonder at their excellent form and happy state. esolution to work their fall; overhears their discourse, thence at the tree of knowledge was forbidden them to eat of, under death ; and thereon intends to found his temptation, by seduto transgress: then leaves them awhile, to know further of their me other means. Mean while Uriel descending on a sun-beam riel, who had in charge the gate of Paradise, that some evil escaped the deep, and passed at noon by his sphere in the shape I Angel down to Paradise, discovered after by his furious gesre mount. Gabriel promises to find him ere morning. Night n. Adam and Eve discourse of going to their rest : their bower ; their evening worship. Gabriel drawing forth his bands of ch to walk the round of Paradise, appoints two strong Angels to newer, lest the evil Spirit should be there doing some harm to Eve sleeping ; there they find him at the ear of Eve, tempting Iream, and bring him, though unwilling, to Cabriel; by whom d, he scornfully answers, prepares resistance, but hindered by a Heaven, flies out of Paradise.

OR that warning voice, which he who saw pocalypse heard cry in Heav'n aloud, when the Dragon, put to second rout, furious down to be reveng'd on men, e to th' inhabitants on earth!" that now, time was, our first parents had been warn'd The coming of their secret foe, and scap'd, Haply so scap'd his mortal snare: for now Satan, now first inflam'd with rage, came dow The tempter ere th' accuser of mankind, To wreck on junocent frail man his loss Of that first battle, and his flight to Hell: Yet not rejoicing in his speed, though bold Far off and fearless, nor with cause to boast, Begins his dire attempt, which nigh the birth Now rolling boils in his tumultuous breast, And like a devilish engine back recoils Upon himself; horror and doubt distract His troubled thoughts, and from the bottom s The Hell within him; for within him Hell He brings, and round about him, nor from He One step no more than from himself can fly By change of place : now conscience wakes des That slumber'd, wakes the bitter memory Of what he was, what is, and what must be Worse; of worse deeds worse suffering must en Sometimes tow'ards Eden. which now in his v Lay pleasant, his griev'd look he fixes sad; Sometimes tow'ards Heav'n and the full-blazing Which now sat high in his meridian tower: Then much revolving, thus in sighs began.

O thou that with surpassing glory crown'd, Look'st from thy sole dominion like the God Of this new world; at whose sight all the sta Hide their diminish'd heads; to thee I call, But with no friendly voice, and add thy name O Sun, to tell thee how I hate thy beams,

, 230

BOOK IV.] PARADISE LOST.

ŧ,

That bring to my remembrance from what state I fell, how glorious once above thy sphere : Till pride and worse ambition threw me down 40 Warring in Heav'n against Heav'n s matchless king : Ah wherefore! he deserv'd no such return From me, whom he created what I was In that bright eminence, and with his good Upbraided none; nor was his service hard. What could be less than to afford him praise. The easiest recompence, and pay him thanks. How due! yet all his good prov'd ill in me, And wrought but malice: lifted up so high I 'sdein'd subjection, and thought one step higher so Would set me high'est, and in a moment quit The debt immense of endless gratitude. So burdensome still paying, still to owe, Forgetful what from him I still receiv'd, And understood not that a grateful mind By owing owes not, but still pays, at once Indebted and discharg'd; what burden then? O had his pow'rful destiay ordain'd Me some inferior Angel, I had stood Then happy; no unbounded hope had rais'd 60 Ambition. Yet why not? Some other Power As great might have aspir'd, and me though mean Drawn to his part; but other Pow'rs as great Fell not, but stand unshaken, from within Or from without, to all temptations arm'd. Hadst thou the same free will and pow'r to stand ? Thou hads :: whom hast thou then or what to' accuse.

But Heav'n's free love dealt equally to all? Be then his love accurs'd, since love or hate, To me alike, it deals eternal woe. 70 Nay curs'd be thou; since against his thy will Chose freely what it now so justly rues. Me miserable! which way shall I fly Infinite wrath, and infinite despair ? Which way I fly is Hell; myself am Hell; And in the lowest deep a lower deep Still threat'ning to devour me opens wide, To which the Hell I suffer seems a Heaven. O then at last relent: is there no place Left for repentance, none for pardon left? $0 None left but by submission; and that word Disdain forbids me, and my dread of shame Among the Spi'rits beneath, whom I seduc'd With other promises and other vaunts Than to submit, boasting I could subdue Th' Omnipotent. Ay me, they little know How dearly I abide that boast so vain, Under what torments inwardly I groan. While they adore me on the throne of Hell. With diadem and sceptre high advanc'd, 99 The lower still I fall, only supreme In misery; such joy ambition finds. But say I could repent and could obtain By act of grace my former state; how soon Would height recall high thoughts, how soon unsa What feign'd submission swore! ease would reca Vows made in pain, as violent and void.

For never can true reconcilement grow. Where wounds of deadly hate have pierc'd so deen : Which would but lead me to a worse relapse 100 And heavier fall : so should I purchase dear Short intermission bought with double smurt. This knows my punisher: therefore as far From granting he, as I from begging peace : All hope excluded thus, behold in stead Of us out-cast, exil'd, his new delight, Mankind created, and for him this world. So farewel hope, and with hope farewel fear, Farewel remorse : all good to me is lost : Evil be thou my good; by thee at least 110 Divided empire with Heav'n's king I hold, By thee, and more than half perhaps will reign; As Man ere long, and this new world shall know.

Thus while he spake, each passion dimm'd his face Thrice chang'd with pale, ire, envy, and despair; Which marr'd his borrow'd visage, and betray'd Him counterfeit, if any eye beheld. For heav'nly minds from such distempers foul Are ever clear. Whereof he soon aware, Each perturbation smooth'd with outward calm, 120 Artificer of fraud; and was the first That practis'd falsehood under saintly show, Deep malice to conceal, couch'd with revenge; Yet not enough had practis'd to deceive Uriel once warn'd; whose eye pursued him down The way he went, and on th' Assyrian mount Saw him disfigur'd, more than could befall

PARADISE LOST.

BOOK IV.

Spirit of happy sort : his gestures fierce He mark'd and mad demeanour, then alone, As he suppos'd, all unobserv'd, unseen. 130 So on he fares, and to the border comes Of Edea, where delicious Paradise. Now nearer, crowns with her inclosure green, As with a rural mound, the champain head Of a steep wilderness, whose hairy sides With thicket overgrown, grotesque and wild, Access deny'd; and over head upgrew Insuperable height of loftiest shade. Cedar, and pine, and fir, and branching palm, A sylvan scene, and as the ranks ascend 140 Shade above shade, a woody theatre Of stateliest view. Yet higher than their tops The verd'rous wall of Paradise up sprung : Which to our general sire gave prospect large Into his nether empire neighb'ring round. And higher than that wall a circling row Of goodliest trees loaden with fairest fruit. Blossoms and fruits at once of golden hue, Appear'd with gay enamel'd colours mix'd : On which the sun more glad impress'd his beams Than in fair evening cloud, or humid bow, When God hath show'r'd the earth ; so lovely seem'd That landskip: and of pure now purer air Meets his approach, and to the heart inspires Vernal delight and joy, able to drive All sadness but despair : now gentle gales Fanning their odoriferous wings dispense

Native perfumes, and whisper whence they stole Those balmy spoils. As when to them who sail Seyond the Cape of Hope, and now are past 160 Mozambic, off at sea north-east winds blow Sabean odours from the spicy shore

Of Araby the blest; with such delay

Well pleas'd they slack their course, and many a league

Cheer'd with the grateful smell old Ocean smiles : So entertain'd those odorous sweets the Fiend

Who came their bane, though with them better pleas'd

Than Asmodëus with the fishy fume

That drove him, though enamour'd, from the spouse

Of Tobit's son, and with a vengeance sent 176 From Media post to Egypt, there fast bound.

Now to th' ascent of that steep savage hill Satan had journey'd on, pensive and slow; But further way found none, so thick intwin'd As one continued brake, the undergrowth Of shrubs and tangling bushes had perplex'd All path of man or beast that pass'd that way: One gate there only was, and that look'd east On th' other side: which when th' arch-felon saw, Due entrance he disdain'd, and in contempt, 180 At one slight bound high overleap'd all bound Of hill or highest wall, and sheer within Lights on his feet. As when a prowling wolf, Whom hunger drives to seek new haunt for prey. PARADISE LOST.

Watching where shepherds pen their flocks at eve In hurdled cotes amid the field secure. Leaps o'er the fence with ease into the fold: Or as a thief bent to unhoard the cash Of some rich burgher, whose substantial doors, Cross-barr'd and belted fast, fear no assault, 190 In at the window climbs, or o'er the tiles : So cloub this first grand thief into God's fold; So since into his church lewd hirelings climb. Thence up he flew, and on the tree of life, The middle tree and highest there that grew, Sat like a cormorant; yet not true life Thereby regain'd, but sat devising death To them who liv'd; nor on the virtue thought Of that life giving plant, but only us'd For prospect, what well us'd had been the pledge Of immortality. So little knows 201 Any, but God alone, to value right The good before him, but perverts best things To worst abuse, or to their meanest use. Beneath him with new wonder now he views To all delight of human sense expos'd In narrow room Nature's whole wealth, yea more, A Heav'n on Earth : for blissful Paradise Of God the garden was, by him in th' east Of Eden planted; Eden stretch'd her line 210 From Auran eastward to the royal towers Of great Seleucia, built by Grecian kings, Or where the sons of Edea long before Dwelt in Telassar ; in this pleasant soil lis far more pleasant garden God ordain'd; )ut of the fertile ground he caus'd to grow All trees of noblest kind for sight, smell, taste; And all amid them stood the tree of life. Ligh eminent, blooming ambrosial fruit )f vegetable gold; and next to life, 220 )ur death the tree of knowledge grew fast by, Inowledge of good bought dear by knowing ill. Outhward through Eden went a river large, or chang'd his course, but through the shaggy hill 'ass'd underneath ingulf'd; for God had thrown That mountain as his garden mould high rais'd Jpon the rapid current, which through veins If porous earth with kindly thirst up drawn, lose a fresh fountain, and with many a rill Vater'd the garden; thence united fell 220 )own the steep glade, and met the nether flood, Vhich from his darksome passage now appears, and now divided into four main streams, luns diverse, wand'ring many a famous realm Ind country, whereof here needs no account; But rather to tell how, if Art could tell, low from that saphire fount the crisped brooks, colling on orient pearl and sands of gold, Nith mazy error under pendent shades kan nectar, visiting each plant, and fed 249 'low'rs, worthy' of Paradise, which not nice Art n beds and curious knots, but Nature boon 'our'd fort's profuse on hill and dale and plain, Both where the morning sun first warmly smoth

POKIV.] PAR'ADISE LOST.

The open field, and where the unpierc'd shade Imbrown'd the noontide bow'rs: Thus was this place

A happy rural seat of various view ; Groves whose rich trees wept odorous gums and balm,

Others whose fruit burnish'd with golden rind Hung amiable, Hesperian fables true, 100 If true, here only', and of delicious taste: Betwixt them lawns, or level downs, and flocks Grazing the tender herb, were interpos'd, Or palmy hilloc; or the flow'ry lap Of some irriguous valley spread her store, Flow'rs of all hue, and without thorn the roses Another side, umbrageous grots and caves Of cool recess, o'er which the mantling vine Lays forth her purple grape, and gently creeps Luxuriant ; mean while murm'ring waters fall 160 Down the slope hills, dispers'd or in a lake, That to the fringed bank with myrtle crown'd Her crystal mirror holds, unite their streams. The birds their quire apply; airs, vernal airs, Breathing the smell of field and grove, attune The trembling leaves, while universal Pan Knit with the Graces and the Hours in dance Led on th' eternal spring. Not that fair field Of Enna, where Prosérpine gathering flowers Herself a fairer flow'r by gloomy Dis $70 Was gather'd, which cost Ceres all that pain To seek her through the world ; nor that sweetgrow Of Daphne by Orontes, and th' inspir'd Castalian spring, might with this Paradise Of Eden strive: nor that Nyseian isle Girt with the river Triton, where old Cham, Whom Gentiles Ammon call and Lybian Jove, Hid Amalthea and her florid son Young Bacchus from his stepdame Rhea's eye; Nor where Abassin kings their issue guard, 280 Mount Amara, though this by some suppos'd True Paradise under the Ethiop line By Nilus' head, inclos'd with shining rock, A whole day's journey high, but wide remote From this Assyrian garden, where the Fiend Saw undelighted all delight, all kind Of living creatures new to sight and strange. Two of far nobler shape erect and tall, Godlike erect, with native honour clad In naked majesty seem'd lords of all. 2 q 0 And worthy seem'd; for in their looks divine The image of their glorious Maker shone, Truth, wisdom, sanctitude severe and pure. (Severe but in true filial freedom plac'd) Whence true authority in men ; though both Not equal, as their sex not equal seem'd; For contemplation he and valour form'd, For softness she and sweet attractive grace. He for God only, she for God in him : His fair large front and eye sublime declar'd 300 Absolute rule; and hyacinthine locks Round from his parted forelock manly hung VOL. I. x

Clust'ring, but not beneath his shoulders broad : She as a veil down to the slender waist Her unadorned golden tresses wore Dishevel'd, but in wanton ringlets wav'd As the vine curls her tendrils, which imply'd Subjection, but requir'd with gentle sway, And by her vielded, by him best receiv'd, Yielded with coy submission, modest pride, 310 And sweet reluctant amorous delay. Nor those mysterious parts were then conceal'd, Then was not guilty shame, dishonest shame Of Nature's works, honour dishonourable, Sin-bred, how have ye troubled all mankind With shows instead, mere shows of seeming pure, And banish'd from man's life his happiest life, Simplicity and spotless innocence !

pass'd they naked on, nor shunn'd the sight Of God or Angel, for they thought no ill: 320 So hand in hand they pass'd, the loveliest pair That ever since in love's embraces met : Adam the goodliest man of men since born His sons, the fairest of her daughters Eve. Under a tuft of shade that on a green Stood whisp'ring soft, by a fresh fountain side They sat them down : and after no more toil Of their sweet gard'ning labour than suffic'd To recommend cool Zephyr, and mids ease More easy, wholesome thirst and appetite 334 More grateful, to their supper fruits they fell, Nectarine fruits which the compliant boughs

Yielded them, side-long as they sat recline
On the soft downy bank damask'd with flowers:
The savoury puip they chew, and in the rind
Still as they thirsted scoop the brimming stream;
Nor gentle purpose, nor indearing smiles
Wanted, nor youthful dalliance as beseems
Fair couple, link'd in happy nuptial league,
Alone as they. About them frisking play'd 340
All beasts of th' earth, since wild, and of all chase
In wood or wiklerness, forest or den;
Sporting the lion ramp'd, and in his paw
Dandied the kid; bears, tigers, ounces, pards,
Gambol'd before them; th' unwieldy elephant
To make them mirth us'd all his might, and

His lithe proboscis; close the serpent sly Insinuating, wove with Gordian twine His braided train, and of his fatal guile Gave proof unheeded; others on the grass 35 Couch'd, and now fill'd with pasture gazing sat, Or bedward ruminating; for the sun Declin'd was hasting now with prone career To th' ocean isles, and in th' ascending scale Of Heav'n the stars that usher evening rose : When Satan still in gaze, as first he stood, Scarce thus at length fail'd speech recover'd sad.

O Hell! what do mine eyes with grief behold? Into our room of bliss thus high advanc'd Creatures of other mould, earth born perhaps, 360 Not Spirits, yet to heav'nly Spirits bright Little inferior; whom my thoughts pursue With wonder, and could love, so lively shines In them divine resemblance, and such grace The hand that form'd them on their shape hat pour'd.

Ah gentle pair, ye little think how nigh Your change approaches, when all these delights Will vanish and deliver ve to woe. More woe, the more your taste is now of joy; Happy, but for so happy ill secur'd 170 Long to continue, and this high seat your Heaved Ill fenc'd for Heav'n to keep out such a foe As now is enter'd; yet no purpos'd foe To you, whom I could pity thus forlorn, Though I unpitied : League with you I seek. And mutual amity so strait, so close, That I with you must dwell, or you with me Henceforth; my dwelling haply may not please, Like this fair Paradise, your sense, yet such Accept your Maker's work; he gave it me, 280 Which I as freely give; Hell shall unfold, To entertain you two, her widest gates. And send forth all her kings; there will be room, Not like these narrow limits, to receive Your numerous offspring; if no better place, Thank him who puts me loath to this revenge On you who wrong me not, for him who wrong'd. And should I at your harmless innocence Melt, as I do, yet public reason just, Honour and empire with revenge enlarg'd, 205 By conqu'ring this new world, compels me now To do what else though damn'd I should abhor.

So spake the Fiend, and with necessity, The tyrant's plea, excus'd his devilish deeds. Then from his lofty stand on that high tree Down he alights among the sportful herd Of those four-footed kinds, himself now one. Now other, as their shape serv'd best his end Nearer to view his prev, and unespy'd To mark what of their state he more might learn By word or action mark'd : about them round 401 A lion now he stalks with fiery glare ; Then as a tiger, who by chance hath spy'd In some purlieu two gentle fawns at play, Strait couches close, then rising changes oft His couchant watch, as one who chose his ground, Whence rushing he might surest seize them both Grip'd in each paw : when Adam first of men To first of women Eve thus moving speech, Turn'd him all ear to hear new utterance flow. 410

Sole partner, and sole part, of all these joys, Dearer thyself than all; needs must the Power That made us, and for us this ample world, Be infinitely good, and of his good As liberal and free as infinite; That rais'd us from the dust and plac'd us here In all this happiness, who at his hand Have nothing merited, nor can perform Ought whereof he hath need, he who requires From us no other service than to keep

This one, this easy charge, of all the trees In Paradise that bear delicious fruit So various, not to taste that only tree Of knowledge, planted by the tree of life; So near grows death to life, whate'er death is, Some dreadful thing no doubt; for well thouknow'st God hath pronounc'd it death to taste that tree, The only sign of our obedience left Among so many signs of pow'r and rule Conferr'd upon us, and dominion giv'n 410 Over all other creatures that possess Earth, air, and sea. Then let us not think hard One easy prohibition, who eniov Free leave so large to all things else, and choice Unlimited of manifold delights : But let us ever praise him, and extol His bounty, following our delightful task To prune these growing plants, and tend these flowers.

Which were it toilsome, yet with thee were sweet.

To whom thus Eve reply'd. O thou for whom 44<sup>o</sup> And from whom I was form'd flesh of thy flesh, And without whom am to no end, my guide And head, what thou hast said is just and right. For we to him indeed all praises owe, And daily thanks; I chiefly who enjoy So far the happier lot, enjoying thee Præ-eminent by so much odds, while thou Like consort to thyself canst no where find. That day I oft remember, when from sleep

DOK IV.] PARADISE LOST

[ first awak'd, and found myself repos'd 4.50 Under a shade on flow'rs, much wond'ring where And what I was, whence thither brought, and how. Not distant far from thence a murm'ring sound Of waters issued from a cave, and spread Into a liquid plain, then stood unmov'd Pure as th' expanse of Heav'n; I thither went With unexperienc'd thought, and laid me down On the green bank, to look into the clear smooth lake, that to me seem'd another sky. As I went down to look, just opposite A60 A shape within the wat'ry gleam appear'd, Bending to look on me: I started back. It started back; but pleas'd I soon return'd, Pleas'd it return'd as soon with answ'ring looks Of sympathy and love : there I had fix'd Mine eyes till now, and pin'd with vain desire, Had not a voice thus warn'd me. What thou seest. What there thou seest, fair Creature, is thyself: With thee it came and goes: but follow me, And I will bring thee where no shadow stays 470 Thy coming, and thy soft embraces, he Whose image thou art; him thou shalt enjoy Inseparably thine, to him shalt bear Multitudes like thyself, and thence be call'd Mother of human race. What could I do. But follow straight, invisibly thus led ? Till I espy'd thee, fair indeed and tall, Under a platan; yet methought less fair, Less winning soft, less amiably mild,

BOOK IV.

Than that smooth wat'ry image : back ? turn'd; 450 Thou following cry'dst aloud, Return fair Eve, Whom fly'st thou? whom thou fly'st, of him thou art,

His flesh, his bone; to give thee being I lent Out of my side to thee, nearest my heart Substantial life, to have thee by my side Henceforth an individual solace dear; Part of my soul I seek thee, and thee claim My other half: with that thy gentle hand Seiz'd mine; I yielded, and from that time see How beauty is excell'd by manly grace 490 And wisdom, which alone is truly fair.

So spake our general mother, and with eyes Of conjugal attraction unreprov'd, And meek surrender, half embracing lean'd On our first father; half her swelling breast Naked met his under the flowing gold Of her loose tresses hid: he in delight Both of her beauty and submissive charms Smil'd with superior love, as Jupiter On Juno smiles, when he impregns the clouds 50° That shed May flow'rs; and press'd her matron <sup>lip</sup> With kisses pure: aside the Devil turn'd For envy, yet with jealous leer malign Ey'd them askance, and to himself thus plain'd.

Sight hateful, sight tormenting ! thus these two Imparadis'd in one another's arms, The happier Eden, shall enjoy their fill Of bliss on bliss; while I to Hell am thrust,

$45

Where neither joy nor love, but fierce desire. Amongst our other torments not the least, 510 Still unfulfill'd with pain of longing pines. Yet let me not forget what I have gain'd From their own mouths: all is not theirs it seems: One fatal tree there stands of knowledge call'd, Forbidden them to taste : Knowledge forbidden ? Suspicious, reasonless. Why should their Lord Envy them that? Can it be sin to know? Can it be death? And do they only stand By Ignorance? Is that their happy state, The proof of their obedience and their faith ? 520 O fair foundation laid whereon to build Their ruin ! Hence I will excite their minds With more desire to know, and to reject Envious commands, invented with design To keep them low whom knowledge might exalt Equal with Gods : aspiring to be such, They taste and die : what likelier can ensue? But first with narrow search I must walk round This garden, and no corner leave unspy'd ; A chance but chance may lead where I may meet 510 Some wand'ring Spi'rit of Heav'n by fountain side, Or in thick shade retir'd, from him to draw What further would be learn'd. Live while ye may, Yet happy pair; enjoy, till I return, Short pleasures, for long woes are to succeed.

So saying, his proud step he scornful turn'd, But with sly circumspection, and began Through wood, through waste, o'er hill, o'er dale, his roam.

500K IV:

Mean while in utmost longitude, where Heaven With earth and ocean meets, the setting sun 549 Slowly descended, and with right aspect Against the eastern gate of Paradise Level'd his evening rays : it was a rock Of alabaster, pil'd up to the clouds, Conspicuous far, winding with one ascent Accessible from earth, one entrance high; The rest was craggy cliff, that overhung Still as it rose, impossible to climb. Betwixt these rocky pillars Gabriel sat, Chief of th' angelic guards, awaiting night; 550 About him exercis'd heroic games Th' unarmed youth of Heav'n, but nigh at hand Celestial armoury, shields, helms, and spears, Hung high with diamond flaming, and with gold. Thither came Uriel, gliding through the even On a sun-beam, swift as a shooting star In autumn thwarts the night, when vapours fir'd Impress the air, and shews the mariner From what point of his compass to beware Imperuous winds : he thus began in haste. 560

Gabriel, to thee thy course by lot hath given Charge and strict watch, that to this happy place No evil thing approach or enter in. This day at height of noon came to my sphere A Spirit, zealous, as he seem'd, to know More of th' Almighty's works, and chiefly Man, God's latest image: I describ'd his way Bent all on speed, and mark'd his airy gat; But in the mount that lies from Eden north, Where he first lighted, soon discern'd his looks 570 Alien from Heav'n, with passions foul obscur'd: Mine eye pursued him still, but under shade Lost sight of him : one of the banish'd crew, I fear, hath ventur'd from the deep, to raise New troubles; him thy care must be to find.

To whom the winged warrior thus return'd. Uriel, no wonder if thy perfect sight, Amid the sun's bright circle where thou sitt'st, See far and wide: in at this gate none pass The vigilance here plac'd, but such as come 580 Well known from Heav'n; and since meridian hour No creature thence: if Spi'rit of other sort, So minded, have o'er.eap'd these earthy bounds On purpose, hard thou know'st it to exclude Spiritual substance with corporeal bar. But if within the circuit of these walks, In whatsoever shape he lurk, of whom Thou tell'st, by morrow dawning I shall know.

So promis'd he; and Uriel to his charge ! Return'd on that bright beam, whose point now rais'd Before him slope downward to the sun now fall'n 59'T Beneath th' Azores; whether the prime orb, Incredible how swift, had thither roll'd Diurnal, or this less volúble earth, By shorter flight to th' east, had left him there Arraying with reflected purple' and gold The clouds that on his western throne attend. Now came still evening on, and twilight grey Had in her sober livery all things clad; Silence accompanied; for beast and bird, 600 They to their grassy couch, these to their nests Were slunk, all but the wakeful nightingale; She all night long her amorous descant sung; Silence was pleas'd: now glow'd the firmament With livid saphires : Hesperus, that led The starry host, rode brighest, till the moon Rising in clouded majesty, at length Apparent queen unveil'd her peerless light, And o'er the dark her silver mantle threw.

When Adam thus to Eve. Fair Consort, th'hour Of night, and all things now retir'd to rest 611 Mind us of like repose, since God hath set Labour and rest, as day and night, to men Successive; and the timely dew of sleep Now falling with soft slumb'rous weight inclines Our eye-lids: other creatures all day long Rove idle unemploy'd, and less need rest; Man hath his daily work of body or mind Appointed, which declares his dignity. And the regard of Heav'n on all his ways; 628 While other animals unactive range, And of their doings God takes no account. To-morrow ere fresh morning streak the east With first approach of light we must be risen, And at our pleasant labour, to reform Yon flow'ry arbours, yonder alleys green, Our walk at noon, with branches overgrown, That mock our scant manuring, and require

More hands than ours to lop their wanton growth: Those blossoms also, and those dropping gums, 630 That lie bestrown unsightly and unsmooth, Ask riddance, if we mean to tread with ease; Mean while, as Nature wills, night bids us rest.

To whom thus Eve with perfect beauty' adorn'd. My Author and Disposer, what thou bidst Unargued I obey ; so God ordains ; God is thy law, thou mine : to know no more Is woman's happiest knowledge and her praise. With thee conversing I forget all time; All seasons and their change, all please alike. 640 Sweet is the breath of morn, her rising sweet, With charm of earliest birds; pleasant the sun, When first on this delightful land he spreads His orient beams, on herb, tree, fruit, and flower, Glist'ring with dew; fragrant the fertile earth After soft show'rs : and sweet the coming on Of grateful evening mild; then silent night With this her solemn bird, and this fair moon. And these the gems of Heav'n, her starry train : But neither breath of morn, when she ascends 6 co With charm of earliest birds; nor rising sun On this delightful land; nor herb, fruit, flower, Glist'ring with dew ; nor fragrance after showers; Nor grateful evening mild; nor silent night With this her solemn bird, nor walk by moon, Or glittering star-light without thee is sweet. But wherefore all night long shine these ? For whom This glorious sight, when sleep hath shut all eyes VOL. I. Y

To whom our general ancestor reply'd. Daughter of God and Man, accomplisn'd Eve, These have their course to finish round the earth. By morrow evening, and from land to land 66 I In order, though to nations yet unborn, Minist'ring light prepar'd, they set and rise; Lest total darkness should by night regain Her old possession, and extinguish life In nature and all things, which these soft fires Not only' enlighten, but with kindly heat Of various influence foment and warm. Temper or nourish, or in part shed down 670 Their stellar virtue on all kinds that grow On earth, made hereby apter to receive Perfection from the sun's more potent ray. These then, though unbeheld in deep of night, Shine not in vain; nor think, though men were none, That Heav'n would want spectators, God want praise :

Millions of spiritual creatures walk the earth Unseen, both when we wake, and when we sleep: All these with ceaseless praise his works behold Both day and night: how often from the steep 680 Of echoing hill or thicket have we heard Celestial voices to the midnight air, Sole, or responsive each to other's note, Singing their great Creator ? Oft in bands While they keep watch, or nightly rounding walk With heav'nly touch of instrumental sounds In full harmonic number join'd, their songs

$ 54

Divide the night, and lift our thoughts to Heaven. Thus talking hand in hand alone they pass'd On to their blissful bow'r; it was a place 600 Chos'n by the soy'reign Planter, when he fram'd All things to Man's delightful use; the roof Of thickest covert was inwoven shade Laurel and myrtle, and what higher grew Of firm and fragrant leaf; on either side Acanthus, and each odorous bushy shrub Fenc'd up the verdant wall; each beauteous flower. Iris all hues, roses, and jessamine Rear'd high their flourish'd heads between, and wrought Mosaic : underfoot the violet. 700 Crocus, and hyacinth with rich inlay Broider'd the ground, more colour'd than with stone Of costliest emblem : other creature here. Beast, bird, insect, or worm, durst enter none; Such was their awe of Man. In shadier bower More sacred and sequester'd, though but feign'd, Pan or Sylvanus never slept, nor Nymph, Nor Faunus haunted. Here in close recess. With flowers, garlands, and sweet-smelling herbs Espoused Eve deck'd first her nuptial bed, 710 And heav'nly quires the hymenzan sung, What day the genial Angel to our sire Brought her in naked beauty more adorn'd, More lovely than Pandora, whom the Gods Endow'd with all their gifts, and O too like

Y 2

In sad event, when to th' unwiser son

Of Japhet brought by Hermes, she ensnar'd Mankind with her fair looks, to be aveng'd On him who had stole Iove's authentic fire.

Thus at their shady lodge arriv'd, both stood, 720 Both turn'd, and under open sky ador'd The God that made both sky, air, earth, and heaven, Which they beheld, the moon's resplendent globe, And starry pole : Thou also mad'st the night, Maker omnipotent, and thou the day. Which we in our appointed work employ'd Have finish'd, happy in our mutual help And nutual love, the crown of all our blist Ordain'd by thee, and this delicious place For us too large, where thy abundance wants 730 Partakers, and uncropt falls to the ground. But thou hast promis'd from us two a race To fill the earth, who shall with us extol Thy goodness infinite, both when we wake, And when we seek, as now, thy gift of sleep.

This said unanimous, and other rites Observing none, but adoration pure Which God likes best, into their inmost bower Handed they went; and eas'd the putting off These troublesome disguises which we wear, 740 Straight side by side were laid; nor turn'd I ween Adam from his fair spouse, nor Eve the rites Mysterious of connubial love refus'd: Whatever hypocrites austerely talk Of purity and place and innocence, Defaming as impure what God declares Pure, and commands to some, leaves free to all. Our Maker bids increase ; who bids abstain But our Destroyer, foe to God and Man? Hail wedded Love, mysterious law, true source 750 Of human offspring, sole propriety In Paradise of all things common else. By thee adult'rous lust was driv'n from men Among the bestial herds to range; by thee Founded in reason, loyal, just and pure, Relations dear, and all the charities Of father, son, and brother first were known. Far be' it, that I should write thee sin or blame, Or think thee unbefitting holiest place, Perpetual fountain of domestic sweets, 769 Whose bed is undefil'd and chaste pronounc'd, Present, or past, as saints and patriarchs us'd. Here love his golden shafts employs, here lights His constant lamp, and waves his purple wings, Reigns here and revels; not in the bought smile Of harlots, loveless, joyless, unendear'd, Casual fruition; nor in court amours, Mix'd dance, or wanton mask, or midnight ball, Or serenade, which the stary'd lover sings To his proud fair, best quitted with disdain. 770 These lull'd by nightingales embracing slept, And on their naked limbs the flow'ry roof Show'r'd roses, which the morn repair'd. Sleep on, Blest pair; and O yet happiest, if ye seek No happier state, and know to know no more.

Now had night measur'd with her shadowy cone

Half way up hill this vast sublunar vault, And from their ivory port the Cherubim Forth issuing at th' accustom'd hour stood arm'd To their night watches in warlike parade, 780 When Ga'riel to his next in pow'r thus spake.

Uzziel, half these draw off, and coast the south With strictest watch; these other wheel the north; Our circuit meets full west. As flame they part, Half wheeling to the shield, half to the spear. From these, two strong and subtle Spi'rits he call'd That near him stood, and gave them thus in charge-

Ithuriel and Zephon, with wing'd speed Search through this garden, leave unsearch'd n nook:

But chiefly where those two fair creatures lodge, 75 Now laid perhaps asleep secure of harm. This evening from the sun's decline arriv'd Who tells of some infernal Spirit seen Hitherward bent (who could have thought?) escap The bars of Hell, on errand bad no doubt : Such where ye find, seize fast, and hither bring.

So saying, on he led his radiant files, Dazzling the moon; these to the bow'r direct In search of whom they sought: him there th found

Squat like a toad, close at the ear of Eve, 8 Assaying by his devilish art to reach The organs of her fancy', and with them forge Illusions as he list, phantasms and dreams, Or if, inspiring venom, he might tant Th' animal spirits that from pure blood arise Like gentle breaths from rivers pure, thence raise At least distemper'd, discontented thoughts, Vain hopes, vain aims, inordinate desires, Blown up with high conceits ingend'ring pride. Him thus intent Ithuriel with his spear 810 Touch'd lightly ; for no falshood can endure Touch of celestial temper, but returns Of force to its own likeness : up he starts Discover'd and surpris'd. As when a spark Lights on a heap of nitrous powder, laid Fit for the tun some magazine to store Against a rumour'd war, the smutty grain With sudden blaze diffus'd inflames the air : So started up in his own shape the Fiend. Back stept those two fair Angels half amaz'd 820 So sudden to behold the grisly king ; Yet thus, unmov'd with fear, accost him soon.

Which of those rebel Spi'rits adjudg'd to Hell Com'st thou, escap'd thy prison ? and transform'd, Why sat'st thou like an enemy in wait, Here watching at the head of these that sleep ?

Know ye not then, said Satan fill'd with scorn, Know ye not me? Ye knew me once no mate For you, there sitting where ye durst not soar: Not to know me argues yourselves unknown, 830 The lowest of your throng; or if ye know, Why ask ye, and superfluous begin Your message, like to end as much in vain? To whom thus Zephon, answ ring scorn with scora. Think not, revolted Spi'rit, thy shape the Or undiminis'd brightness to be known, As when thou stood'st in Heav'n uprigh That glory then, when thou no more we Departed from thee'; and thou resemble Thy sin and place of doom obscure and But come, for thou, be sure, shalt give a To him who sent us, whose charge is to This place inviolable, and these from ha

So spake the Cherub; and his grave r Severe in youthful beauty, added grace Invincible : abash'd the Devil stood, And felt how awful goodness'is, and sav Virtue' in her shape how lovely ; saw, a His loss ; but chiefly to find here observ His lustre visibly impair'd ; yet seem'd Undaunted. If I must contend, said h Best with the best, the sender not the se Or all at once ; more glory will be won, Or less be lost. Thy fear, said Zephon Will save us trial what the least can do Single against thee wicked, and thence

The Fiend replied not, overcome with But like a proud steed rein'd, went haug Champing his iron curb : to strive or fly He held it vain ; awe from above had qu His heart, not else dismay'd. Now drey The western point, where those half-round Just met, and closing stood in squadron .Awaiting next command. To whom

:El

жŧ,

13

.

εį

Strates -

PARADISE LOST.

Gabriel from the front thus call'd aloud. O friends, I hear the tread of nimble feet Hasting this way, and now by glimpse discern Ithuriel and Zephon through the shade, And with them comes a third of regal port, But faded splendor wan; who by his gait 870 And fierce demeanour seems the prince of Hell, Not likely to part hence without contest; Stand firm, for in his look defiance low'rs.

He scarce had ended, when those two approach'd, And brief related whom they brought, where found, How busied, in what form and posture couch'd.

To whom with stern regard thus Gabriel spake. Why hast thou, Satan, broke the bounds prescrib'd To thy transgressions, and disturb'd the charge Of others, who approve not to transgress 880 By thy example, but have pow'r and right To question thy bold entrance on this place; Employ'd it seems to violate sleep, and those Whose dwelling God hath planted here in bliss ?

. To whom thus Satan with contemptuous brow. Gabriel, thou had'st in heav'n th' esteem of wise, And such I held thee; but this question ask'd Puts me in doubt. Lives there who loves his pain? Who would not, finding way, break loose from Hell, Though thither doom'd? Thou would'st thyself, no doubt, 890

- And boldly venture to whatever place
- Farthest from pain, where thou might st hope to change
- Torment with ease, and soonest recompense

PARADISE LOST.

Dole with delight, which in this place I sought; To thee no reason, who know'st only good, But evil hast not try'd: and wilt object His will who bound us? Let him surer bar His iron gates, if he intends our stay In that dark durance: thus much what was ask'd. The rest is true, they found me where they say; 900 But that implies not violence or harm.

Thus he in scorn. The warlike Angel movid. Disdainfully half smiling thus reply'd. O loss of one in Heav'n to judge of wise, <sup>4</sup> Since Satan fell, whom folly overthrew, And now returns him from his prison scap'd, Gravely in doubt whether to hold them wise Or not, who ask what boldness brought him hither Unlicens'd from his bounds in Hell prescrib'd; So wise he judges it to fly from pain 910 However, and to scape his punishment. So judge thou still, presumptuous, till the wrath, Which thou incurr'st by flying, meet thy flight Sev'nfold, and scourge that wisdom back to Hell, Which taught thee yet no better, that no pain Can equal anger infinite provok'd. But wherefore thou alone? Wherefore with the Came not all Hell broke loose? Is pain to them Less pain, less to be fled? or thou than they Less hardy to endure ? Courageous Chief. 920 The first in flight from pain, hadst thou alleg'd To thy deserted host this cause of flight, Thou surely hadst not come sole fugitive.

PARADISE LOST.

To which the Fiend thus answer'd frowning stern. Not that I less endure, or shrink from pain, Insulting Angel: weil thou know'st I stood Thy fiercest, when in battle to thy aid The blasting volied thunder made all speed, And seconded thy else not dreaded spear. But still thy words at random, as before, 930 Argue thy inexperience what behoves From hard assays and ill successes past A faithful leader, not to hazard all Through ways of danger by himself untry'd : I therefore, I alone first undertook To wing the desolate abyss, and spy This new-created world, whereof in Hell Fame is not silent, here in hope to find Better abode, and my afflicted Powers To settle here on earth, or in mid-air ; 940 Though for possession put to try once more What thou and thy gay legions dare against: Whose easier business were to serve their Lord High up in Heav'n, with songs to hymn his throne, And practis'd distances to cringe, not fight.

To whom the warrior Angel soon reply'd. To say and straight unsay, pretending first Wise to fly pain, professing next the spy, Argues no leader but a lyar trac'd, Satan, and couldst thou faithful add? O name, 950 O sacred name of faithfulness profan'd! Faithful to whom? To thy rebellious crew?

BOOK IV.

Army of Fiends, fit body to fit head, Was this your discipline and faith engag'd, Your military obedience, to dissolve Allegiance to th' acknowledg'd Pow'r supreme? And thou, sly hypocrite, who now wouldst seem Patron of liberty, who more than thou Once fawn'd, and cring'd, and servilely ador'd Heav'n's awful Monarch ? Wherefore but in hope To dispossess him, and thyself to reign? q61 But mark what I arreed thee now, Avaunt; Fly thither whence thou fledst : if from this how Within these hallow'd limits thou appear. Back to th' infernal pit I drag thee chain'd, And seal thee so, as henceforth not to scorn The facile gates of Hell too slightly barr'd. So threaten'd he; but Satan to no threats Gave heed, but waxing more in rage reply'd.

Then when I am thy captive talk of chains, 979 Proud limitary Cherub, but ere then Far heavier load thyself expect to feel From my prevailing arm, though Heaven's King Ride on thy wings, and thou with thy compeets, Us'd to the yoke, draw'st his triumphant wheels In progress through the road of Heav'n star-pavd.

While thus he spake, th' angelic squadron bright Turn'd fiery red, sharp'ning in mooned horns Their phalanx, and began to hem him round With ported spears, as thick as when a field 980 Of Ceres ripe for harvest waving bends 264.

Her bearded grove of ears, which way the wind iways them; the careful ploughman doubting stands, .est on the threshing-floor his hopeful sheaves 'rove chaff. On th' other side Satan alarm'd Collecting all his might dilated stood, ike Teneriff or Atlas unremov'd : His stature reach'd the sky, and on his crest hat horror plum'd; nor wanted in his grasp What seem'd both spear and shield : now dreadful deeds 999 Might have ensued, nor only Paradise n this commotion, but the starry cope Of Heav'n perhaps, or all the elements At least had gone to wreck, disturb'd and torn With violence of this conflict, had not soon Th' Eternal to prevent such horrid fray Jung forth in Heav'n his golden scales, yet seen Betwixt Astrea and the Scorpion sign, Wherein all things created first he weigh'd, The pendulous round earth with balanc'd air 1000 n counterpoise, now ponders all events, lattles and realms : in these he put two weights The sequel each of parting and of fight; The latter quick up flew, and kick'd the beam; Which Gabriel spying, thus bespake the Fiend. Satan, I know thy strength, and thou know'st. mine. Neither our own but giv'n; what folly then To boast what arms can do? Since thine no more

VOL. I.

z

Than Heav'n permits, normine, though doubled now To trample thee as mire: for proof look up, 1010 And read thy lot in yon celestial sign,

Where thou art weigh'd, and shewn how light, how weak,

If thou resist. The Fiend look'd up, and knew His mounted scale aloft: nor more; but fled Murm'ring, and with him fled the shades of night.

END OF THE FOURTH BOOK.

BOOK V.

THE ARGUMENT. '

Morning approach'd. Eve relates to Adam her troublesome dream : he likes it not, yet comforts her : They come forth to their day-labours: Their morning hymn at the door of their bower. God to render man inexcusable sends Raphael to admonish him of his obedience, of his free estate, of his enemy near at hand, who he is, and why his enemy, and whatever else may avail Adam to know. Raphael comes down to Paradise, his appearance described, his coming discerned by Adam afar off sitting at the door of his bower; he goes out to meet him, brings him to his lodge, entertains him with the choicest fruits of Paradise got together by Eve ; their discourse at table : Raphael performs his message, minds Adam of his state and of his enemy ; relates at Adam's request who that enemy is, and how he came to be so, beginning from his first revolt in Heaven, and the occasion thereof ; how he drew his legions after him to the parts of the north, and there incited them to rebel with him, persuading all but only Abdiela Seraph, who in argument dissuades and opposes him, then forsakes him.

NOW morn her rosy steps in th' eastern clime Advancing, sow'd the earth with orient pearl, When Adam wak'd, so custom'd, for his sleep Was airy light from pure digestion bred, And temp'rate vapours bland, which th' only sound Of leaves and fuming rills, Aurora's fan, Lightly dispers'd, and the shrill matin song Of birds on every bough; so much the more His wonder was to find unwaken'd Eve With tresses discompos'd, and glowing cheek, 10 As through unquiet rest: he on his side Leaning half rais'd, with looks of cordial love

PARADISE LOST.

Hung over her enamour'd, and beheld Beauty, which whether waking or asleep, Shot forth peculiar graces; then with voice Mild, as when Zephyrus on Flora breathes, Her hand soft touching, whisper'd thus. Awake My fairest, my espous'd, my latest found, Heav'n's last best gift, my ever new delight, Awake; the morning shines, and the fresh field 10 Calls us; we lose the prime, to mark how spring Our tender plants, how blows the citron grove, What drops the myrrh, and what the balmy reed, How nature paints her colours, how the bee Sits on the bloom extracting liquid sweet.

Such whisp'ring wak'd her, but with startled 590 On Adam, whom embracing, thus she spake.

O sole in whom my thoughts find all repose My glory, my perfection, glad I see Thy face, and morn return'd; for I this night 10 (Such night till this I never pass'd) have dream'd, If dream'd, not as I oft am wont, of thee, Works of day past, or morrow's next design, But of offence and trouble, which my mind Knew never till this irksome night : methought Close at mine ear one call'd me forth to walk With gentle voice, I thought it thine ; it said, Why sleep'st thou, Eye? Now is the pleasant time, The cool, the silent, save where silence yields To the night-warbling bird, that now awake 40 Tunes sweetest his love-labour'd song; now reigna Full orb'd the moon, and with more pleasing light

Shadowy sets off the face of things : in vain. If none regard; Heav'n wakes with all his eyes, Whom to behold but thee. Nature's desire? In whose sight all things joy, with ravishment Attracted by thy beauty still to gaze. I rose as at thy call, but found thee not : To find thee I directed then my walk ; And on, methought, alone I pass'd through ways 50 That brought me on a sudden to the tree Of interdicted knowledge : fair it seem'd. Much fairer to my fancy than by day : And as I wond'ring look'd, beside it stood One shap'd and wing'd like one of those from Heaven By us oft seen ; his dewy locks distill'd Ambrosia; on that tree he also gaz'd; And O fair plant, said he, with fruit surcharg'd, Deigns none to ease thy load and taste thy sweet, Nor God, nor man ? Is knowledge so despis'd ? 69 Or envy', or what reserve forbids to taste? Forbid who will, none shall from me withhold Longer thy offer'd good, why else set here? This said, he paus'd not, but with vent'rous arm He pluck'd, he tasted; me damp horror chill'd At such bold words youch'd with a deed so bold : But he thus overjoy'd, O fruit divine, Sweet of thyself, but much more sweet thus cropt, Forbidden here, it seems, as only fit For Gods, yet able to make Gods of Men : 70 And why not Gods of Men, since good, the more Communicated, more abundant grows,

PARADISE LOST.

FBOOK T

The author not impair'd, but honour'd more? Here, happy creature, fair angelic Eve, Partake thou also; happy though thou art, Happier thou may'st be, worthier canst not be: Take this, and be henceforth among the Gods Thyself a Goddess, not to earth confin'd. But sometimes in the air, as we, sometimes Ascend to Heav'n, by merit thine, and see · 16 What life the Gods live there, and such live thou. So saying, he drew nigh, and to me held, Ev'n to my mouth of that same fruit held part Which he had pluck'd; the pleasant sayoury smell So quicken'd appetite, that I, methought, Could not but taste. Forthwith up to the clouds With him I flew, and underneath beheld The earth outstretch'd immense, a prospect wide And various ; wond'ring at my flight and change To this high exaltation ; suddenly My guide was gone, and I, methought, sunk down, And fell asleep; but O how glad I wak'd To find this but a dream ! Thus Eve her night Related, and thus Adam answer'd sad.

Best image of myself and dearer half, The trouble of thy thoughts this night in sleep Affects me equally : nor can I like This uncouth dream, of evil sprung I fear ; Yet evil whence ? In thee can harbour none, Created pure. But know that in the soul roo Are many lesser faculties, that serve Reason as chief ; among these fancy next

Her office holds; of all external things, Which the five watchful senses represent, She forms imaginations, airy shapes, Which reason joining or disjoining, frames All what we' affirm or what deny, and call Our knowledge or opinion; then retires Into her private cell when nature rests. Oft in her absence mimic fancy wakes 118 To imitate her; but misjoining shapes, Wild work produces oft, and most in dreams, Ill matching words and deeds long past or late. Some such resemblances methinks I find Of our last evening's talk. in this thy dream. But with addition strange ; yet be not sad. Evil into the mind of God or Man May come and go, so unapprov'd, and leave No spot or blame behind : which gives me hope That what in sleep thou didst abhor to dream, 120 Waking thou never wilt consent to do. Be not dishearten'd then, nor cloud those looks, That wont to be more cheerful and serene, Than when fair morning first smiles on the world a And let us to our fresh employments rise Among the groves, the fountains, and the flowers That open now their choicest bosom'd smells, Reserv'd from night, and kept for thee in store. . So cheer'd he his fair spouse, and she was cheer' But silently a gentle tear let fall 130

From either eye, and wip'd them with her hair; Two other precious drops that ready stood, PARADISE LOST.

Each in their crystal sluice, he ere they fell Kiss'd, as the gracious signs of sweet remore And pious awe, that fear'd to have offended.

So all was clear'd, and to the field they haste. But first, from under shady arbo'rous roof Soon as they forth were come to open sight Of day-spring, and the sun, who scarce up-rises, With wheels yet hovering o'er the ocean brim, 40 Shot parallel to th' earth his dewy ray, Discovering in wide landskip all the east Of Paradise and Eden's happy plains, Lowly they bow'd adoring, and began Their orisons, each morning duly paid In various stile ; for neither various stile Nor holy rapture wanted they to praise Their Maker, in fit strains pronounc'd or sung Unmeditated, such prompt eloquence Flow'd from their lips, in prose or numerous verse, More tuneable than needed lute or harp 156 To add more sweetness! and they thus began.

These are thy glorious works, Parent of good, Almighty, thine this universal frame, Thus wond'rous fair; thyself how wond'rous then! Unspeakable, who sit'st above these Heavens To us invisible, or dimly seen In these thy lowest works; yet these declare Thy goodness beyond thought, and pow'r divine. Speak ye who best can tell, ye sons of light, 160 Angels; for ye behold him, and with songs And choral symphonies, day without night.

Circle his throne rejoicing ; ye in Heaven, On Earth join all ye Creatures to extol Him first, him last, him midst, and without end. Fairest of stars, last in the train of night, If better thou belong not to the dawn, Sure pledge of day, that crown'st the smiling morn With thy bright circlet, praise him in thy sphere, While day arises, that sweet hour of prime. 170 Thou sun, of this great world both eye and soul, Acknowledge him thy greater, sound his praise In thy eternal course, both when thou climb'st, And when high noon hast gain'd, and when thou fall'st.

Moon, that now meets the orient sun, now fly'st, With the fix'd stars, fix'd in their orb that flies. And ye five other wand'ring fires that move In mystic dance not without song, resound His praise, who out of darkness call'd up light. Air, and ye elements, the eldest birth 180 Of Nature's womb, that in guaternion run Perpetual circle, multiform; and mix And nourish all things; let your ceaseless change Vary to our great Maker still new praise. Ye Mists and Exhalations that now rise Fom hill or steaming lake, dusky or grey, Till the sun paint your fleecy skirts with gold, In honour to the world's great Author rise, Whether to deck with clouds th' uncolour'd sky, Or wet the thirsty earth with falling showers, 190 Rising or falling still advance his praise.

PARADISE LOST.

- [ BOOK V.

His praise, ye Winds, that from four quarters blow, Breathe soft or loud; and wave your tops ye Pines, With every plant, in sign of worship wave. Fountains and ye, that warble, as ye flow, Melodious murmurs, warbling tune his praise. Join voices all ye living Souls ; ye Birds, That singing up to Heaven gate ascend, Bear on your wings and in your notes his praise. Ye that in waters glide, and ye that walk 100 The earth, and stately tread, or lowly creep; Witness if I be silent, morn or even, To hill, or valley, fountain, or fresh shade Made vocal by my song, and taught his praise. Hail universal Lord, be bounteous still To give us only good; and if the night Have gather'd ought of evil or conceal'd, Disperse it, as now light dispels the dark.

So pray'd they innocent, and to their thought Firm peace recover'd soon and wonted calm. 310 On to their morning's rural work they haste Among sweet dews and flow'rs; where any row Of fruit-trees over-woody reach'd too far Their pamper'd boughs, and needed hands to check Fruitless embraces : or they led the vine To wed her elm; she spous'd about him twines Her marriageable arms, and with her brings Her dow'r th' adopted clusters, to adorn His barren leaves. Them thus employ'd beheld With pity Heav'n's high king, and to him call'd and Raphael, the sociable Spi'rit, that deign'd To travel with Tobias, and secur'd His marriage with the sev'ntimes-wedded maid.

Raphael, said he, thou hear'st what stir on earth Satan from Hell scap'd through the darksome gulf Hath rais'd in Paradise, and how disturb'd This night the human pair, how he designs In them at once to ruin all mankind. Go therefore, half this day as friend with friend Converse with Adam, in what bow'r or shade 230 Thou find'st him from the heat of noon retir'd. To respite his day-labour with repast. Or with repose; and such discourse bring on, As may advise him of his happy state, Happiness in his pow'r left free to will. Left to his own free will, his will though free, Yet mutable: whence warn him to beware He swerve not too secure: tell him withal His danger, and from whom; what enemy, Late fall'n himself from Heav'n, is plotting now The fall of others from like state of bliss : By violence ? No, for that shall be withstood; But by deceit and lies ; this let him know, Lest wilfully transgressing he pretend Surprisal, unadmonish'd, unforwarn'd.

So spake th' eternal Father, and fulfill'd All instice: nor delay'd the winged Saint After his charge receiv'd; but from among Thousand celestial Ardors, where he stood 249 Veil'd with his gorgeous wings, up springing light Flew through the midst of Heav'n; th' ange is quives.

PARADISE LOST. | BOOK

On each hand parting, to his speed gave way Through all th' empyreal road ; till at the gate Of Ileav'n arriv'd, the gate self-open'd wide Cn golden hinges turning, as by work Divine the sov'reign Architect had fram'd. From hence, no cloud, or, to obstruct his sight, Star interpos'd, however small he sees. Not unconform to other shining globes, Earth and the gard'n of God, with cedars crown'd Above all hills. As when by night the glass s61 Of Galileo, less assur'd, observes Imagin'd lands and regions in the moon : Or pilot, from amidst the Cyclades Delos or Samos first appearing, kens A cloudy spot. Down thither prone in flight He speeds, and through the vast ethereal sky Sails between worlds and worlds, with steady wing Now on the polar winds, then with quick fan Winnows the buxom air : till within soar 270 Of tow'ring eagles, to' all the fowls he seems A Phœnix, gaz'd by all, as that sole bird, When to inshrine his reliques in the sun's Bright temple, to Egyptian Thebes he flies. At once on th' eastern cliff of Paradise He lights, and to his proper shape returns A Seraph wing'd; six wings he wore, to shade His lineaments divine ; the pair that clad Each shoulder broad, came mantling o'er his breast With regal ornament; the middle pair 284 Girt like a starry zone his waist, and round

Skirted his loins and thighs with downy gold And colours dipt in Heav'n ; the third his feet Shalow'd from either heel with feather'd mail. Sky-tinctur'd grain. Like Maria's son he stood. And shook his plumes, that heav'nly fragrance fill'd The circuit wide. Straight knew him all the bands Of Angels under watch; and to his state, And to his message high in honour rise ; 289 For on some message high they guess'd him bound, Their glittering tents he pass'd, and now is come Into the blissful field, through groves of myrrh, And flow'ring odours, cassia, nard, and balm; A wilderness of sweets ; for Nature here Wanton'd as in her prime, and play'd at will Her virgin fancies, pouring forth more sweet, Wild above rule or art; enormous bliss. Him through the spicy forest onward come Adam discern'd, as in the door he sat Of his cool bow'r, while now the mounted sun 300 Shot down direct his fervid rays to warm Earth's inmost womb, more warmth than Adam needs :

And Eve within, due at her hour prepar'd For dinner savoury fruits, of taste to please True appetite, and not disrelish thirst Of necta'rous draughts between, from milky stream, Berry or grape: to whom thus Adam call'd.

Haste hither Eve, and worth thy sight behold Eastward among those trees, what glorious shape Comes this way moving; seems another morn 310 Ris'n on mid-noon; some great beheast from Neaver VOL. 1.

PARADISE LOST.

To us perhaps he brings, and will vouchsafe This day to be our guest. But go with speed, And what thy stores contain, bring forth and pour Abundance, fit to honour and receive Our heav'nly stranger: well we may afford Our givers their own gifts, and large bestow From large bestow'd, where Nature multiplies Her fertile growth, and by disburd'ning grows More fruitful, which instructs us not to spare. 320

To whom thus Eve. Adam, earth's hallow'd mould, Ot God inspir'd, smull store will serve, where store, All seasons, ripe for use hangs on the stalk; Save what by frugal storing firmness gains To nourish, and superfluous moist consumes: But I will haste, and from each bough and brake, Each plant and juiciest gourd, will pluck such choice To entertain our Angel guest, as he Beholding shall confess, that here on Earth God hath dispens'd his bounties as in Heaven, 330

So saying, with dispatchful looks in haste She turns, on hospitable thoughts intent What choice to choose for delicacy best, What order, so contriv'd as not to mix Tastes, not well join'd, inelegant, but bring Taste after taste upheld with kindliest change; Bestirs her then, and from each tender stalk Whatever Earth all-bearing mother yields In India East or West, or middle shore In Pontus or the Punic coast, or where Alcinous reign'd, fruit of all kinds, in cost Rough or smooth rin'd, or bearded busk, or well. She gathers, tribute large, and on the board Heaps with unsparing hand; for drink the grape She crushes, inoffensive must, and meaths From many a berry', and from sweet kernels press'd She tempers dulcet creams, nor these to hold Wants her fit vessels pure, then strews the ground With rose and odours from the shrub unfum'd.

Mean while our primitive great sire, to meet 330 His God-like guest, walks forth, without more train Accompanied than with his own complete Perfections : in himself was all his state. More solemn than the tedious pomp that waits On princes, when their rich retinue long Of horses led, and grooms besmear'd with gold, Dazzles the crowd, and sets them all agape. Nearer his presence Adam though not aw'd, Yet with submiss approach and reverence meek, As to' a superior nature, bowing low, 160 Thus said. Native of Heav'n, for other place None can than Heav'n such glorious shape contain; Since by descending from the thrones above, Those happy places thou hast deign'd a while To want, and honour these, youchsafe with us Two' only, who yet by sov'reign gift possess This spacious ground, in yonder shady bower To rest, and what the garden choicest bears To sit and taste, till this meridian heat Be over, and the sun more cool decline. 37•

Whom thus th' angelic Virtue answer'd mild. Adam, I therefore came, nor art thou such

A a. 2

ļ

Created, or such place hast here to dv As may not oft invite, though Spi'rits To visit thee; lead on then where th O'ershades; for these mid-hours, till I have at will. So to the sylvan lodge They came, that like Pomona's arbou With flow'rets deck'd and fragrant sn Undeck'd save with herself, more low Than Wood-Nymph, or the fairest G Of three that in mount Ida naked str Stood to' entertain her guest from He She needed, virtue roof; no thought Alter'd her cheek. On whom the Ar Bestow'd, the holy salutation us'd Long after to blest Mary, second Eve

Hail Mother of Mankind, whose fru Shall fill the world more numerous wi Than with these various fruits the tre Have heap'd this table. Rais'd of gr Their table was, and mossy seats had And on her ample square from side to All autumn pil'd, though spring and Danc'd hand in hand. A while discou No fear lest dinner cool; when thus b Heav'nly stranger, ple: Our author. These bounties, which our Nourisher All perfect good, unmeasur'd out, de To us for food and for delight hath c The earth to yield; unsavoury food r To spiritual natures; only this I kn That one celestial Father gives to all.

To whom the Angel. Therefore what he gives (Whose praise be ever sung) to Man in part Spiritual, may of purest Spi'rits be found No' ingrateful food : and food alike those pure Intelligential substances require. As doth your rational; and both contain Within them every lower faculty 410 Of sense, whereby they hear, see, smell, touch, taste, Tasting concoct, digest, assimilate, And corporeal to incorporeal turn. For know, whatever was created, needs To be sustain'd and fed; of elements The grosser feeds the purer, earth the sea, Earth and the sea feed air. the air those fires Ethereal, and as lowest first the moon ; Whence in her visage round those spots, unpurg'd Vapours not vet into her substance turn'd. 420 Nor doth the moon no nourishment exhale From her moist continent to higher orbs. The sun, that light imparts to all, receives From all his alimental recompense In humid exhalations, and at even Sups with the ocean. Though in Heav'n the trees Of life ambrosial fruitage bear, and vines Yield nectar; though from off the boughs each morn We brush mellifluous dews, and find the ground Cover'd with pearly grain : yet God hath here 430 Varied his bounty so with new delights, As may compare with Heaven; and to taste

A 2 3

Think not I shall be nice. So down they sat, And to their viands fell; nor seemingly The Angel, nor in mist, the common gloss Of Theologians; but with keen dispatch Of real hunger, and concoctive heat To transubstantiate : what redounds, transpires Through Spi'rits with ease; nor wonder; if by fire Of sooty coal th' empyric alchemist Can turn, or holds it possible to turn, Metals of drossiest ore to perfect gold As from the mine. Mean while at table Eve Minister'd naked, and their flowing cups With pleasant liquors crown'd : O innocence Deserving Paradise! if ever, then, Then had the sons of God excuse to have been Enamour'd at that sight : but in those hearts Love unlibidinous reign'd, nor jealousy Was understood, the injur'd lover's Hell. 450 Thus when with meats and drinks they had suffic'd, Not burden'd nature, sudden mind arose In Adam, not to let th' occasion pass Giv'n him by this great conference to know Of things above his world, and of their being -Who dwell in Heav'n, whose excellence he saw Transcend his own so far, whose radiant forms Divine effulgence, whose high pow'r so far Exceeded human, and his wary speech Thus to th' empyreal minister he fram'd. 460

Inhabitant with God, now know I well Thy favour, in this honour done to Man. Under whose lowly roof thou hast vouchsaf'd To enter, and these earthly fruits to taste, Food not of Angels, yet accepted so, As that more willingly thou couldst not seem At Heav'n's high feasts to' have fed: yet what compare?

To whom the winged Hierach reply'd. O Adam, one Almighty is, from whom All things proceed, and up to him return, 470 If not depray'd from good, created all Such to perfection, one first matter all, Endued with various forms, various degrees Of substance, and in things that live, of life; But more refin'd, more spiritous, and pure, As nearer to him plac d or nearer tending Each in their several active spheres assign'd. Till body up to spirit work, in bounds Proportion'd to each kind. So from the root Springs lighter the green stalk, from thence the leaves 480 More airy, last the bright consummate flower Spirits odorous breathes : flow'rs and their fruit. Man's nourishment, by gradual scale sublim'd, To vital spi'rits aspire, to animal. To intellectual; give both life and sense. Fancy and understanding ; whence the soul Reason receives, and reason is her being, Discursive, or intuitive; discourse Is oftest yours, the latter most is ours, Differing but in degree, of kind the same. 490 Wonder not then, what God for you saw good If I refuse not, but convert, as you, To proper substance: time may come, when Men With Angels may participate, and find No inconvenient di'et, nor too light far ; And from these corporal nutriments perhaps Your bodies may at last turn all to spirit, Improv'd by tract of time, and wing'd ascend Ethereal, as we, or may at choice Here or in heav'nly Paradises dwell; 500 If ye be found obedient, and retain Unalterably firm his love entire, Whose progeny you are. Mean while enjoy Your fill what happiness this happy state Can comprehend, incapable of more.

To whom the patriarch of mankind reply'd. O favourable Spi'rit, propitious guest, Well hast thou taught the way that might direct Our knowledge, and the scale of nature set From centre to circumference, whereon 5<sup>1</sup> In contemplation of created things By steps we may ascend to God. But say, What meant that caution join'd, If ye be found Obedient? Can we want obedience then To him, or possibly his love desert, Who form'd us from the dust, and plac'd us here Full to the utmost measure of what bliss Human desires can seek or apprehend ?

To whom the Angel. Son of Heav'n and Eart Attend : That thou art happy, owe to God; 51

$ 84

That thou continuest such, owe to thyself, That is, to thy obedience; therein stand. This was that caution giv'n thee; be advis'd. God made thee perfect, not immutable ; And good he made thee, but to persev 🐲 He left it in thy pow'r; ordain'd thy will By nature free, not over-rul'd by fate Inextricable, or strict necessity : Our voluntary service he requires, Not our necessitated; such with him Finds no acceptance, nor can we find ; for how Can hearts, not free, be try'd whether they serve Willing or no, who will but what they must By destiny, and can no other choose ? Myself and all th' angelic host, that stand In sight of God enthron'd, our happy state Hold, as you yours, while our obedience holds ; On other surety none; freely we serve, Because we freely love, as in our will To love or not ; in this we stand or fall : 540 And some are fall'n, to disobedience f....'n, And so from Heav'n to deepest Hell; O fall From what high state of bliss into what woe !

To whom our great progenitor. Thy words Attentive, and with more delighted ear, Divine instructor, I have heard, than when Cherubic songs by night from neighb'ring hills Aereal music send : nor knew I not To be both will and deed created free; Yet that we never shall forget to love Our Maker, and obey him whose command Single is yet so just, my constant thoughts Assur'd me', and still assure : though what the tell'st

Hath pa. • in Heav'n, some doubt within me mov But more desire to hear, if thou consent, The full relation, which must needs be strange, Worthy of sacred silence to be heard: And we have yet large day, for scarce the sun Hath finish'd half his journey, and scarce begins His other half in the great zone of Heaven. 560

Thus Adam made request; and Raphaël After short pause assenting, thus began.

High matter thou injoins't me', O prime of me Sad task and hard: for how shall I relate To human sense th' invisible exploits Of warring Spirits ? How without remorse The ruin of so many glorious once And perfect while they stood ? How last unfok The secrets of another world, perhaps Not lawful to reveal; yet for thy good This is dispens'd; and what surmounts the r Of human sense, I shall delineate so, By likening spiritual to corporal forms, As may express them best; though what if Be but the shadow f Heav'n, and things t Each to' other like, more than on earth is th

As yet this world was not, and Chaos will Reign'd where these Heav'ns now roll, whe now rests Upon her centre pois'd : when on a day (For time, though in eternity, apply'd 580 To motion, measures all things durable By present, past, and future) on such day As Heav'n's great year brings forth, th' impyreal host Of Angels by imperial summons call'd, Innumerable before th' Almighty's throne Forthwith from all the ends of Heav'n appear'd Under their Hierarchs in orders bright : Ten thousand thousand ensigns high advanc'd, Standards and gonfalons 'twixt van and rear Stream in the air, and for distinction serve 590 Of Hierarchies, of orders, and degrees : Or in their glittering tissues bear imblaz'd Holy memorials, acts of zeal and love Recorded eminent. Thus when in orbs Of circuit inexpressible they stood, Orb within orb, the Father infinite, By whom in bliss imbosom'd sat the Son. Amidst as from a flaming mount, whose top

Brightness had made invisible, thus spake. Hear all ye Angels, progeny of light, 600

Thrones, Dominations, Princedoms, Virtues, Powers,

Hear my decree, which unrevok'd shall stand. This day I have begot whom I declare My only Son, and on this holy hill Him have anointed, whom ye now behold At my right hand; your head I him appoint; And by myself have sworn to him shall All knees in Heav'n, and shall confess Under his great vice-gerent reign abide United as one individual soul For ever happy: Him who disobeys, Me disobeys, breaks union, and that da Cast out from God and blessed vision, f Into' utter darkness, deep ingulf'd, his 1 Ordain'd without redemption, without e

So spake th' Omnipotent, and with hi All seem'd well pleas'd; all seem'd, but w That day, as other solemn days, they spe In song and dance about the sacred hill Mystical dance, which yonder starry sph Of planets and of fix'd in all her wheels Resembles nearest, mazes intricate, Eccentric, intervolv'd, yet regular Then most, when most irregular they s And in their motions harmony divine So smooths her charming tones, that Goc Listens delighted. Evening now approa (For we have also' our evening and our r We ours for change delectable, not need Forthwith from dance to sweet repast th Desirous; all in circles as they stood, Tables are set, and on a sudden pil'd With Angels food, and rubied nectar flov In pearl, in diamond, and massy gold, Fruit of delicious vines, the growth of He On flow'rs repos'd and with fresh flow'ret

288

They eat, they drink, and in communion sweet Quaff immortality and joy, secure Of surfeit where full measure only bounds Excess, before th' all-bounteous King, who show'r'd With copious hand, rejoicing in their joy. 641 Now when ambrosial night with clouds exhal'd From that high mount of God, whence light and shade Spring both, the face of brightest Heav'n had chang'd To grateful twilight (for night comes not there In darker veil) and roseate dews dispos'd All but th' unsleeping eyes of God to rest; Wide over all the plain, and wider far Than all this globous earth in plain outspread, (Such are the courts of God) th' angelic throng, 6;0 Dispers'd in bands and files, their camp extend By living streams among the trees of life, Pavillions numberless, and sudden rear'd, Celestial tabernacles, where they slept Fann'd with cool winds; save those who in their · * * * course

Melodious hymns about the sov'reign throne Alternate all night long: but not so wak'd Satan; so call him now, his former name Is heard no more in Heav'n; he of the first, If not the first Arch-Angel, great in power, 660 In favour and pre-eminence, yet fraught With envy' against the Son of God, that day Honour'd by his great F ather, and proclaim'd Messiah King anointed, could not bear Through pride that sight, and thought himself: impair'd.

VOL. I.

Deep malice thence conceiving and disdain, Soon as midnight brought on the dusky hour Friendliest to sleep and silence, he resolv'd With all his legions to dislodge, and leave Unworshipp'd, unobey'd the throne supreme 670 Contemptuous, and his next subordinate Awak'ning, thus to him in secret spake.

Sleep'st thou, Companion dear, what sleep can close

Thy eye-lids ≥ and remember'st what decree Of yesterday, so late hath pass'd the lips. Of Heav'n's Almighty. Thou to me thy thoughts Wast wont, I mine to thee was wont to' impart, Both waking we were one; how then can now Thy sleep dissent ≥ New laws thou seest impos'd; New laws from him who reigns, new minds may raise

In us who serve, new counsels, to debate What doubtful may ensue: more in this place To utter is not safe. Assemble thou Of all those myriads which we lead the chief; Tell them that by command, ere yet dim night Her shadowy cloud withdraws, I am to haste, And all who under me their banners wave, Homeward with flying march where we possess The quarters of the north; there to prepare Fit entertainment to receive our king The great Messiah, and his new commands, Who speedily through all the hierarchies Intends to pass triumphant, and give laws.

So spake the false Arch-Angel, and infus'd Bad influence into th' unwary breast Of his associate: he together calls, Or several one by one, the regent Powers, Under him regent: tells; as he was taught, That the most High commanding, now ere night, Now ere dim night had disincumber'd Heav'n, 700 The great hierarchal standard was to move; Tells the suggested cause, and casts between-Ambiguous words and jealousies; to sound Or taint integrity : but all obey'd The wonted signal, and superior voice Of their great potentate; for great indeed His name, and high was his degree in Heaven; His count'nance, as the morning star that guides The starry flock, allur'd them, and with lies Drew after him the third part of Heav'n's host. 710 Mean while th' eternal eye, whose sight discerns Abstrusest thoughts, from forth his holy mount And from within the golden lamps that burn Nightly before him, saw without their light Rebellion rising, saw in whom, how spread Among the sons of morn, what multitudes Were banded to oppose his high decree; And similing to his only Son thus said.

Son, thou in whom my glory I behold In full resplendence, Heir of all my might, Nearly it now concerns us to be sure Of our omnipotence, and with what arms We mean to hold what anciently we claim Of deity or empire; such a foe

720

Bb2

Is rising, who intends to' erect his throne Equal to ours, throughout the spacious north; Nor so content, hath in his thought to try In battle, what our pow'r is, or our right. Let us advise, and to this hazard draw With speed what force is left, and all employ 730 In our defence, lest unawares we lose This our high place, our sanctuary, our hill.

To whom the Son with calm aspéct and clear, Lightning divine, ineffable, serene, Made answer, Mighty Father, thou thy foes Justly hast in derision, and secure Laugh'st at their vain designs and tumults vain, Matter to me of glory, whom their hate Illustrates, when they see all regal power Giv'n me to quell their pride, and in event 740 Know whether I be dext'rous to subdue The rebels, or be found the worst in Heav'n.

So spake the Son; but Satan with his Powers Far was advanc'd on winged speed, an host Innumerable as the stars of night, Or stars of morning, dew-drops, which the sun Impearls on every leaf and every flower. Regions they pass'd, the mighty regencies Of Seraphim and Potentates and Thrones In their triple degrees; regions to which 750 All thy dominion, Adam, is no more Than what this garden is to all the earth, And all the sea, from one entire globose Stretch'd into longitude; which having pass'd

At length into the limits of the north They came, and Satan to his royal seat High on a hill, far blazing, as a mount Rais'd on a mount, with pyramids and towers From diamond quarries hewn, and rocks of gold : The palace of great Lucifer (so call 760 That structure in the dialect of men Interpreted) which not long after, he Affecting all equality with God, In imitation of that mount whereon Messiah was declar'd in sight of Heaven. The Mountain of the Congregation call'd; For thither he assembled all his train. . Pretending so commanded to consult About the great reception of their king Thither to come, and with calumnious heart Of counterfeited truth thus held their ears. Thrones, Dominations, Princedoms, Virtues, Powers.

If these magnific titles yet remain Not merely titular, since by decree Another now hath to himself ingross'd All pow'r and us eclips'd under the name Of King anointed, for whom all this haste Of midnight march, and hurried meeting here, This only to consult how we may best With what may be devis'd of honours new 780 Receive him coming to receive from us Knee-tribute yet unpaid, prostration vile, Too much to one, but double how indur'd,

PARADISE LOST.

BOOK V.

To one and to his image now proclaim'd? But what if better counsels might erect Our minds, and teach us to cast off this yoke? Will ye submit your necks, and choose to bend The supple knee? Ye will not, if I trust To know ve right, or if ye know yourselves Natives an 1 sons of Heav'n possess'd before 790 By none, and if not equal all, yet free, Equally free; for orders and degrees Tar not with liberty. but well consist. Who can in reason then or right assume Monarchy over such as live by right His equals, if in pow'r and splendour less, In freedom equal? Or can introduce Law and edict on us, who without law Err not ? Much less for this to be our Lord. And look for adoration to th' abuse 800 Of those imperial titles, which assert Our being ordain'd to govern, not to serve.

Thus far his bold discourse without controul Had audience, when among the Seraphim Abdiel, than whom none with more zeal ador'd 'The Deity', and divine commands obey'd, Stood up, and in a flame of zeal severe The current of his fury thus oppos'd.

O argument blasphenous, false and proud! Words which no ear ever to hear in Heav'n 810 Expected, least of all from thee, Ingrate, In place thyself so high above thy peers. Canst thou with impious obloquy condemn The just decree of God, pronounc'd and sworr

$94

BOOK V.] PARAD

PARADISE LOST.

That to his only Son by right endued With regal sceptre, every soul in Heaven Shall bend the knee, and in that honour due Confess him rightful King? Unjust, thou say'st, Flady unjust, to bind with laws the free, , And equal over equals to let reign, 820 One over all with unsucceeded power. Shalt thou give law to God, shalt thou dispute With him the points of liberty, who made Thee what thou art, and form'd the Pow'rs of Heaven Such as he pleas'd, and circumscrib'd their being ? Yet by experience taught we know how good, And of our good and of our dignity How provident he is, how far from thought To make us less, beat rather to exalt Our happy state under one head more near 830 United. But to grant it thee unjust, That equal over equals monarch reign: Thyself though great and glorious dost thou count, Or all angelic nature join'd in one, Equal to him begotten Son? by whom As by his Word the mighty Father made All things, even thee; and all the Spi'rits of Heaven By him created in their bright degrees, Crown'd them with glory', and to their glory nam'd Thrones, Dominations, Princedoms, Virtues. Powers. 840 Essential Pow'rs: nor by his reign obscur'd,

But more illustrious made; since he the head One of our number thus reduc'd becomes; 295

PARADISE LOST.

His laws our laws; all honour to him done Returns our own. Cease then his impious rage, And tempt not these; but hasten to appease Th' incensed Father, and th' incensed Son, While pardon may be found in time besought.

So spake the fervent Angel; but his zeal None seconded, as out of season judg'd, 850 Or singular and rash, whereat rejoic'd Th' Apostate, and more haughty thus reply'd. That we were form'd then say'st thou? and the work Of secondary hands, by task transferr'd From Futher to his Son? Strange point and new! Doftrine which we would know whence learn'd: who saw

When this creation was? Remember'st thou Thy making, while the Maker gave thee being ? We know no time when we were not as now ; Know none before us, self-begot, self rais'd 860 By our own quick'ning pow'r, when fatal course Had circled his full orb, the birth mature Of this our native Heav'n, ethereal sons. Our puissance is our own; our own right hand Shall teach us highest deeds, by proof to try Who is our equal: then thou shalt behold Whether by supplication we intend Address, and to begirt th' almighty throne Beseeching or besieging. This report, These tidings carry to th' anointed King : 870 And fly, ere evil intercept thy flight.

He said, and as the sound of waters deep

Hoarse murmur echo'd to his words applause Through the infinite host; nor less for that The flaming Scraph fearless, though alone Incompass'd round with foes, thus answer'd bold.

O alienate from God, O Spi'rit accurs'd, Forsaken of all good; I see thy fall Determin'd, and thy hapless crew involv'd In this perfidious fraud, contagion spread 88. Both of thy crime and punishment : henceforth No more to be troubled how to quit the yoke Of God's Messiah : those indulgent laws Will not be now youchsaf'd; other decrees Against thee are gone forth without recall ; That golden sceptre, which thou didst reject, Is now an iron rod to bruise and break Thy disobedience. Well thou didst advise. Yet not for thy advice or threats I fly These wicked tents devoted, lest the wrath 800 Impendent, raging into sudden flame Distinguish not : for soon expect to feel His thunder on thy head, devouring fire. Then who created thee lamenting learn. When who can uncreate thee thou shalt know.

So spake the Seraph Abdiel faithful found Among the faithless, faithful only he; Among innumerable false, unmov'd, Unshaken, unseduc'd, unterrify'd His loyalty he kept, his love, his zeal; Nor number, nor example with him wrought To swerve from truth, or change his constant mind

---- F----

-----

